SENATE FILIBUSTER PREVENTS ACTION TO LIMIT CAMPAIGN FUNDS; CONGRESS ADJOURNS

DEFY INJUNCTION TO STOP BETTING AT CHICAGO TRACK

Police, Under Direction of State's Attorneys Office, Seize Mutuel Tickets and Cash.

SELLERS AND SOME BETTORS ARRESTED

Action Taken on Search Warrant Despite Writ Obtained by the Jockey Club.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Scenes at the old Washington Park and Harlem race tracks more than 20 years ago were renewed today at the New Washington Park track, when detectives from the office of State's Attorney Crowe, under the protection of a search warrant, raided the betting enclosure, seized clerks and bookmakers, confiscated betting certificates and caused a panic among the 15,000 racegoers.

Jeers and hoots met the invasion of 25 detectives under charge of First Assistant State's Attorney George Gorman. The officials had obtained an injunction directed at State's Attorney Crowe and Gorman restraining them from interfering with the officials of the track or its employes. Gorman said he could get around this by swearing out a search warrant which he did. There was no betting until the fougth race.

Just before the fifth race in which Shasta Love, running in the purple and gold silks of Jimmy McGill of Denver, raced to an easy victory in the $5000 Debutante Stakes, Assistant State's Attorney Gorman returned from Homewood with his search warrant and deputies and invaded the mutuel pavilion.

Bettors Also Arrested.

M. M. Googan of Metropole Hotel, at window 15, was the first arrested and Joe Burr, giving his address the Bryson Hotel, was the second taken. Two patrol-wagons were at the main gate and those arrested were taken to a justice court in Homewooe. Other clerks and a dozen bettors were loaded into the patrol wagons. During this time the crowd vented their feelings in curses and shouts of derision. This stopped all wagering after the fifth race.

The New Washington Park Race course at Homewood opened under many obstacles today. It rained intermittently, a fog obscured vision and among the 15,000 spectators there were 30 detectives from State's Attorney Crowe's office and 100 regular police. Owing to threats that a raid would be staged if the certificate betting system was tried out, track officials obtained an injunction from Judge Ryner between the second and third race and served it on First Assistant State's Attorney George Gorman who had charge of the Crowe force.

It was not until the fourth race that betting began. Twenty-four windows sold certificates and the choices were confined to first place. There was no betting on place or show. It was inscribed "purse fund" and indicated that the bearer had subscribed to a purse for the fourth race "to stimulate horse breeding and racing in the State of Illinois." It releases the Illinois Jockey Club from repayment of the sum.

Politician Heads Club.

County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer, a politician of wide influence, is president of the Jockey Club. He is a Democrat and the stock of the club is held by his friends. State's Attorney Crowe is a Republican and is determined to break up betting which is against the Illinois law. Except for an occasional short meeting at Hawthorne with devious betting, this is the first formal meeting since the old Washington Park track was closed by Mayor Harrison in 1904.

Intimation was given by Jockey Club officials that the modified mutuels would be open again Monday for the sale of "purse distribution receipts."

The form employed at the Washington Park track differs both from the system employed at the Aurora and other Illinois race tracks and from the mutuel machine method of conducting betting, the receipts being worded to designate the money spent for the tickets as a donation subscribed solely as a voluntary donation to the said 'purse fund' for the purpose of stimulating horse breeding and racing in the State of Illinois."

No statement was forthcoming from the State's Attorney as to the course he will take if the mutuel windows are opened to Monday's holiday crowd.

Royalty Sees 180 Planes In Greatest War Show

Sham Battle in Air Before Crowd of 150,000 at London—"Hush-Hush" Machines Make First Public Flight.

LONDON, July 3.—The Kings and Queens of England and Spain and former monarchs of Greece and Portugal witnessed the greatest demonstration of air power in the history of tne world today when 180 fighting planes maneuvered before a crowd of 150,000 persons at Hendon Flying Field.

An item not included in the program was the belated arrival of the Maharajah of Alwar in a blue turban studded with gems. The Marajah's motor car dashed across the field in the wrong direction raising a cloud of dust that enshrouded the four monarchs and their entourages in a murky choking fog.

Several "Hush, hush" planes too kthe air for their first public flights. The details of construction of these are secret.

The Spanish autogyro has been tested publicly before, but it flew today for two hours, with the windmill apparatus on its topside propelling it up and down. The day's sensation, however, was the "Pterodactyl," designed according to the laconic official statement, for aero-dynamic research. It looks like the front end of an airplane with the hindermost parts missing. The crowds gasped at it. It had no tail, and only a body with a tiny 30-horsepower motor in the rear of a sawed-off fuselage. It can remain wobbling in the air on its tiny wings like those of a seagull, while its motor is shut off. The wings are manipulated to turn corners, but not to keep it stationary in space.

Fifty-four fighting machines took the air at once and swept by the royel enclosure at 120 miles an hour, dipping line after line in the royal salute. Then came what the program called "an exhibition of evolutions by a group of two wings of three fighting squadrons of nine airplanes each." The whole sky seemed full of planes engaged in sham fighting, then forming line after line and coming down nine at a time. This is said to be the largest number of planes ever maneuvered at one time.

MOSQUITO STING FOR REMEDY

England to Import Malaria Pests to Use in Paralysis Cases.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 3.—Mosquitoes, spreaders of many deadly diseases, will be imported into England to sting patients under treatment for general paralysis. Only female, malaria infected mosquitoes, will be imported and they will be dieted scientifically so they will always have keen appetites to do their best work.

The plans to import the insects became known when the Hull hospital committee approved the medical officers proposal to bring the "buzzing doctors" from the tropical countries, where they will be collected by the various tropical schools of medicine. It has been found, it was said, that beneficial results were obtained by permitting malaria mosquitoes to sting general paralysis patients.

MOVIE ACTOR TO WED BARNATO'S HEIRESS

Carlyle Blackwell and Mrs. Haxton Figured in Divorce Scandal in 1925.

Copyright, 1926, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, July 3. — Carlyle Blackwell, American movie performer, will be married here July 29 to Mrs. Leah Barnato Haxton, daughter of the late Barney Barnato, multimillionaire diamond magnate, under whose will she received a great fortune, according to a public announcement today. The ceremony will take place at the West End registry office, and William Gardner, former British Consul at New York, will be best man.

Mrs. Haxton has a magnificent flat in Park Lane. She has a famous collection of jewelry and her ropes of pearls are among the finest in the world.

Carlyle Blackwell was married in 1916 to Mrs. Ruth H. Blackwell, who divorced him some years later.

In May, 1925, Sir Alfred Haxton named Blackwell as co-respondent in a divorce action against his wife, alleging that they had lived together for months in a house in Windsor while he was in America.

Barney Barnato died a suicide in 1897, jumping from a London-bound liner as he was returning from South Africa. He left his daughter $4,500,000, an income of $125,000 a year and shares in Barnato Bros valued at $1,250,000.

Barnato came from the poorest quarter of the East Side of London and was of its poorest denizens. His real name was Barnett Isaacs. He made his real start in life when he qualified as a cab driver. Later he peddled clothing in Petticoat Lane. When news came of the discovery of diamonds in South Africa, Barney was one of a number who were inflamed with the desire to go there and pick up the wealth that was supposed to be just waiting for claimants to come along. He and his brother in some manner managed to get money to pay their fare.

In a very few years he was head of a great syndicate, with Cecil Rhodes, which controlled all the mines.

On his famous trip to London in 1894, when he was dined by the Lord Mayor and entertained by Lord Rosebery, his wealth was estimated at $500,000,000, though no one ever knew just where it was.

It was then he began to plan the Park Lane palace in which he was to live. A flamboyant structure, its cost was estimated at $5,000,000. He paid $1,250,000 for the ground and the buildings on it. He tore down the buildings to replace them with the palace he was destined never to occupy, for it was on his return to London to take up residence there, he jumped overboard from the deck of the S. S. Scot off Funchal, Madeira Islands.

BLUE SKY LAW HITS PERPETUAL MOTION ENGINE

Collision Results in State Order Forbidding Rotary Lever Invention Co. to Sell Stock.

CHIEF SALESMAN HERE IS A PAINTER

He Believes That "Percentums" in Power-Without-Fuel Device Will Yield Millions—Ultimately.

The "perpetual motion engine," which, its promoters contend, would "revolutionize mechanical engineering" by supplying unlimited power without fuel, ran against a brake not specified by its inventors yesterday, when the State Securities Department at Jefferson City issued an order against the Rotary Lever Engine Invention Business Co., forbidding further sale of its stock in Missouri, under penalty of criminal prosecution under the blue sky law.

The Rotary Lever Engine Invention Business, according to Gerrit Albers, its St. Louis representative and stock salesman, is properly an Indianapolis corporation operated by C. C. Thorn of Los Angeles. In addition to being inventor of the engine and its 40 odd variations, Thorn is described as president, secretary and treasurer and general manager of the company.

Warning to Public.

It was against him that the order issued by State Securities Commissioner F. T. Stockard was directed. It forbids the concern to make any more attempts to sell stock and states, further, that "the public is warned against investing in any of the stock or securities of this corporation, because all information gathered by this department indicates that the whole scheme is visionary and without financial responsibility behind it." The order followed receipt of complaints by the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis, which charartcrized the proposition as "an irresponsible perpetual motion scheme."

In his room at 3 South Eleventh street, which serves as his domicile and stock selling headquarters, Albers explained the proposition to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday. Albers is a painter and says he is employed at his trade at Hotel Statler. The reason he is a painter, he says, is that he doesn't get any money for selling shares—only he doesn't call them shares; he calls them percentums. He is selling percentums because he himself invested $3000 in the venture and wants to help get the business on a paying basis so he can collect a little interest on his $3000.

Ten Millions for $10,000.

That he will collect interest and plenty of it in time, he declares, he has no doubt. In fact, he assured the reporter that if he cared to invest $5000 he would be safe in counting on a return of $25,000 in very short order. An investment of $10,000, he said, ought to bring a return of $10,000,000 within four years. He also produced literature promising enormous profits to investors and stating that "we present you a business proposition 5000 times greater than any you may know of. Big enough and broad enough to take care of itself under all circumstances."

The reason that profits were bound to be large once the company got going, Albers explained, was that the perpetual motion engine made it possible to turn the wheel of factories, develop electric power, propel railway trains and even condense water from the vapor in the air all without the trouble and expense of firing a boiler. The fuel item, he declared—and exhibited company literature to prove his point—would be eliminated entirely through the principle of a wheel with a continually shifting balance.

Bible Furnished the Idea.

Inventor Thorn, Albers said, got the idea from a passage in the Bible where it says something about a wheel within a wheel, and he has been developing a whole string of inventions from it since about 1914. Here is the way it works—according to Albers, who admits he has never seen one in operation, but goes entirely by the pictures and descriptions sent out by President Secretary-Treasurer-General Manager Thorn.

You have a big wheel and another wheel within it. Between the rims of the two run hollow tubes and in these hollow tubes are heavy metal balls. When you

FOUR MEN NAMED BY INFORMER IN $14,000 ROBBERY

MAN WHO TOLD GOT $300 OF THE LOOT

Police Act on His Confession of Knowledge of Robbery of Union-Easton Trust Co.

With the arrest yesterday of Frank Silsby, 31 years old, of 509 Chestnut street, police announced that they were informed that four men, rather than three, participated in the $14,000 robbery of two boy messengers for the Union-Easton Trust Co. on June 22.

The police informer is a man who has admitted advance knowledge of the robbery and has acknowledged that he received $300 for his share of the loot.

The informant, whose identity is withheld for his own safety, named Silsby and said he was crouching in the robber's automobile when two men stepped from the machine to get the money package. Silsby had been arrested as a suspect in the robbery before and was under $10,000 bond when rearrested. He repeated his denial of any knowledge of the theft. His bond was increased to $20,000, which he promptly furnished.

Fourth Man Still Uncaught.

The informant also named an East Side gangster, whose arrest has been sought, as a party to the robbery. The others, he declared, are Joseph Simon, who was wounded in an encounter with city detectives near Collinsville Thursday, and Anthony Selvaggi, who was killed in the same fight. Simon is under arrest, leaving one man still to be apprehended.

According to detectives, the informer said he learned of the movement of messengers to and from the bank and transmitted his knowledge to Silsby on the promise that he would receive $2000. At 4 a. m. on the day of the robbery, he said, he hired an automobile, picked up Silsby downtown and drove him to Collinsville where they met Simon, Selvaggi and the man who is sought. Next day he met Silsby who handed him $300 with the remark: "We didn't get as much as we expected, but I'll take care of you later."

The police record shows Silsby has been arrested as a suspect 11 times. Detectives say he has admitted serving a five-year term for robbery in Michigan.

Gangsters' Roost on East Side.

The killing of Selvaggi and the wounding of Simon, both Cuckoo gangsters from St. Louis, disclosed that St. Louis gangsters have lately established themselves on the East Side apparently for protection from the St. Louis police. At least 10 Cuckoo gangsters have been staying at a Collinsville hotel, it was learned, and four more in a cabin at Long Lake.

Simon, who suffered three bullet wounds in the back, was held at city hospital until Friday, when friends furnished $20,000 bond and caused his removal to St. Mary's Hospital.

Other Robbers Anticipated Them.

A youthful clerk at the Union-Easton Trust Co., Howard Blaisdell, has confessed that he told Joseph Otto Harper of 2600 California avenue about the messengers' movements. Harper declared he confided in Gus Joseph of 5935 Theodosia avenue, and that on the day of the robbery they went out to steal a car with which to commit the robbery. Not finding a machine, they went downtown and learned that three other men had held up the messengers. They declared "somebody else got their dope and used it."

SENATOR NORRIS QUITS COMMITTEE

Political Bees Buzz as Session Closes — Senate to Reconvenc Nov. 10 to Try Judge English.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3—With the campaign bee buzzing over the dead session of Congress tonight, Senators and Representatives turned homeward after seven busy months. Politics now has become a personal matter to the representatives of the people, and developments have not helped to answer some of the questions in their minds.

The Senate campaign fund investigation had not been without its thrills to candidates for reelection. It is open talk that more than one member is looking forward with an absorbing interest to the summer's activity mapped out by Senator Reed of Missouri and his investigators.

Also farm relief was often mentioned where the paths of the scurrying members of Congress crossed.

Norris Quits Committee.

Even before the session ended today the spirit of the coming fray filtered into discussion on the floor of both Senate and House.

The Senate unexpectedly received the resignation of Senator Norris, the Republican insurgent from Nebraska, as chairman of the powerful committee on agriculture. Norris said merely that he wanted to retire to devote more attention to pending legislation, but his announcement started a flurry of political guessing through the corridors.

Often unfriendly to the Coolidge administration, Norris recently announced he would support William B. Wilson, the Democratic nominee for the Senate in Pennsylvania, and throughout the fight over farm relief he stood with the McNary-Haugen bloc against the President.

In the House at the same moment, the two party leaders were exchanging the opening shots of the coming fight for control. Tilson of Connecticut, titular head of the House Republicans, reviewed the accomplishments of the session and invited the Democrats to attack it.

Tilson Praises Record.

Tilson congratulated Congress on its record of accomplishment since last December, but he observed "as we adjourn, the problem of agricultural over-production still is unsolved."

"But we at least can congratulate ourselves," he added, "that the problem was tackled with earnestness and patriotism."

He included in "a brief digest of the more important legislative activities," the $350,000,000 tax reduction law, the $165,000,000 public buildings program, the Watson-Parker act to settle railroad-labor disputes, the administration proposal to create a division of co-operative marketing in the Agriculture Department, ratification of all war debt settlement except for Senate action on the French agreement, and veterans' and reclamation legislation.

"The first session of the Sixty-ninth Congress," he asserted, "has made a record which compares favorably with any session in our national history."

Garrett of Tennessee, the Democratic floor leader, accepted Tilson's challenge and predicted a Democratic majority in November.

Garrett Answers Tilson

The Democrats, Garrett said, "could not initiate or prevent legislation and only in a few instances were able to amend it. The party consequently will go to the coun-

OLD GUARD SENATORS, UP FOR RE-ELECTION, RUSH TO CONGRATULATE FILIBUSTER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 3.

TWO minutes remained. The hour of adjournment was at hand, but Senator Cameron (Rep.) of Arizona kept right on talking with the fate of the Neely resolution to limit senatorial campaign expenses at stake.

Senators Neely, Glass and King vainly tried to interrupt the Arizonan. Blease of South Carolina crossed the chamber and whispered to Cameron. He kept on. He was still going when the vice president announced that the hour of adjournment had arrived.

Then occurred what was, perhaps the most significant part of the whole show. Old Guard Senators flocked to Cameron, wrung his hand. Among the first to extend congratulations were Butler of Massachusetts, the chairman of the Republican National Committee, Willis of Ohio, Watson of Indiana and Wadsworth of New York.

All these Senators will be up for election in the fall.

TRY ARTIFICIAL RESPIRATION TO REVIVE A DROWNED MOOSE

Workmen Fish 600-Pound Animal Out of Power Canal at Sault Ste. Marie.

By the Associated Press.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., July 3.—A 600-pound moose was swept into the head race of the Michigan Northern Power Co. canal here yesterday and was trying to make the shore. He had dived into the swift waters of the canal after having crossed St. Mary's River from Canada in safety.

The animal, weary after the long swim, was swept against the steel racks which filter the water above the giant hydro-turbines. There it struggled, growing weaker as workmen at the power plant sought to rescue it with ropes and pike poles. Finally a rope was swung about its neck. Five minutes was required to haul him to shore.

Dozens of men seized it and dragged it ashore where two physicians tried for 15 minutes to restore life by artificial respiration, but to no avail.

Young Rockefeller and Companions Find It Enjoyable.

HAVRE, July 3.—J. Sterling Rockefeller, son of Mrs. William G. Rockefeller, and four Yale companions have found traveling to Europe in the third class an enjoyable experience.

The five Yale students arrived here on the France today. They were John F. Manson, Walter Webling Jr., H. Kelsey Wallace, Ray W. Lapham and young Rockefeller. They sailed as third-class tourists in accordance with recent college traditions with the desire to gain experience. The students were the life of the passage and said they enjoyed everything. Young Rockefeller, although heir to millions, expressed himself as delighted with the third-class sleeping accommodations, table fare and everything.

NO HAND PAINTING FOR EDISON

Turns Down Artist's Request for Sitting, Not Mechanical Enough.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 3.—Thomas A. Edison's love for machinery is displayed even in his attitude toward pictures of himself. Sir John Lavery, noted English portrait painter, who spent several weeks in the United States, painting Pittsburg millionaires and other notables, has told of how he tried to persuade the famous inventor to pose for a portrait, after the artist had painted one of Mrs. Edison.

Sir John said Edison refused, asserting he was opposed to painted portraits because they were made without the aid of mechanism and therefore could not be "really very good." "Everything in this world should be done by machinery and measurements." Sir John quoted the electrical wizard as saying.

CAMERON HOLDS FLOOR AGAINST NEELY MEASURE

Arizonan Prevents Consideration of Resolution to Fix $25,000 as Maximum for Expenses.

ALSO BARS REPORT ON F. X. O'CONNOR

Senator King Kept From Calling Attention to Disputed Testimony of Philadelphia Judge.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—A last-hour filibuster by Senator Cameron (Rep.) of Arizona just prior to the adjournment of the Senate at 3 p. m. today had two important effects:

First, by blocking consideration of the Neely resolution designed to curb excessive expenditures in senatorial primary contests, it left the way clear to unlimited outlays in the forthcoming primaries except where state laws may act as a check.

Second, it kept Senator King (Dem.) of Utah of the Campaign Fund Investigating Committee, from formally calling the attention of the Senate to the "state of the rerord" with respect to the testimony of Magistrate Francis X. O'Connor of Philadelphia.

Without lodging a specific charge against O'Connor, King's report recited that the salient points in his sworn testimony—his denials that he charged the Vare organization with offering him a $75,000 and later a $150,000 bribe to withdraw from his race for Congress in the recent Pennsylvania primary—had been controverted under oath by Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania and three newspaper reporters.

Signed by Four Investigators.

King sought to lay the report before the Senate "for such action as it might see fit to take." It was signed by the four members of the committee who were present when it was drawn—King, La Follette (Progressive Rep.) of Wisconsin, McNary (Rep.) of Oregon and Goff (Rep.) of West Virginia. Senator Reed of Missouri, chairman of the committee, had left for his home earlier in the day without seeing the draft, but presumably he would have approved the report or made it stronger.

If King had been able to make his statement to the Senate, the next logical step would have been the introduction of a resolution referring the matter for investigation to the Department of Justice, or perhaps direct to the United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia or the corresponding officer in Philadelphia.

Cameron's dogged refusal to give way to King or anybody else prevented the report from being laid before the Senate and destroyed all chance for action by the Senate until the next session.

Committee's Course Uncertain.

Members of the investigating committee tonight were uncertain whether they would take further action on their own account without waiting for the Senate to reconvene. The question probably will be discussed at a meeting next Tuesday morning when the committee expects to close the first phase of its investigation.

The disclosures of the committee colored nearly all of the day's proceedings on the Senate floor.

Shortly after noon, Senator Neely (Dem.) of West Virginia sought to bring up his resolution placing a $25,000 limit (with liberal exemptions) on the primary expenses of candidates for the Senate. The resolution had been made, to apply specifically to future contests and in that form had received the approval of the entire Rules Committee.

Notwithstanding the Senate was operating under an agreement to adjourn at 3 p. m., it looked as if the resolution might go through.

Blease (Dem.), the unique mem-

PRESIDENT SIGNS 151 BILLS ON LAST DAY OF CONGRESS

Of 17,812 Measures Introduced at This Session 759 Are Made Law — Coolidge Holds Up Six.

O. K.'S DEFICIENCY ITEM OF $51,000,000

Also Approves Veterans' Compensation Act Authorizing the Expenditure of $12,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—With the signature today of President Coolidge to 151 measures, the total number of bills enacted into law at the session of Congress just ended was raised to 759 out of 17,812 introduced.

The President approved 65 at the White House, then went to the Capitol where he signed 88 more before the gavel fell.

Among the more important bills signed were the $51,000,000 second deficiency bill, carrying the first year's public building program with numerous other appropriations, and the veterans' compensation measure which authorizes the expenditure of $12,000,000 for former service men and their dependents.

Six measures, however, failed to receive the President's immediate approval although he may sign them within ten days.

The bills that were not signed included measures authorizing certain Indian tribes of the State of Washington to appeal their claims against the Government to courts, and to grant to the states of Oregon and Washington an amount equivalent to taxes lost by the revestment of Oregon and California Railroad Co. land grants.

Bills Signed by President.

Measures signed by the President included:

Bill granting the consent of Congress to agreements between the states of Idaho, Wyoming, Washington and Oregon, for the apportionment of the waters of the Snake River and its tributaries.

A resolution for completing the tomb of the unknown soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

A resolution authorizing a conference on education, rehabilitation, reclamation and recreation at Honolulu.

Bill authorizing the construction of a bridge across Lake Washington from Seattle to Mercer Island, Washington.

Wabash River Bridge Bill.

A measure to provide for the leasing of public lands in Alaska for fur farming.

A bill to revise the boundary of the Sequoia National Park in California.

A bill extending the time for beginning and completing the construction of a bridge across the Wabash River at Mount Carmel, Ill.

A bill to readjust the commission personnel of the Coast Guard.

A bill to authorize an industrial appropriation from the tribal funds of the Indians of the Fourth Belknap Reservation, Montana.

A bill to authorize the leasing of unallotted irrigable land on Indian reservations.

To Speed U. S. Oil Suits.

Turning to legislation, the Senate and House reached a last-minute agreement on two measures, championed by Senator Walsh (Dem.) of Montana, designed to expedite trial of the Government's suits for recovery of the naval oil reserves which resulted from the celebrated Teapot Dome oil investigation.

Adjournment found the House and Senate still at odds on the McFadden branch banking bill an da number of other proposals which go over until the next session.

The Senate at a last-minute executive session confirmed a number of presidential nominations.

It adjourned under agreement to take up the Lausanne treaty with Tukey on the first day of the December session and to consider the House rivers and harbors bill, beginning Dec. 14. The latter measure, along with the final deficiency bill carrying funds for construction of a number of postoffices, for a while frustrated plans of leaders for adjournment this week.

Coolidge Gives Autographs.

Seated at a desk in the center of the President's room in the Senate wing, the President paused between the signing of bills to greet Senators and Representatives who dropped in to pay their respects. Just as Congress adjourned he received a group of Senate pages and gave each of the boys his autograph.

Vice-President Dawes hurried to the President's room after the Senate had quit to shake hands with Mr. Coolidge and the members of his Cabinet.

Cameron Holds the Floor Against Neely's Measure

ber from South Carolina, threw the first obstacle in the way. He objected to Neely's request for unanimous consent to consideration of the measure.

"When I was Governor of South Carolina," said Blease, "we threshed this whole business out. It will take me at least an hour to give my reasons for opposing this resolution."

"There is no question before the American people," replied Neely, "in which they are more interested than the prevention of corruption in elections.

"If the Senator from South Carolina wants corruption in his state, that is his business, but he has no right to prevent the Senate from placing itself squarely on record in opposition to corrupt practices."

Blease again declined to give way.

The Senate proceeded to the consideration of business on the calendar.

Next, Senator Jones (Rep.) of Washington delivered an oration on the merchant marine problem. Whatever the purpose, the effect was to take away precious minutes from the time within which the Neely resolution might be brought to a vote.

Neely Renews Request.

Neely renewed his request for its consideration.

Senator Heflin (Dem.) of Alabama proposed that the measure be made retroactive, so that it would apply to the Pennsylvania primary.

Reed (Rep.) of Pennsylvania was immediately on his feet with an objection. Reed had previously served notice that if the resolution were made retroactive, to apply to Representative Vare, he would seek to attach an amendment to unseat any Senator who had been elected by a vote of less than 15 per cent of the adult population of his state. This was a thrust, manifestly, at the Southern Senators.

Senator Copeland (Dem.) of New York contributed a few remarks and Senator Pat Harrison (Dem.) of Mississippi twitted the Republicans in a characteristic speech.

"Some of us feel rather sorrowful," he said, "because there are faces on the other side of the chamber that will not be here much longer. As the weather gets hotter and hotter, we find the people getting cooler and cooler toward Coolidge. Few of them are changing to him now."

Reviews G. O. P. Disasters.

Harrison reviewed the results of the season's primaries—the defeat of McKinley in Illinois, Pepper in Pennsylvania, Stanfield in Oregon, Cummins in Iowa and Hanna in North Dakota—and added:

"I think it is fine that the President should desire to go to the cool regions of the Adirondacks. There have been reasons why he should want to go up there.

"I congratulate you on wanting to adjourn quickly so that you can get as far away from him as you can. It is natural, too, that you over there should want to adjourn so that you can separate yourselves from each other; you have made such a miserable mess out of trying to stay together."

He sat down amid general laughter.

The Senate held an executive session for the consideration of nominations and came out of it with 30 minutes to go.

Cameron got the floor and raged shrilly against the action of his Democratic colleague, Ashurst, in blocking his Verde River irrigation bill. This is a measure whose passage, it is said, would have done Cameron a lot of good in his fight this fall for re-election.

Neely Asks for a Chance.

Holding a copy of his campaign fund resolution in his hand, Neely walked over to Cameron and asked for a chance to call up the measure. Cameron went right on.

Neely at this stage was seeking to make a motion to take up his resolution. Cameron's filibuster kept him from getting the floor for this purpose.

"Young Bob" La Follette, who contributed to the framing of the resolution, whispered to Cameron, trying to get him to give way. Again he refused to stop talking.

Only 15 minutes now remained before the time set for adjournment.

Other Senators sought to get a few minutes. They promised Cameron that if he would yield the floor he could have it back again. Vice President Dawes ruled that if he yielded he would be "taken off his feet." Cameron kept on.

La Follette whispered to him again and reported back to King who was on his feet trying to get the report on Magistrate O'Connor before the Senate.

Glass (Dem.) of Virginia, who wanted the floor for some purpose of his own, glared malignantly at the speaker. He was now killing time by reading from some document on irrigation.

Galleries Titter.

The galleries tittered. The faces of Senators expressed a variety of emotions—some laughed outright, some smiled complacently, some were enraged.

Neely tried to take Cameron off the floor by the point of order that he was not entitled to read his document.

Dawes held that Cameron was within his rights.

The rush attending the closing of Congress upset the schedule of the Reed campaign fund investigating committee, but two executive sessions and a brief hearing were held.

Decision was deferred until that time as to whether the investigators will make public the names of contributors of more than $500 to the Antisaloon League since 1917. Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the League, has objected to such publication on the ground that contributions were not made to a political fund.

After the second executive session La Follette announced that he favored spreading the names on the committee record. King then said that he and Goff wanted a full attendance of the committee members before a final decision.

Committee Holds Session.

Members of the committee went into session immediately after the adjournment. Senator Reed having left for home in the morning, King took the head of the table. He called for T. Henry Walnut, who was a member of the Pinchot committee for Philadelphia in the recent primary. Walnut did not appear, whereupon King pronounced him in contempt.

Wheeler, who was on hand again with a bundle of papers interceded for Walnut saying that he had left for his home under the impression that the committee would not meet today.

King replied that Walnut could make his own explanation to the committee on Tuesday.

Wheeler put into the record a mass of data relating to the political activity of organizations opposed to prohibition. He said that in view of Representative John Philip Hill's statement denying the receipt of pay from wet organizations, he wanted to withdraw his testimony of yesterday in so far as it related to any money beyond's Hill's expenses.

Capt. William H. Stayton, head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, who was also in the room, was requested to come back Tuesday.

Dr. Cherrington Questioned.

Ernest H. Cherrington of Westerville, O., manager of the Antisaloon League's publishing interests, director of its propaganda, member of every important League committee and general secretary of the World League Against Alcohol, was the only witness at a brief session of the Reed committee in the afternoon.

La Follette had left and neither King nor Goff seemed to realize the importance of the witness, who with Wheeler, F. Scott McBride and Bishop James Cannon Jr., directs the dry movement in the United States and is extending activities over a world-wide field.

King confined his questions to the American Issue of which Cherrington is the managing editor. The witness stated that the paper had a monthly circulation of about 500,000 and about 350,000 subscribers. He explained the difference in the figures by the fact that the American Issue has various editions.

The American Issue Publishing Co., he said, was started on a capital of $10,000 about 10 years ago and now has assets amounting to $435,000. He added that with the exception of equipment worth about $43,000, the company has been built from the profits of its publications.

To Start Illinois Inquiry.

It is the present intention of the committee to start its Illinois investigation in about three weeks, at Chicago.

Senator Reed, with Mrs. Reed, left for Kansas City by motor car early this morning. The session of the committee without him was like the play without Hamlet.

SENTENCED TO DIE OCT. 15, SCOTT HAS ONE MORE HOPE

Chicago Murderer Who Has Dodged Gallows Two Years to Appeal to Supreme Court.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Russell Scott, who had dodged the gallows for two years by means of last-minute reprieves from the Governor and an insanity hearing, will have only one more chance to escape the noose as a result of Judge Marcus Kavanagh's refusal today to grant him a new trial on his appeal from the finding of a jury one week ago that he has recovered his sanity.

If the Supreme Court refuses to act favorably the slayer of Joseph Maurer, drug clerk, will pay for his crime, the climax of 50 or more robberies.

Attorney William Scott Stewart, who has successfully aided Scott in his fight against the gallows, asked time to appeal to the Supreme Court. Because the higher court does not meet until October, the Judge set Scott's hanging for Oct. 15.

Originator of Postcards Dies.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 3.—Sir Adolph Tuck, who introduced the picture postcard into Great Britain, died here today. Sir Adolph Tuck entered his father's art business in London in 1869 and later inaugurated the first of a series of original Christmas card designs which were exhibited at the Dudley Gallery. He introduced picture postcards into the British Empire in 1894. He was born in 1854 and was actively connected with the picture postcard industry most of his life.

Ban on Dancing in Bathing Suits.

GENOA, Italy, July 3.—Dancing in bathing suits, a favorite beach sport in some parts of Italy, has been banned in resorts along the Italian Riviera by the prefect here. He has issued strict orders, not only prohibiting dancing, but threatening severe penalties for those who use abbreviated bathing suits or semi-transparent beach robes.

STOP-GAP RADIO BILL KILLED BY THE CLOCK

Dawes Hasn't Enough Time to Sign It—Control Remains With Hoover.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Radio legislation went by the board in the closing session of Congress today. A last-minute attempt to provide a stop-gap measure until the next session of Congress failed.

The resolution was drawn and approved both by Senate and House, but the time was insufficient for Vice President Dawes to sign the engrossed copy before adjournment, as required by law.

This leaves radio regulation in the hands of the Department of Commerce, as it has been in the past, but with the authority of that agency already challenged successfully in a suit at Chicago.

What the next move will be is problematical.

The resolution which failed today was drawn by Senator Dill (Dem.) of Washington and Representative White (Rep.) of Maine, as the result of a hopeless disagreement between conferees on the White and Dill bills passed, respectively, by the House and Senate. It would have provided that no broadcasting station might be granted a permit for longer periods than 90 days, except in cases of commercial stations, which would have been permitted for two years. It would have provided, also, that applicants for permits must sign waivers of any claims against the United States to any wave length or to the use of the ether in radio transmission because of a previous license.

MURDERED MAN FOUND IN FLOATING MOTOR BOAT

It Is Supposed He Was Mistaken for Rum Runner or River Pirate.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The body of Edward Esterbrook, 35 years old, found floating in a motor boat on the Hudson today, furnished the Weehawken, N. J., police, with another mystery.

The boat was sighted off Jersey City by a barge captain who found the body, pierced by three bullet wounds, in the blood spattered boat.

A license issued to William Ruderer was found on the body, which caused the impression that he was the man killed. Finger prints and a brother's identification later gave the man's correct identity and Ruderer appeared and claimed the boat.

After he had been questioned he was released and the police announced they believed Esterbrook was killed in mistake for a rum runner or river pirate. They could not determine whether the man was shot while in the boat or whether the body was placed in the craft, which was set adrift after the killing.

Doumergue Breaks Traffic Laws but Paris Policeman Shifts the Blame.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 3.—Gaston doumergue, president of the French republic, barely escaped being run down by a taxicab a few days ago, then just missed arrest.

Disregarding the ordinary crossings for pedestrians, M. Doumergue started to cross the Avenue des Champs-Elysees, when a taxicab came down from the Etaoile. The driver applied his brakes, skidded and smashed into a lamp post, which was wrecked.

A traffic policeman, a few yards away, walked toward the pedestrian whom he considered to blame for the accident, reached his hand into his pocket for the inevitable notebook, then noticed the offender was the president of the French republiac. He snapped his hand to his cap in a formal salute and turned on the taxicab driver, who got a stern lecture instead.

Teachers Approve Val-Step.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The val-step today entered American social life as the approved new dance of the year. Submitted to the forty-eighth annual convention of the American Society of Teachers of Dancing by Dorothy Norman Cropper of Jersey City, it received approval and will be taught in all schools represented at the convention. The dance was characterized as having a strong Spanish influence, being adapted to six-eight time, the first time this rhythm has been used in American dances since about 1910. R. W. Vizay of Milwaukee was elected priseident, P. S. Nutt of Vineland, N. J., secretary and Henry Doring of Troy, N. Y., treasurer. The next convention will be held in Chicago.

CHARGES BLACKMAIL IN ARIZONA DAM ROW

Senator Cameron Tells of Demand for $20,000, in Speech Before Senate.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Rising to a point of personal privilege, Senator Cameron (Rep.), Arizona, launched an attack in the Senate today against Stephen T. Mather, Director of National Parks, Harry Chandler of the Los Angeles Times, and a "certain gentleman who is to be my opponent in the coming election," because of a series of articles in the Times attacking his stand on pending Boulder Canyon dam legislation.

Characterizing the articles, written by Will Irwin, as "the blackest, most damnable lie that ever came from the pen of any whiter," Senator Cameron declared that his integrity had been attacked "by these sinister influences" and that he proposed to "draw back the curtain upon the actors who have performed in perpetuating this blackmail scheme, which will fail to obtain the results desired by those perpetrating it."

After rescribing his life in the Grand Canyon 40 years ago, Senator Comeron said that "it is an easy matter for an astute writer to take up the threads of various events in the long life of a constructive, energetic, pioneering prospector and weave a story to suit his evil purpose and get it over to a guillible public."

$20,000 Demand Made.

"These blackmailers," he continued, mentioning no names, "had the audacity to send representatives to my office and offer to withhold publication of the articles on the payment of $20,000. I told them to go straight to hell."

Chandler, Cameron asserted, had refused to publish the articles originally submitted, but after the Senator's stand on the Boulder Canyon legislation, he approved their publication.

"No doubt had I announced myself in favor of the construction of the Boulder Canyon dam and sacrificed my honor and knuckled to the greedy wants of Shylock Chandler, these scandalous articles would not have appeared," he said.

Chandler, he asserted, had accumulated "hundreds of thousands of acres in the delta lands of the Colorado River in Mexico, just below Arizona," and purposed to develop this into "an Asiatic empire, place multitudes of Asiatic peons there and hold them in bondage and slavery to produce agricultural products to compete with our own."

Declines to Yield Floor.

The present strained feeling between California and Arizona over the solution of the Colorado River problem, he said, "is chargeable to the damnable un-American methods of Harry Chandler."

When the Senate came out of executive session, Cameron announced that he would consume the remaining time discussing his motion to take up his Verde irrigation bill, unless the Senate agreed to permit him to call it upon the first day of the next session.

Senator Ashurst (Dem.), Arizona, replied that he would use all "honorable means" to prevent passage of the bill, and Cameron made his speech, declining to yield to clamoring Senators for an opportunity to call up their pet measures unless he was assured he would not lose the floor.

BRITISH 'AD' SELLS U. S. FRUIT

Londoners Find They Paid and Americans Got the Profit.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 3.—British fruit dealers who started an "eat more fruit" campaign, have found that their drive has benefited United States dealers more than it has themselves. The Imperial Economic Committee's report shows, however, that the three-word slogan caused the British public to eat three times as much fruit as it ate before the war. Apples, oranges and bananas showed the greatest increase, with 38 out of every 100 apples provided by the United States. The report says "an American banana monopoly controls the sales of 23 of every 30 bananas consumed in this country."

British payments on account of debt to the United States amount to £35,000,000 (about $175,000,000) a year, while the payments made to America for fruit alone in 1924 totaled £11,000,000 ($55,000,000), not including £3,500,000 ($17,500,000) for bananas imported under American control.

ROOF FALL KILLS SEVEN MINERS

Eight Others Injured in Shaft Near Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

By the Associated Press.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 3.—Seven miners were killed late today and eight others injured, some seriously, in a roof fall at the Peach Orchard mine of the Glen Alden Coal Co. Late tonight four bodies has been recovered. The victims were Anthony Urbin and Matt Marzinek of Kingston, Pa., and Joseph Vitkowski of Parsons, Pa., and one unidentifed miner. Three others who were buried, are believed to have perished. They are Metro Kabrita, Peter Kutcaoe, and Andrew Purcell, all of Wilkes-Barre. Eight others who were in the mine were rescued and taken to hospitals.

Early reports were that an explosion of gas following a shot had caused an explosion. This was subsequently found to be incorrect, mine officials saying there was no explosion.

Congress Adjourns With Many Problems Unsolved

try with the record of the session. I sincerely hope and firmly believe we will be returned into political power."

The Senate and House both convened today at 10 a. m., two hours earlier than usual.

The resolution for adjournment, previously approved by the House, was immediately called up in the Senate by Curtis of Kansas, the Republican leader, and was adopted without a record vote.

During the five-hour session, the Senate, while the House was clearing up odds and ends, adopted resolutions providing for an investigation by a special committee of the Alien Property Custodian's office and directing the United States Shipping Board and Commerce Department to determine how an efficient and permanent American merchant marine can be maintained.

Although there was some last-minute bickering, the windup was devoid of exciting and picturesque incidents.

President Comes to Capitol.

Wearing a frock coat and a high hat, despite the sweltering heat, President Coolidge motored to the Capitol an hour before adjournment. He went to the room reserved for him off the Senate lobby and, surrounded by Cabinet officers, bureau chiefs and White House attaches, signed a batch of bills enacted at the last minute.

Before the Senate adjourned Chairman Smoot of the Finance Committee placed in the record a letter he had received from Secretary of the Treasury Mellon reiterating the view that despite the Treasury surplus for the year just closed it would be inadvisable to plan for further tax reduction until a more thorough trial is given the new revenue law and a more occurate line is had on Government receipts for the next two fiscal years.

At 3 p. m. the Senate adjourned sine die. A minute later the final gavel fell in the House.

The Senate stands adjourned to Nov. 10 when it will meet, in advance of the regular December session, to set as a court to try Federal Judge George Washington English of East St. Louis for official misconduct.

In the House Speaker Longworth rounded out the session with a brief speech, thanking members for the courtesies shown him. He was speaking when the adjournment hour arrived.

There was scarcely more than a quorum on the floor, and as the session ended members rose and sang a cerse of the "Star-Spangled Banner," led by a Marine trumpeter, with the crowded galleries joining in. The wife of Representative Linthicum (Dem.) of Maryland, unfurled a large flag and waved it from the Speaker's gallery.

BLUE SKY LAW HITS PERPETUAL MOTION ENGINE

release the brake the balls, rolling toward the outer end of the tubes, start the wheel turning and they pp on rolling and the wheel keeps on turning until you apply the brake again. This lever action on the wheel is supposed to keep up indefinitely. Just how the balls got back to the other end of the tubes without slowing up the works was not clear, but that matter may have been explained by some of the numerous blue prints which Albers had about the room. Anyway, the promoter declared that the machine was capable of developing 3,000,000 horsepower on an area of 40 feet square.

Tells of $80,000 Sale.

Albers said he had been selling percentums in the company for more than two years and had made sales ranging from $20 up to $80,000, but refused to say how much St. Louisans had invested in the enterprise. He had been in St. Louis 10 months. Percentums sell for $1 a percentum and the company's literature states that 10,000,000 are for sale. This, it is stated, is to finance a string of 50 factories which the company expects to erect "somewhere between Indianapolis and Detroit" at an early date.

Albers declares he is not disturbed by Commissioner Stockard's ruling, as he is "tired of St. Louis anyway." He says he will simply leave off his selling activities and devote himself to his painting until the company gets him another field in which to work.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, July 3.—William C. Carter, foreman of the Los Angeles County grand jury, today announced that the offer of Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, made through her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, to appear voluntarily before the grand jury would be "promptly accepted."

CLAIMANT TO CLARK ESTATE IDENTIFIES TINTYPE PICTURE

One of Three Missouri Sisters Testifies at Trial of Their Suit in Butte, Mont.

By the Associated Press.

BUTTE, Mont., July 3.—A tintype photograph of the late Senator W. A. Clark of Montana, taken in 1870, was identified today by Mrs. Effie Clark of Clarksville, Mo., as that of her father, as she remembered him. The photograph was introduced at the trial of the suit of Mrs. Clark and two sisters for a share of his estate. Mrs. Clark testified her father disappeared from his home in Missouri when she was nine years old.

The plaintiffs say only after his death did they learn that Senator Clark was the missing parent.

Heirs named in the will of the copper magnate declare that while he once lived in Missouri he did not marry there and the three sisters seeking to break the will are not his children.

NEW LAW PERMITS SERVING OF SUBPENAS IN EUROPE

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Two measures, sponsored by Senator Walsh, (Dem.), Montana, prosecutor of the Teapot Dome inquiry, designed to expedite Federal prosecution of the Naval Oil Lease cases, were enacted into law today in the hour before adjournment of Congress.

The bills, which received the signature of President Coolidge along with others he approved on his visit to the Capitol, would permit the serving of subpenas on American witnesses now residing abroad, and change the law as it relates to the functions of the District of Columbia courts in a way which would result in speeding up of the oil cases pending here, without undue delay in the District Court of Appeals.

EGAN GANGSTER KILLS HIMSELF IN FEDERAL ASYLUM

Bartley Martin Climbs Screen and Dives Head-First to Concrete Floor in Washington.

HELD FOR MAIL RAID AT POCAHONTAS, ILL.

Funeral to Be in St. Louis —Drug-Peddling Brother to Be Released From Leavenworth to Attend.

Bartley Martin, Egan gangster, convicted of aiding in the Pocahontas, Ill. mail robbery in 1923, killed himself Friday at St. Elizabeth's Hospital for the Insane at Washington by climbing a wire screen, then diving head-first to the concrete floor 25 feet below. He died four hours later from a fractured skull. Martin was 24 years old. His mother, Mrs. Alice Martin, lives at 2424 Elliot avenue.

Martin and Edward Leonard were sentenced to serve six years in the Federal penitentiary by the United States Court at Springfield, Ill., in March, 1925, after they had pleaded guilty of participation in the robbery at Pocahontas. They previously had been indicted, along with "Dinty" Colbeck, leader of the Egan gang, Oliver Dougherty, Lee Turner and William Engler, all now in Government prisons, on information furnished by Ray Renard, whose testimony sent many of the gang to the penitentiary.

The robbery at Pocahontas occurred while an elderly mail messenger was wheeling two pouches of mail, containing $4000 cash, from a morning train. Four men in an automobile kidnaped the messenger.

Martin served at Leavenworth until last January when he and several others were transferred to the Government reformatory at Chillicothe, O. On June 9, he was transferred to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Burial will be in St. Louis. The funeral will be either tomorrow or Tuesday. Martin's grandfather, Daniel P. Shannon, died Friday and his funeral will be tomorrow.

Because of these deaths, Frank Martin, a brother of Bartley, who is serving a sentence at Leavenworth, will be allowed to come to St. Louis to attend the interments.

Frank Martin was given a two-year term last autumn for peddling drugs.

UNIDENTIFIED MAN INJURED BY SPEEDING AUTOMOBILE

Driver of Car Flees From Scene, Boy, 6, Knocked Down, Driver Arrested.

The driver of a speeding automobile ran down and seriously injured an unidentified man at Thirteenth street and Chouteau avenue at 10:20 o'clock last night and fled from the scene. The victim of the accident, who suffered a fracture of the skull, is between 55 and 60 years of age, five feet, eight inches tall and weighs 160 pounds. He wore a white shirt, blue trousers and a black hat.

Garlen Estes, 6, of 1104 South Ninth street, suffered a fracture of the skull when he was knocked down by an automobile at Eighth and Hickory streets at 9 o'clock last night. Tony Leisur, 19, of 1219 Chouteau avenue, the driver, was arrested.

Dorothy Herring, 15 years old, of 3224 Neosha street, suffered lacerations and contusions at 8:20 p. m. yesterday, when she was struck by a Government mail truck, driven by Walter Graham, a Negro, of 144 Trudeau street, at Grand boulevard and Chouteau avenue.

Graham said the girl stepped from behind a car into his path. Traffic Policeman Harry Maresch, who witnessed the accident, estimated that Graham was driving about 30 miles an hour. Graham was allowed to deliver his load of mail, but was told to report later to the police.

BOY, 8, SERIOUSLY INJURED WHEN AUTO STRIKES TREE

James Bell, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bell of 3506 Harper street, suffered a fractured skull last night when an automobile driven by his brother, William, ran off the Bellefontaine road near Parker road, and struck a tree. The child was thrown from the car, striking his head on the ground. His mother, who accompanied her two sons, suffered serious lacerations of the scalp and face.

The receiving physician at the Westminster Hospital, 8520 Halls Ferry road, where the injured were taken by passing motorists, said small hope was held for the child's recovery. The driver was only slightly injured.

Three Injured by Speeding Auto.

Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Just of 2329 Hickory street and their son, were cut and bruised yesterday when their automobile was struck and overturned by another machine speeding on the highway near Bismarck, Mo. The other machine, occupied by two men and two women, did not stop.

Norge Flag to Be Presented to Coolidge

AMUNDSEN SAILS FOR HOME, HIS 'JOB DONE'

Explorer Greeted by Byrd in Brief Stop in New York—Through With Expeditions.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The man who traded his home for an airship to fly over the North Pole said goodby to America today.

Roald Amundsen said farewell from the deck of the Bergensfjord, on which he sailed for Norway. The home to which he is going is a tiny villa in the rugged environs of Oslo, which he sold to help pay for the Norge, the airship in which he sailed over the top of the world. Friends have purchased the home and given it back to Amundsen.

Lincoln Ellsworth, sole American member of the Norge expedition, was the last to shake the hand of the famous explorer. At Ellsworth's side stood Lieutenant-Commander Richard E. Byrd, who flew over the Nort Pole in an airplane a few days before the Norge made the trip. The three clapped each other on the back and said affectionate farewells. Ellsworth said he would stay in America for a while.

"I'm Done," Says Explorer.

"I'm going home to rest," Amundsen said. "Forty-one years ago at the age of 15, I knew what to do during my life. I wanted to see both poles. I've seen them. My job is done. There are no more places to discover. There will be no more lectures. There will be no more expeditions. I'm done."

Amundsen spoke words of praise for Ellsworth and Byrd, who had met him on his arrival from Chicago. As if tired from the rousing reception given Bobby Jones, golf champion, New York did not become vociferous over Amundsen. He slipped into Grand Central Terminal, heard a band play the Norwegian national anthem, was photographed and interviewed. His coming had not been heralded and he spent less than three hours in New York. An official Reception Committee greeted him in the name of Mayor Walker. Then he was whisked away to Brooklyn, whence the Bergensfjord sailed.

At the pier he was greeted by many of his countrymen. Hans Fay, Consul-General of Norway, led the crowd in Norwegian cheers. Speeches were made. Pretty women presented flowers to him.

May Not Return to U. S.

"I may never see America again," he said. "I love her much. She has treated me as a son. You are all my friends."

The ship moved out. The band played "Auld Lang Syne." On the deck waving good-by stood Amundsen, his arms filled with carnations and American beauty roses, his smooth tanned cheeks belying his gray hair. He will celebrate his fifty-sixth birthday in his own home July 16.

FIREMEN VOTE $20,000 FEE TO ATTORNEY

A. S. Phillips Had Already Received $3000 as Retainer in Pay Suit.

A fee of $20,000 was voted by members of the Fire Department yesterday to compensate Alroy S. Phillips, prohibition director of this district, for his services as counsel to the firemen during their successful fight for a pay increase of $25 a month. He had previously been paid $3000 as a retainer fee and the $20,000 is in addition to this. According to Michael J. Mulvoy, secretary of the firemen's union, the vote for the $20,000 fee was practically unanimous.

Balloting on the question was begun Friday and completed yesterday at the Central Trades and Labor Union Hall, 2228 Olive street. A vote on the issue was decided upon after several members of the department objected to a suggestion by the Executive Committee that each man contribute $25 toward the fee. As there are 961 men in the department, this would have brought the total near $25,000, a figure that some held to be excessive.

The pay increase which is retroactive from April 1, 1925, was provided for by a vote of the people in 1923 but the measure failed to win the approval of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and remained in the courts for 14 months before it became effective. It was during this litigation that Phillips' services were employed.

BOY RIDING BICYCLE IS SHOT

Walter Bosler, 13 years old, of 1028 Grattan street, riding his bicycle at Dolman and LaSalle streets at 8 p. m. yesterday, was struck in the back by a revolver bullet. He was taken to City Hospital. Police reported the bullet apparently was a stray fired by a premature Fourth of July celebrator in the neighborhood.

He admitted being an organizer for the Daily Workers' party of America, an alleged Communist organization, but denied making any seditious utterances.

CHICAGO PAIR KILLED IN PLANE IN BOHEMIA

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dawson Among Six Dead in Passenger Flyer's Crash.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 3.—When a passenger airplane flying between Paris and Prague fell Friday morning it brought to a tragic end a pleasure trip of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Dawson of Chicago and Lake Forest, Ill. The crash occurred among the mountains of Bohemia near Tachau, a Czecho-Slovakian town about 90 miles from Prague. Four others perished in the accident, which is believed to have been caused by motor trouble and an attempted landing on rough ground.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Curtis of Chicago, with whom the Dawsons had been motoring in South France, are in Paris. Curtis said today that he saw Dawson start by airplane for Prague to visit John O. Crane, president Masary's secretary, son of Charles R. Crane, former American Minister to China, and Mrs. Dawson's uncle.

Claude Ballard, 10 years old, of 4163 McPherson avenue, was injured in the back by a blank cartridge in a pistol discharged by Victor Bialik, 15, 332 North Sarah street, while they were playing in front of 4149 McPherson avenue, yesterday afternoon. Illinois Candidate Says He Is for Temperance Against Prohibition.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 3.—George E. Brennan, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate from Illinois, in a letter made public today, says: "We find the fanatical drys, the bootleggers and Anti-Saloon League marching shoulder to shoulder to the polls to vote for my opponent.

"I am for temperance as against prohibition," Brennan writes. "I am for repeal or modification of the Volstead act. My candidacy will provide a real referendum on the continuance of the Volstead act. A return of the saloon is no part of my proposal."

Negro Held as Pickpocket.

Arnold de Voigne, of 618 North Eleventh street, felt his purse, containing $30, slip from his pocket last night as two Negroes jostled him on a Page street car, at Taylor and Finney avenues. De Voigne turned and grappled with a Negro, who dropped the purse and jumped from the car followed by his companion. A policeman captured one Negro, who was identified by De Voigne, but who denied the charge.

LIBRARY TO GET $1,000,000 LEFT BY FORMER PRIEST

New York Institution Final Beneficiary After Death of the Late J. B. Slattery's Widow.

HE QUIT MINISTRY AT 52 TO MARRY

Relations to Ask Construction of Bequest to Public Uses When Will Is Probated Tuesday.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Relatives not named in the will of John R. Slattery of New York and France, who died in Monte Carlo March 6 will be represented by attorneys at the hearing for probate Tuesday and probably will ask for a construction of the provision by which his estate, which they say amounts to more than $1,000,000, is to be revert to the New York Public Library on the death of his widow, Mrs. Adele Slattery. This became known today.

Officials of the New York Public Library are as much surprised as any one. Apparently the first intimation they had of his existence was the notice of the bequest. Further mystery is added by the revelation that John P. Slattery had been for many years a Catholic priest, head of St. Joseph's Seminary in Baltimore, an institution for training young Negroes for the priesthood, and when 52 years old he withdrew from the priesthood, and a little later, married. Some of his relatives say they believe his father, who died about two years after he left the church, did not know of the son's action. Some of his closest kinsfolk did not know of his marriage, and few of them ever saw his wife.

Why, instead of distributing his wealth, which came to him from his father among his relatives, or to the work to which he had devoted the best part of his life, he chose to leave it to the public library, in which so far as has been learned he had never expressed any unusual interest, is a question yet unanswered.

Son of "Boss" Slattery.

John R. Slattery was the only son of James Slattery, known as "Boss Slattery" to New Yorkers nearly two generations ago because of his big contracting operations. An uncle, John Slattery, formerly engineer at the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island, who took over James Slattery's business did the grading around Grant's tomb and other important pieces of work in the opening of the big building period.

It was in 1902, when he was at the height of a brilliant career in the church that Father Slattery withdrew from the Josephine order.

In 1905 James Slattery died, leaving his money to his son. According to his family, the amount was more than $800,000. About that time, and unknown, it is said, even to close relatives, he married.

Slattery traveled extensively, spending more time abroad than in this country, it is said. He is said to have studied law in California and to have been admitted to the bar.

In 1912 John Slattery, his uncle, died and left him, it is understood, about $400,000 more.

Two Women Heirs.

On his father's side, John R. Slattery leaves only one relative, Mrs. Margaret Slattery, No. 96 Ross street, Brooklyn, widow of his uncle, Patrick H. Slattery. On his mother's side there is a large family of kinsfolk, most of them cousins.

The will was filed in surrogate's court May 20. It left the estate in trust to the executors during the lifetime of Margaret Slattery and his wife. Out of the income Mrs. Margaret Slattery is to receive $200 a month as long as she lives, and the rest of the income is to go to his wife during her lifetime.

Mrs. Margaret Slattery, small, gray-haired and gentle voiced, said today she could form no idea why her nephew chose the New York Public Library as ultimate beneficiary. She kept house for his father for eight years.

PRESIDENT IS 54 TODAY; PLANS QUIET CELEBRATION

Receives Huge Cake From Washington Restaurant—Will Go to Adirondacks This Week.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—A huge cake bearing in colored frosting the seal of the United States and with 54 candles, was received by President Coolidge from a Washington restaurant today as a forerunner of many gifts for his birthday tomorrow.

The President was born on Independence Day, 1872. Tomorrow he plans no special observance of the day, but will remain at home with Mrs. Coolidge and their son John, who is here from college. Frank W. Stearns of Boston, his close friend, also will be here.

Beyond attending church in the Audotorium, where the First Congregational Church is now worshiping until a new building is erected, the President and Mrs. Coolidge plan to rest in preparation for the trip to Philadelphia Monday, when the President will speak at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition.

Returning Monday evening, it is expected the President and Mrs. Coolidge will depart Tuesday or Wednesday at latest, for their vacation in the Adirondacks. John probably will depart Monday for the University of Vermont, where he will study economics at summer school.

POLICEWOMEN HELP RAID HOUSE ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Pose With Detectives as Guests and Arrest Six Persons, One the Woman Proprietor.

On a tip that home brew was being sold in the residence at 5720 Enright avenue, Detectives McGuire and Fisher, and Policewomen Mrs. Estelle Fritch and Mrs. Josephine Stapleton, went to the place last night and raided it.

They reported that they arrived at 10 p. m., were admitted by Mrs. Belle Ledbetter, 34 years old, who lives there, and were served beer, she thinking they were ordinary customers, for which they paid with a marked $1 bill. While they were there the telephone bell rang and Mrs. Ledbetter, according to the officers, answered it and then told them to get out, because "the cops are coming."

"They're here already," said Fisher, exposing his badge.

The raiders reported finding about 130 quarts of home brew and a brewing apparatus, a slot machine and a "jumper" on the electric meter. Mrs. Ledbetter and four men and a woman who were drinking in the house were arrested.

PAID POLICE $250,000, EAST SIDE ROBBER SAYS

Samuel Dukes in Confession Covers Thefts of $800,000 in Freight.

By the Associated Press.

DANVILLE, Ill., July 3.—Police protection the last five years cost Samuel Dukes, a Negro, 34 years old, "king of the boxcar robbers" of East St. Louis, more than a quarter of a million dollars, he told Federal officers at the local jail today.

He admits having stolen more the $800,000 worth of merchandise from cars. Officers would be waiting for him to get their "bit" when he returned from a "job," he said.

The confession covers a period of years. Officers are checking back against the statements, hopeful of breaking up a gang which has operated about St. Louis and East St. Louis yards for nearly a score of years.

Dukes' statement has been in the hands of local Department of Justice agents for some weeks, but they have refused to make its contents public. It is known, however, that it covers a period of time prior to Dukes' committment to the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth several years ago. Dukes declined to discuss his statement last night with a Post-Dispatch correspondent at Danville, Ill.

WIDOW AND DAUGHTER FIGHT IN HOUSE OF MOURNING

Two Arrests Follow Quarrel Over Estate of East St. Louisan, Awaiting Burial.

While the body of Albert Corder, 55 years old, lay in a casket in the living room at 2139½ St. Louis avenue, East St. Louis, yesterday, his widow, Lena, 44, and his daughter, Mrs. Louise Housemann, 24, according to stories told to the police, fought in the kitchen over which one would get his estate, consisting of a Ford touring car, and where the funeral services should be held.

After the quarrel, Mrs. Housemann, who lives at the St. Louis avenue address, caused the arrest of her mother and her brother, Runyan, and swore out warrants charging assault and battery. She exhibited an envelope containing hair which she said her mother had torn from her head, and Mrs. Corder showed bruises on her arms.

Both women agreed in telling the circumstances of the quarrel. Mrs. Corder, who sued for divorce last week, wanted the funeral services to be at her home, 1720 Cleveland avenue. Mrs. Housemann wanted the services at her home. Mrs. Corder claimed the automobile as her widow's right. Mrs. Housemann said her father gave it to her before he was stricken fatally with paralysis, Friday.

Mrs. Corder and her son were released on $200 bond each, signed by the undertaker, Mrs. Nellie Walsh Barnes. The funeral has been tentatively set for Tuesday.

HAWES PLEADS FOR PRINCIPLES OF JEFFERSON

St. Louisan Makes That the Overshadowing Issue in Opening His Campaign for U. S. Senate.

ANALYZES TREND OF GOVERNMENT

Heard by Appreciative Audience of 1000 at Excelsior Springs Despite Sweltering Heat.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., July 3.—Congressman Harry B. Hawes of St. Louis, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate, opened his campaign here this afternoon with a plea for a return to the early Jeffersonian principles of government, holding that to be the outstanding and overshadowing issue of the campaign.

He talked to approximately 1000 persons, who came from many parts of the State, some as far as 300 miles, and who sat attentively in the sweltering heat of the motion picture theater in which he spoke.

His was an appreciative audience which voiced its approval of his stand for modification of the Volstead act, in less degree his passing reference to the late President Wilson, and cheered itself hoarse when he bestowed glowing praise on Senator Reed.

Hawes' Reference to Wilson.

Aside from mention of former President Wilson as "a great Democrat" and praising the ideals of the United States as presented to the Allies in the form of the League of Nations, Hawes' speech contained nothing which could be construed as an appeal to those Missouir Democrats who fought Senator Reed so bitterly in the years of the war and in the campaigns following soon after the war. The manner in which Hawes referred to President Wilson, however, may mean the saving to him of the vote of those who opposed Reed because of his opposition to Wilson, but who might be disposed to oppose Hawes merely because of the extremely freindly attitude toward Reed.

"I thought when Woodrow Wilson had taken the American people into war and led a united nation into a struggle for Demoracy and when we sent out money for the prosecution of the war, when the nations at the council toble found that the American people under Wilson did not fight for conquest or for land and that we wanted nothing but gratitude and appreciation, that it would be forthcoming. Europe has forgotten the idealism of that great Democrat and until Europe recovers its sanity, we are more safe in following the old American tradition," Hawes said.

Character of Audience.

Though the audience included "drys" as well as "wets" and anti-Reed as well as pro-Reed Democrats, the preponderance was of the latter in each of the two classifications, due probably to the fact that large numbers of Democratic office holders of Kansas City, which is now under control of an administration in which Tom Pendergast, Kansas City Democratic boss, is a dominating factor, attended. That he would have had a much larger audience than heard the speech had the temperature been lower was shown by the fact that many persons who came to Excelsior Springs to attend the meeting stood outside the hall instead of in it because of the intense heat.

Judging the effect of the speech on the outcome of the campaign, it certainly will meet the approval of those Democrats who have been and are ardent supporters of Senator Reed. Its effect upon the anti-Reed and pro-Wilson Democrats is less certain.

It was a carefully prepared analysis of the departures of modern government from that of the early days of the country, and it contained direct appeals to the Reed element in the Democratic party in Missouri, while there was little if anything which could be construed as an attempt to curry favor with the anti-Reed element.

Deduction As to Reed.

There were references to Senator Reed which would justify the deduction that Hawes was not unmindful of the possible candidacy of Reed for the Democratic nomination for the presidency in 1928, a suggestion which recently has been made in the East, and which has been taken up by some of Reed's friends in Missouri.

He devoted considerable time to outlining Reed's work in investigating the Senatorial primary in Pennsylvania and praised him. In connection with waterways improvements, he said there must be "put in the White House a man who knows the Mississippi and Missouri and the rich territory that feeds the nation."

He closed with an oratorical reference to the "courage and zeal of Reed."

While Hawes has succeeded to a remarkable degree in allaying the party discord which has existed for the past eight years, and has brought into agreement the Reed and anti-Reed leaders in many sections of the State, there may be some question that his speech today will serve to hold much that he has done.

Recent Party Flare Up.

There was something of a flare up among anti-Reed Democrats a few weeks ago following Hawes' reversal of position on the World Court from that of advocacy to opposition, but that seemingly had died away in the common desire of Democrats to win in the next election. He then was accused of a surrender to Reed in order to gain the active support of the Senator and his close friends.

It may be expected that his unstinted praise of Reed, his frequent references to him and his rather late inclusion of mention of the late President Wilson in his speech today, may revive that opposition. If it does, it will mean that Hawes will lose the votes of many Democrats who had decided to support him, though among those really active in party affairs the desire to win this year through party unity is very strong and with many it will overbalance personal feelings.

There was nothing new in the speech as to Hawes' attitude toward prohibition. He repeated portions of his recent statements favoring modification of the Volstead act, which resulted in his classification by the Anti-saloon League as a "wet."

Trend of the Speech.

Taken as a whole, his speech may be accepted as a studiously prepared exposition of Democratic doctrine, recognizing prohibition as an issue in the campaign, but only as one of many issues, and that as a minor one. His speech really merged prohibition in the general theme of departure from recognized governmental functions, a horrible example.

Whether he will be successful in inducing the voting Democrats so to look upon it remains to be seen in the coming primary, but it was evident in a survey of his audience that his organization work had produced results, and that he had brought to his support many of the Democrats who might have been expected to line up with one of nis opponents.

Organization interest in his campaign was apparent from the fact that Joshua Barbee, chairman of the State Committee, and Mrs. Katherine Hallerman, the secretary, attended. This attracted attention because committee leaders usually seek to preserve an attitude of neutrality during a primary campaign.

Virtually all of the heads of departments of the Kansas City administration and many of those under them attended. There were a few Democrats from St. Louis, and a sprinkling from round about the State.

Hawes was accompanied to Excelsior Springs by Mrs. Hawes and their daughters, Misses Eppes and Peyton Hawes. They will go Monday to Moberly, where Hawes speaks in the afternoon at a Fourth of July celebration.

Criticism of Williams.

Hawes singled out the record of Senator Williams, Republican candidate for renomination, for criticism in two important particulars, the Senator's vote on the proposed farm relief legislation, and his vote on the Reed resolution authorizing the investigation of the financing of the Pennsylvania senatorial primary.

"In the final debate on the farmers' bill," Hawes said, referring to Senator Williams' attitude on it. "I did not make a constitutional argument against the bill, nor submit an amendment which would have destroyed it, and then, on the final vote, carefully checking the result as the roll was called, vote for a bill which I knew was defeated before I cast my vote and which I had already called unsound and uneconomic. That course was followed by some statesmen. It will fool no one. It did not even fool the person who so proceeded."

After reviewing the introduction of Senator Reed's resolution for an investigation of the Pennsylvania primary, an investigation which so far has disclosed the expenditure of more than $3,000,000, and the attempts of Republican Senators to prevent the inquiry, Hawes said:

"When the bombshell burst, the Republican Senator from Missouri voted to 'table' the Reed investigating resolution."

Recounts His Experience.

Introducing his candidacy, Hawes recounted his legislative experience in the Missouri Legislature and in Congress, and his experience on various committees which had for their purpose the improvement of agricultural and road conditions.

He sought to place the primary campaign on a broader ground than merely the satisfying of the personal ambitions of candidates seeking high office, holding it to be the duty of Democrats to view the party problems from the standpoint of the party welfare, and thus, from the standpoint of the public welfare.

"I will distribute no Democratic poison in this primary," he said, "so I will have none of it to pick up after it is over. Since attaining my majority I have supported my party loyally in every campaign. I have avoided factionalism and have not permitted extraneous issues to cause personal animosities, hatreds or jealousies, which would prevent cordial relationships to exist among all elements of my party."

Duty of Democrats.

Leading to a discussion of the duty of Democrats, the highest of which he held to be the leading of the country back to the democratic principles of Thomas Jefferson, the candidate sought to show that the question of prohibition was only one of many issues in the campaign, and that there were others which transcended it. He plead for a public judgment of candidates not on their stand on one issue alone, but on a reasonably sone average on all issues.

"I cannot hope to secure the support of those who put one issue above all else, because that is not my own method," he said, obviously referring to the opposition of the Antisaloon League to him. "I have always been content to accept a candidate upon a reasonably sane average of agreement. Any other basis of measurement means party destruction and gives aid to forces with which we are in general antagonism."

Pleading for adoption of a political course in the primary, which would mean success in the election following, Hawes urged the slogan—Harmony, Unity and Victory—and asserted that he would rather have Democrats organize harmony clubs than Hawes clubs. He reviewed the history of politics in Missouri, insisting that Missouri had not ceased to be a Democratic State, and that it was only when the Democratic party was split by Democratic disorganizers that the Republicans had won.

View of Conditions.

Conditions never were better for party success than this year, he said, with more than 15 of the 316 editors of Democratic newspapers in the State participating "in a program of discord," with the party organization from the State Committee down to the township and ward committees functioning in harmony.

"I shall not teach the gospel of criticism and hate," he said, in concluding his "harmony" introduction, "but rather of the things that weld, unite and make strong in a common cause. We are not here to divide an army. We are here to unite and organize and win for the benefit of our State and nation."

Reaching a discussion of definite campaign issue, Hawes led off with the subject of centralization of power in the Federal Government in Washington, and the necessity of arresting the tendency of removing government far from the governed.

The Overshadowing Issue.

"If I should select the overshadowing issue of today," he said, "I would declare it to be the necessity of opposing the growing tendency to centralize power in the Federal Government.

"Power is not only being centralized in Washington, but that power is being directed and controlled by the narrow and provincial view of New England.

Pointing out that Federal control was the policy of the Republican party, coming from the governmental theories of Alexander Hamilton, Hawes commented that even Republicans had begun to fear for the country from such a policy and that Republican candidates this year were crying against it.

Paternalism, with the Federal Government usurping the powers of the state and in many instances the functions of the home, came in for severe censure in a demand for more economy, less bureaucracy, less duplication of state laws by national laws, and less of the "impertinent interference in the privacy of the homes and the control of domestic affairs by law."

Military Despotism Feared.

"Soon there will be a demand for national control of our police," he said. "Then we will have a movement for a national constabulary of police, with a national Chief of Police appointed by the President, who will direct and control the constables, sheriffs and police officers of our states and cities. When that happens we will have established a military despotism upon the ruins of the Republic."

He led up to a statement on prohibition with remarks on law enforcement, pointing to his record in the Legislature and Congress to show that he had voted for every law enforcement measure submitted and for every appropriation asked for law enforcement purposes.

"The national conscience is shocked at the failure of law enforcement," he said. "In the enforcement of law and the punishment of crime there must be either a lack of public co-operation or a failure of public officials to deal with the problem with vigor and determination.

"Every vote that I have cast in either the Legislature or in Congress has been for law enforcement and for the appropriation of money and measures to bring it about. I have voted for additional Federal Judges and worked for an increase in their salaries, so that men of the highest probity and learning may be attracted to these places of public trust.

"My record in the Legislature and in Congress speaks louder than mere promise upon this subject. It has been for law enforcement.

"The growing multiplicity of our laws and the attempt to regulate everything by law has in its own way developed some of the spirit of lawlessness. We have been giving too much attention to little things and diverting the attention of law enforcement officials from the graver crimes of theft, robbery, assault and murder. There can be no compromise in this matter of law enforcement. It is the first essential requisite of government, and if it fails, there fails with it all the machinery of government."

Following this with a statement of his stand for modification of the Volstead act, which is give in full in an adjoining column, Hawes passed to the subject of tax reduction, arguing that the Republican national administration had not accomplished a reduction of taxes, and that the only reduction had come through the gradually disappearing war expenidtures.

He ridiculed as a "great political joke" the Republican campaign argument that the present administration had reduced the cost of government, and asserted that it was just before political campaigns that Secretary Mellon came forward with promises of a lowering of taxes.

Attitude as to Taxes.

"I favor at the first opportunity the wiping out of the burdensome war taxes," Hawes said. "The proposal from Republican sources to apply the present surplus of some $300,000,000 in part payment of our national debt does not meet with my approval. This generation has paid enough. Let our children pay part of the expense of the war."

"I favor using some of the surplus in cutting the tariff tax," he said in extending the thought to a discussion of the tariff.

"It is true there are sections of our country where tariff tax protection is a boon, as in New England, where industry expands at the expense of the rest of the nation; but in Missouri a review will show that we have few industries which need high protection, and there is not a man, woman or child in Missouri who does not pay some part of the annual tariff revenue of $550,000,000, which results in actual cost to consumers of more than $1,000,000,000. I favor a reduction which will reduce this yearly tax to the people of Missouri."

He followed with an illustration to show that the tariff falls particularly hard on the farmer, calling over virtually every article of wear and use on the farm, and showing that it was taxed under the tariff.

Blame for Farm Conditions.

Upon the Republican party in its present and preceding national administrations, he placed the blame for the prevailing conditions on the farm. After waiting five years for an opportunity to vote in a Republican Congress on some measure of relief for the farmer, he said, he saw the question taken up seriously in Congress, "and then, under pressure of New England, the door was slammed in the farmer's face."

"The farmer has been beset on every side," he said. "He buys in a highly protected market. He sells in a world market without protection.

"Industry is organized, labor is organized, capital is organized, transportation is organized. The farmer alone has been left to struggle for himself.

"There is a crisis. The threatened insolvency of the farmer should soon force action. The time has come when technicalities must be temporarily set aside in the interest of practical assistance."

He cited census statistics for Missouri, showing that there are 3000 fewer farms in Missouri than in 1920; that the number of farm owners has decreased and the number of tenants increased; that the farm acreage has decreased 2,000,000 acres; that the value of Missouri farm lands and buildings has decreased more than $1,000,000,000, and that the mortgaged debts of Missouri farm property had doubled in 10 years.

"I have been criticised because I decided the farmer must be given immediate consideration and voted for his bill," Hawes said. "Frankly, I have reached that stage where I would rather make a mistake in his favor than one against his interest."

Transportation Problem Discussed.

Discussing the problem of transportation from the standpoint of an important element in the high cost of living, Hawes said its solution would do more than any other single thing to restore the dollar to its old buying value.

He drew together the highways, waterways and railroads, arguing that they must be considered as one in any attempt to solve the transportation problem. Reduced railroad rates, he said, can come through a proper administration of the present transportation act, an increase in traffic and the healthy growth of the railroads.

On inland waterways, he placed the blame for the defeat of adequate Federal aid, to the East, and particularly to New England.

"New England demands and gets her canals and harbors," he said. "The Republican lake cities secure their improvements; the cities on the Pacific Coast, on the Gulf and in far-away Hawaii; but the great heart of the nation, which feeds the nation, stands year after year with hat in hand a suppliant for attention to needs of water transportation for the Great Central West.

"The organization for the river has been of nonpartisan character of Democrats and Republicans, but the opposition is that of the East, led by New England and assisted by the Republican lake states.

Inland Waterways Neglected.

"It's requests ignored, small pittances are doled out, then washed away. No constructive plan is made, no continued work performed, and while the ocean, lake and gulf cities grow upon improvements made by the expenditure of the taxpayers' money from all parts of the nation, the great valley states of the Mississippi and Missouri basins are neglected and Republican leaders block our highways to the sea and to the Panama Canal, which our money helped to build.

"The opposition to our inland river improvements has always been Republican opposition. The New England mind, among other things, has never known or understood the state of the Middlewest. The New England mind believes that ocean transportation is sufficient because New England is upon the ocean, and it looks with jealous suspicion upon our demand for a waterway to the ocean.

"Unless we break the present rule of New England, all of the national money spent for waterways will continue to be spent largely for their particular benefit.

"When we exercise the power of the Federal Government in developing a great highway system to quicken and cheapen the cost of auto travel and tonnage, the opposition again comes from New England. They say they have theirs; they have enough; why build the Great Central West?"

He concluded this portion of his speech with a demand "that we must have in the White House a man who knows the Mississippi and Missouri."

Favors Small Army.

He advocate "a small, well-equipped army and a navy equal to any, excelled by none, ship for ship, gun for gun, and man for man."

He advocated an extension of the foreign trade of the United States; and to this end an extension of the Consular service.

Taking up the question of the World Court, which he opposed in a statement a few weeks ago shortly after sending to Democrats throughout the State a letter asserting his support of the court, Hawes reviewed the various agencies tending toward the creation of an international tribunal for conciliation of disputes. He recited the action of the United States in adhering to the statute of the World Court and followed that with a review of conditions abroad. He asserted his definite position against the court in this language:

"Europe is going along in the same old road of alliances and treaties and deals and schemes for new wars. Ungrateful for our help in money, munitions and blood, they turn their thought back to the old, narrow, selfish view of national domination built upon alliance and power.

View of World Court.

"So I believe we should stay out of it until foreign nations can grasp the real ideal of an international tribunal built not upon alliance and power, but upon the firmer foundation of right and justice and a square deal for the weak as well as for the strong."

Hawes concluded his speech with a very definite appeal to the support of the followers of Senator Reed in Missouri. He recited Reed's work in the investigation of the Pennsylvania primary, and ended:

"Fellow Democrats of Clay County, I appeal to you today to join ranks under the standard of Thomas Jefferson and march on through a Democratic August to a Democratic November in a spirit of devotion to Democratic ideals and Democratic fundamentals, never stopping in the fight until we have raised the Jeffersonian flag over Missouri.

"We can boast of illustrious traditions dating back to the times of Benton, Cockrell and Vest, passing on to Clark and Stone, and to the courage and zeal of Reed."

"Modify Volstead Act Within the Constitution"

—Hawes on Prohibition.

ON prohibition, a subject of particular interest in St. Louis, Congressman Hawes said in his opening campaign speech in Excelsior Springs yesterday:

"In connection with law enforcement, the subject of prohibition enforcement has been given a conspicuous place in this campaign. The subject was not introduced by me, but when an outside influence dragged it in and pushed it conspicuously into the foreground for public discussion, I felt that an honest, straight-forward expression of opinion would be respected by even those who might be in disagreement with me.

"It is not a subject upon which an honest man can very well dodge or straddle before the primary or election because, if he does so, he cannot but deceive some one after the nomination or after the election. It is not a time for deception. It is not a period when the pursuit of votes should over-balance or control the matter of simple honesty. It involves not so much the matter of opinion as it does the matter of deceit. It is a subject upon which every man seeking the high office of Senator should by this time have an intellectual if not a moral conviction:

"No man ought to be permitted to get by with a statement that says everything and so says nothing. No man should be allowed to 'straddle' so far as to plant one foot in 'dry' territory and the other on 'wet' ground, and so please and so fool the people of both places. No man who must wait for a referendum before he can make up his mind on this great moral question should have thrust upon him the responsibilities of a United States Senator.

"Demands were made upon me for a frank and complete expression of opinion on this subject. Complying, I made my position very clear in a recent interview in which I discussed fully the whole subject of prohibition and which interview was given to all of our metropolitan newspapers and sent to each of our 316 Democratic editors and to each member of the Democratic organization in every county in the State, so that its amplification here is unnecessary. But I will repeat two paragraphs:

"'The present failure to enforce the Volstead act in many communities, particularly in the large cities, is bad enough, but the example set in this respect has tended to break down regard for all law; it has become a menace to public safety and threatens our public welfare through the breaking down of community morals.

"'I favor such change in the Volstead Act, without restoring the saloon, within the limits set by the Constitution, as may be necessary to secure for law enforcement a more united support of public opinion, to remedy the evils of disrespect for law, and to make the act as far as possible conform to the democratic principles of local self-government and the reservation by the states of the regulation of their own police power'."

COOLIDGE DEFIES SENATE IN RECESS APPOINTMENTS

Renames E. B. Brossard and S. J. Lowell to Tariff Commission After They Failed of Confirmation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—President Coolidge again threw down a challenge to the Senate today in the matter of presidential appointments.

Within three hours after two of his nominations to the tariff commission had been blocked by Senate opposition, he gave the nominees recess appointments which will enable them to serve until Congress meets again next fall.

The men named were Edgar B. Brossard of Utah, already serving on the commission under a recess appointment made last summer, and Sherman J. Lowell of New York. When the two nominations were sent to the Senate recently, confirmation was opposed by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader and chairman of the special committee investigating the Tariff Commission. He successfully prevented action to the end of the session.

Almost as soon as he returned to the White House from his pre-adjournment trip to the capitol, Mr. Coolidge replied to his critics by making out recess commissions for the nominees.

Apart from the two Tariff Commissioners, several other recess appointments are in prospect. These include an Assistant Secretary of Commerce in Charge of Civilian Aviation, and several judicial appointments for Alaska and for the the newly created Middle District of Georgia.

The Commerce Secretary will be appointed under the new aircraft legislation, which has resulted in new assistant secretaries for both the navy and the War Department but his selection was delayed because of a desire of the President to go more thoroughly into the qualifications of several he has under consideration.

The judicial appointments, covering District Judges, United States Attorneys and United States Marshals, were delayed after the President had in both cases sent names to the Senate only to have them encounter opposition, which resulted in their withdrawal. Mr. Coolidge indicated at the time that he would not attempt to fill the positions until after Congress had adjourned.

GENERAL EXODUS FROM THE CITY OVER HOLIDAY

Hope of Finding Relief From Heat Attracts Greatest Crowd of Meramec River.

St. Louis tonay began celebrating the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence with a two-day holiday that took a large part of the population out of town as usual to rest or play at resorts in the country and on the rivers with which this vicinity abounds.

A good weather forecast naturally encouraged the exodus, which started early yesterday and reached its peak on the trains and by automobile, especially to Meramec River points, last night, following the close of business and manufacturing establishments, nearly all of which will not reopen until Tueday morning.

All banks, Government offices—except for a small force in the postoffice to take care of a curtailed mail delivery schedule tomorrow—and the grain and stock exchanges throughout the nation, will obesrve the occasion by remaining closed tomorrow. The New York and St. Louis Stock Exchanges and Chicago Board of Trade closed Friday afternoon until Tuesday, giving their employes and thousands of others employed in activities depending on these exchanges a full three-day holiday.

Picnic at Gravois Park.

What probably will be the most imposing and impressive observance of the day in St. Louis is a program to be given at Jefferson Barracks at 3:45 o'clock this afternoon in which the Sixth Infantry Regiment will pass in a military review during a service commemorating the centennial of the founding of the barracks as well as the anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

The Sixth Infantry band will play patriotic airs between numbers on the program, in which appropriate addresses will be made by Dr. Arthur E. Bostwick, librarian of the St. Louis Public Library; John S. Leahy, an attorney; Frank P. Glass, a publisher, and Carl F. G. Meyer, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce.

Several group and neighborhood patriotic celebrations have been planned to take place in St. Louis tomorrow, among them a pageant by school children and picnic at Gravois Park, in Southwest St. Louis, under the auspices of the Gravois Park Independence Day Association, and at Buder Square, California avenue and Hickory street, where there will be games for all and a fireworks display at night.

Many picnics will be given at Creve Coeur Lake, to which the United Railways has assigned special trains in anticipation of a large crowd today and tomorrow.

At Forest Park Highlands tomorrow employes of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. will have their annual picnic and Independence Day celebration.

But most of the St. Louisans who have gone out of town for the holidays, especially the young people, will be found in the cool spots along the Meramec River, in their shacks, cottages and clubs, of which many thousands line the banks and not the hills along the stream.

The Red Cross and St. Louis Safety Council have broadcasted warnings to avoid accidents, urging upon all to get over the holidays safely, and where possible, look out for the safety of one another, both at the rivers and in the city during the display of fireworks.

Opening of Great Suspension Bridge Over the Delaware

The photograph shows Camden (N. J.) crowds meeting people from Philadelphia last week when the Delaware River bridge connecting Philadelphia and Camden was formally opened. The Governors of both states and Senator Edge of New Jersey were present. The bridge is the only public bridge over the Delaware between Philadelphia and the sea, 100 miles distant. The span between the main piers is 1750 feet long, the longest of its kind in the world, and the length of the whole structure from Sixth and Race streets, Philadelphia, to Sixth and Penn streets, Camden, is 9570 feet, or 1¾ miles. The new bridge has a width of 125 feet, enough to accommodate six lines of vehicles and four lines of trolleys. It also has two footwalks for pedestrians.

ATTIRED AS MAN, KILLS EX-HUSBAND AND SELF

Woman Deceives Hotel Clerk and Is Assigned to Room Near Victim.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Attired in men's clothes, Mrs. Helma La Fraugh entered the hotel where her former husband, Russell La Fraugh, was living, at 3030 Broadway, gained entrance to his room and shot him to death. She then killed herself with a bullet through the head. When La Fraugh was granted a divorce June 2 his doom was sealed. Cruelty was the charge against his wife. She struck him with a coffee pot, so the evidence ran. She was given a settlement for $800.

Since then the woman tried various times for a reconciliation. She said she loved her husband and wanted him to remarry her. He was employed as a chauffeur by Mrs. J. R. Bowman and ignored his former wife's approaches.

Yesterday in her male makeup with a boyish bob, she registered at the hotel as J. R. Newton. She wanted a room near the one occupied by La Fraugh. She was smoking a cigarette when she registered. The clerk did not doubt the new guest was a man and she was assigned a room near La Fraugh. Then she waited an opportunity to enter La Fraugh's room. She left her shoes in her own room. La Fraugh was shot through the head as he lay asleep. Her body was on the floor beside the bed.

A note from Mrs. La Fraugh, found in her former husband's room, said:

"Daddy dear: Please tell the man on at night to be sure and call you when I call in the morning. With all my love to you, daddy."

18 CASTAWAYS RESCUED BY FREIGHT CREW ON FLORIDA KEYS

All Hands Saved When Queen of Nassau Sinks; Rust Blamed for Wreck.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., July 3.—Eighteen men, the entire crew of the British steamship Queen of Nassau, which sank 70 miles south of Miami Friday night, arrived in Miami late today on a freight train.

The Queen of Nassau sank in a little more than one hour from the time a serious leak was discovered. All hands left her eight minutes before she sank. She went down about seven miles southwest of Lower Matecumbia Key. The men landed on a key, where a Florida East Coast Railway freight crew found them.

Capt. Peter P. Songdahl thinks that the ship's bottom was so rusty that vibration of the ship's engines caused a plate to work loose.

ORDERED TO PAY $400 A MONTH TO HIS WIFE

Sloan Norman's Charge of Desertion Denied by Mrs. Norman.

George Sloan Norman, general sales manager of the Pierce Petroleum Corporation with offices in the Bank of Commerce Building, who is suing Mrs. Eleanor W. Norman for divorce, charging desertion, was ordered to pay her $400 monthly alimony pending the trial of his suit as well as $100 for her depositions and $250 for her attorney's fee, by Circuit Judge McElhinney at Clayton yesterday.

The order was granted after a deposition sworn to by Mrs. Norman, who lives in Suffolk County, Long Island, New York, had been filed. The deposition stated that the couple were married Jan. 25, 1910 and separated June 17, 1924 when Norman deserted his wife, according to her testimony. She further said he had brandished a revolver before her threatening to kill her and on one occasion threw her out of a moving auto into a gutter.

She testified in the deposition filed yesterday that in 1916 Norman returned from the Mexican boarder declaring he must have $2200 to return to the treasury of the Fourteenth Infantry of the New York National Guard, according to Mrs. Norman. She said she sold a small house to raise the money necessary to meet the payment. Her deposition concluded declaring that two of her four minor children were ill and under the care of a physician and that she was without funds either to care for herself and children or to contest the divorce.

Norman is at present in Dallas, Tex., on a business trip. He receives a salary of $10,000 a year. Norman filed suit Nov. 21, 1925, making the single allegation of desertion.

Robbers Capture Watchmen and Ransack 200-Acre Drug Plant at Leisure.

By the Associated Press.

RAHWAY, N. J., July 3.—Eleven robbers, working four hours and a half, early today raided the plant of Merck & Co., manufacturing chemists, covering 200 acres and comprising 46 buildings. They shot one man, injured at least two others and broke open five safes in different buildings, escaping with probably $1500 in cash, together with a truck loaded, it is believed, with drugs they considered valuable.

and continued unti labout 5:20 a. m. All watchmen on duty at the plant were captured singly and bound with copper wire, and telephone wires were cut in every building entered.

John Evans, a watchman, was shot through the left forearm, and Samuel Trepicka and Henry Lampert were beaten with blackjacks.

The Merck property is surrounded by a six-foot wire fence topped with lines of barbed wire. Entrance is believed to have been gained from a wooden section by crawling under the wire.

The robbers proceeded systematically from building to building, preventing possible opposition and alarm.

'MISS JONES ANNOUNCING' JOINS RED CROSS PUBLICITY STAFF

Former Radio Program Director Will Have Charge of Public Information in 17 States.

Mrs. Archibald T. Campbell—better known as Miss V. A. L. Jones—probably the best known woman radio announcer and program director in the United States, has joined the staff of the American National Red Cross as assistant director of public information. Mrs. Campbell is known to the world as "Miss Jones announcing." She will make her headquarters with the Midwestern Branch Office of the Red Cross in St. Louis, directing the publicity and public information service in the 17 states and 1532 Red Cross chapters comprising this branch, and will take up her duties on July 6.

Mrs. Campbell was the first woman radio announcer in America. She is a native of Virginia and a graduate of Leland Stanford University. Prior to her radio activities with KSD, she did newspaper and magazine work in San Francisco, New York and St. Louis. She directed the publicity of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra for ten years. Many of these activities were carried on simultaneously, especially during the war period when she handled all the publicity in connection with raising the St. Louis quota of men for the World War and headed a State organization of relatives of soldiers and sailors from Missouri.

COUNTY SEWER DECISION HALTS $2,700,000 JOB

Supreme Court in Holding Invalid This Law, Opens Way for Attack on Three Others.

RULING A BLOW TO ANTI-ANNEXATIONISTS

Registration, Jury Commission and Parole Board Acts Might Be Fought on Same Grounds.

There are two effects from the decision by the Supreme Court of Missouri en banc, yesterday, which held the new St. Louis County sewer law to be unconstitutional.

It opens the way for attack by suit on three other State laws applying particularly to St. Louis County—the registration and election board law, the jury commission law and the parole board law.

It also deprives county opponents of the pending annexation proposal of one argument and aids those who favor the merger with the city, which is to be voted on in October. Anti-annexationists depended on the sewer law just held invalid to support their argument that the county could provide it with sewers. Now their opponents declare that city aid is needed for this. Introduction of the sewer law in the Legislature by State Senator Ralph, of St. Louis County, was regarded as a move to fight annexation.

In addition, the Supreme Court decision has stopped projects estimated to cost $2,700,000, to provide sewer facilities in five districts, having about 50,500 population. It is a setback for relief of conditions recently denounced by State health authorities.

Called Special Legislation.

The Ralph sewer law was held unconstitutional on the ground that it violated a constitutional provision against local or special legislation. Its title provided that it should apply only to counties adjoining a city of 700,000 population or more, so that no county but St. Louis County could take advantage of it.

Somewhat similar titles were used in the registration, jury commission and parole board laws. However, no intention to attack these measures has been manifested.

In the case of the registration law, enacted in 1923, after the primary election frauds the previous year, there was a direct constitutional mandate for the Legislature to provide such an act whenever the population of any county passed a certain point. St. Louis County was the first to pass the point. This condition might protect this law against attack, but the courts might construe its title, which applies directly to the one county, to be a matter of local legislation.

Ralph Withholds Comment.

Senator Ralph, when apprised of the court decision yesterday, said he would not comment before reading it. The decision pointed out that the sewer law had a camouflage title, attempting to create the color of a general law. The decision added that Senator Ralph, in framing the act, "was in a constitutional hole and was using his best effort to get out of it."

Before the sewer law was enacted in 1925 old provisions permitted the creation of special taxing districts by the County Court to build sewers with the bills coming due in five years. The Ralph law provided for creation of sewer districts by municipal corporations upon petition to the Circuit Court, with power to issue bonds maturing in 20 years. One point of opponents of the new law was that it violated the principle of majority rule in that only 100 petitioners were needed for a district.

The Attorney General filed a test suit April 10, in the nature of quo warranto proceedings, at the request of Senator Ralph and other attorneys, with the expectation that the law would be sustained and doubt removed as to legality of sewer district bonds, none of which had been issued. The exact nature of the action was to oust the Board of Supervisors of the Northwest Maplewood district, the first one formed.

Supreme Court Ruling.

Judge Graves wrote the opinion of the Supreme Court, in which all his associates concurred except Judge White, who was absent.

"It is so clearly unconstitutional to our mind," Judge Graves wrote, "that many questions need not be discussed at all. In the first place the act applies to St. Louis County alone, and can never apply to any other county in the State without a constitutional amendment."

The Judge stated the law purported to deal with sewer districts in rural counties, and held a general law could be passed to apply either to all rural counties or to some reasonable classification of counties. If special conditions existed in St. Louis County requiring a special law, he stated, the law should have been under Section 54 of Article 4 of the Constitution, which covers such situations. No effort was made to conform to that section, he said.

"Our view is that a general law could be made to cover the situation there (in St. Louis County) as well as similar situations in other counties," he continued, "at least a reasonable classification of counties could be made, which is not done by the act."

The Judge recalled the suit was instituted as a friendly one, but said the friendliness had not continued long. "Unsattisfied taxpayers rushed to the assistance of the Attorney-General in his attack upon the law," he continued, "and interested parties and communities rushed to the assistance of counsel for prospective bond purchasers. So what appeared to be friendly at first has turned out to be a real contest."

Stetson Jr., American Minister, has been invited by the Government to go to Boukier's historic winehouse, which was built in 1610. Wine of the vintage of 1776 will be served to Stetson in a glass from which Kosciusko drank to American prosperity 150 years ago.

KANSAS CITY POLICE FORCE PAYS CALLAWAY COUNTY $14

Represented Fine Against Three Detectives Who Had No State Auto License.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FULTON, Mo., July 3.—The Kansas City police force today paid Callaway County for the failure of three detectives to have a State license on their car when they visited Fulton, May 26.

Detectives Reed, Young and Joy came here in May for a stolen automobile and while here were arrested for failure to have a State license on their own car. They had no funds with them and agreed, according to Prosecuting Attorney T. A. Fawcett, to send a check for the fine and costs of $14.50.

Later Sheriff W. P. Garret met with refusal when he tried to collect the fine by mail and it was whispered about that if he came to Kansas City he would be thrown in jail there. He had announced his intention of going after the fine anyhow, some time next week, when the check for the fine was received this afternoon.

FRANCE WILL IMPORT FISH TO KILL RIVIERA MOSQUITOES

Action Prompted by Success of Gambusia Patruelis in the Hawaiian Islands.

PARIS, July 3.—The departments of Southern France have decided to bring a few million Gambusia Patruelis, a tiny fish from Hawaii, in an effort to exterminate the mosquitoes. An attempt to breed these small fishes in France will be made and if the venture proves successful they will be placed in all the ponds and water pools on the Riviera. They eat the mosquito larvae.

Two barrels of the fish would be enough to kill all the mosquitoes in Southern France, quitoes in Southern France, the officials said. They decided to try the plan after reading an American health department report in which it was claimed that the gambusia introduced in the Hawaiian Islands in 1904, succeeded in exterminating the mosquitoes within 22 years.

OFFERS PROOF OF DODGE'S SALE OF REMUS WHISKY

LaGuardia Exhibits Photostatic Copies of Documents to Substantiate Charges of Plot.

3500 BARRELS GIVEN FOR $100,000 NOTE

Letter on St. Louis Hotel Paper, Signed by Former Dry Law Agent, Gives Details of Deal.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Documentary evidence of an alleged conspiracy between Franklin L. Dodge Jr., a former agent of the Department of Justice, and Mrs. Imogene Remus, wife of George Remus, the Cincinnati bootleg king, to dispose of more than 3500 barrels of whisky held in Remus' name in bonded warehouses, was presented to the House today by Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York.

LaGuardia presented photostatic copies of letters and contracts between Dodge, Matt Hinkel, a former Cleveland whisky dealer; Joseph Breitenstein, a former United States District Attorney, and Mrs. Remus to substantiate his charges, made in March, this year, that Dodge had conspired with Mrs. Remus while her husband was in the Atlanta prison, to obtain possession of Remus' property. Five days before Remus was released, Mrs. Remus filed a suit for divorce.

Categorical denial of LaGuardia's original charges was contained in a letter Representative Grant M. Hudson of Michigan read into the Congressional Record in April. LaGuardia answered Hudson and Dodge in May and made the additional charge that 326 cases of whisky had been stolen from the Federal Building at Indianapolis. The Department of Justice found this latter charge to be true.

Note Secured by Whisky.

The first of the exhibits LaGuardia read and exhibited was a photostatic copy of a collateral note, dated at Cleveland, O., July 15, 1925, signed by Mrs. Remus and made payable to Breitenstein for $100,000, with which she gives 3591 barrels of whisky as collateral.

LaGuardia charged that on the date this note was signed, Dodge was in the Government service and had knowledge of the note. Attached to the note was an itemized list of the barrel numbers and number of barrels of whisky stored at the old Lexington Club distillery, the Fleischmann distillery, Burke Springs distillery, W. P. Squibb & Co. Rugby distillery, Hill & Hill distillery. All these were identified by Remus as his property, LaGuardia said.

Copy of Dodge Letter.

LaGuardia's second exhibit, written in longhand on Hotel Statler (St. Louis) stationery, bearing Dodge's signature, read as follows:

"The contract between Mr. Hinkle Wolf and myself is as follows: That as soon as the following whisky is transferred from the warehouses to the James E. Pepper warehouse, that Mr. Wolf pay $50 a barrel for 1957 barrels at Pogue distillery, and the 300 odd barrels at Louisville public warehouse. The 70 barrels at Hill & Hill are being handled by Mr. Wolf, who will get between $50 and $60 a barrel for this assortment.

"Mr. Hinkle is handling all the transactions and he lives at Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland. Mr. Breitenstein, attorney-at-law, Cleveland, will also be advised, so that he will know all of this matter. The New York draft for $12,000, issued by the Phoenix National Bank, Lexington, on Liberty bonds as collateral, is made out to Mr. Hinkle, but is the property of Mrs. I. Remus. I also have the Pogue stock for 500 shares. (Signed) F. L. Dodge Jr."

Liquor Receipts Shown.

This exhibit was a photostatic copy of the original, LaGuardia declared.

As proof that this deal was consummated, LaGuardia displayed photostatic copies of receipts from the James E. Pepper Co., dated Nov. 24, 1925, showing that a part of the same consignment was delivered by Mrs. Remus to Breitenstein.

The New York Congressman also exhibited photostatic copy of a receipt from Hinkle, showing he received whisky certificates from Dodge.

He also had photostatic copies of a signed statement made by Breitenstein to Mrs. Remus concerning certain mortgages, and another receipt dated Jan. 28, 1926, from Hinkle for 37 barrels of whisky received from Dodge.

These exhibits, LaGuardia declared, fully substantiated the original charges he made against Dodge in a speech on the floor of the House March 24, 1925, which later was denied by Dodge in a letter written to Representative Hudson and inserted in the Congressional Record.

MARKETS AS SECOND HALF 1926 OPENS

Events of Past Six Months Reviewed — Some of Reasons for Recent Upturn of Stock Prices Recounted.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange says:

"That the second half of 1926 would find industry active and stocks rising nobody guessed six months ago when the forecasts for the new year were drawn up. All of the prophets predicted then that the volume of trade would continue large during the first part of the year but what the subsequent trend might be they did not know. Some authorities felt that depression must certainly follow the 1925 prosperity once the momentum of the forward wave had spent itself. Others simply refused to look beyond the first half of the new year. Even so recently as March, when the stock market paid dearly for its excesses, sentiment was mixed and for a time fears of recession in industry multiplied rapidly. Then came a reduction in the rediscount rate of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, distinctly easier money, the Mellon statement on the good condition of Government finances and an upturn in stocks that has lifted the averages to a position very nearly on a level with the early February peak. Indeed, Steel common, the most prominent issue listed on the New York Stock Exchange, lately has advanced into record high ground. With it numerous leading stocks of the seasoned class have moved forward in equally impressive fashion.

Question of Influence.

"When the student of business conditions looks about him nowadays to learn what he can of prospects he must find it difficult to determine whether it is the upturn in stocks that cheers the business community or an improvement in trade that encourages the market. The question is not one that can be answered categorically since the better market and better sentiment began about the same time and each has helped the other along. Stocks have advanced for the reasons that the March reaction was overdone, that business has held up better than expected and that money is available in unlimited quantities at low rates. Much of the improvement in sentiment similarly may be traced to the more sober attitude toward business that was adopted when the earlier pessimism was not borne out in the statistics. Perhaps the advancing stock market has done more than anything else to dispel fears of depression but except for the performances of the stock market earlier in the year, both on the upside and downside, apprehensions for the future would not have been serious.

What Reports Showed.

"As a matter of fact, the reports of earnings, trade statistics and evidences of new business have been unusually encouraging most of the year to date. In none of the key industries for which trouble was predicted six months ago may basis be found for apprehension even now. In the steel industry operations have run substantially ahead of a year ago, prices have stiffened and the demand still holds up. In the building industry high records have been set and even if activity slackens from now on, as is likely, the volume for the year will approximate that for 1925. In the automobile manufacturing industry the 1926 production to date has exceeded all records for a similar period. Such signs would not be so pleasant in different circumstances. But this full output of goods has not been accompanied by accumulations in the hands of the distributor or by rising commodity prices. Undoubtedly some stocks have been accumulated, but the inventory position is not dangerous and, what is equally significant, the few goods on hand were not bought to hold for higher prices.

Agricultural Situation.

"Disparities in the agricultural situation puzzle the experts, but in the end we may find that the difficulties were not, after all, of a character to incite lasting political disturbances. One of the most bitter grievances of the farmer is that the ratio between hog and corn prices has been upset but that this will be corrected within another six months. Corn prices have been low but hogs lately have reached a new high price since 1920 and it is in the form of hogs that most of the corn is marketed. The short corn crop in 1924 started the difficulty by forcing up the price of corn and reducing the number of hogs fed. In the next year farmers consequently had no hogs to which to feed their corn. Corn prices declined and hog prices rose. It takes time to adjust the relations between the supply of corn and hogs once the chain is broken, and this grievance one of these days will disappear. Cotton prices have weakened on estimates of a large crop, but here, too, it may be that a rejuvenation of the sick cotton industry, through a stabilization of cotton prices at a reasonable level, will be helpful in the long run."

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 3.—A progressive but orderly upward movement in stock prices took place this week under the leadership of United States Steel common, which soared to a new high record for all time at 144½, approximately 5 points above the best price previously attained and 27 points above the low level reached on the spring reaction.

Other outstanding financial developments of the week were the successive establishment of new high records by the railroad price averages on each day of the week and the collapse of French and Belgian francs to the lowest levels in history slightly above 2.60 cents.

The remarkable buying movement in United States Steel, which was extended to the other steel shares as well, was based partly on revised estimates of larger second quarter earnings and partly on prospects of a more liberal return to stockholders either through a distribution of surplus, an increased dividend or a split-up of shares.

Indicative of the industry's prosperity was the announcement that the steel output in the first half of the year had broken all records for this period and that operations showed no sign of immediate slackening. Bethlehem, Republic, Sloss-Sheffield, Gulf States, Youngstown, Inland and United Alloy issues all recorded improvement during the week.

Interest in the rail shares was quickened by the outline of an amended Nickel Plate merger plan which the Van Sweringens are preparing to lay before the Interstate Commerce Commission as soon as directors of all the constituent roads have signed their approval. Action was taken by the Erie directors last week but their decision was not made public. Virtually all the Van Sweringen stocks, including the Nickel Plate, Chesapeake & Ohio, Erie and Pere Marquette issues, reached the highest levels of the year in response to reports of more favorable terms for most of the stockholders. A steady demand was noted for Union Pacific, and other investment rail issues.

General Motors shared for a time the leadership of the market with United States Steel, crossing 149, to the highest level of the year, but the motor group as a whole displayed only moderate strength. Allied Chemical, Texas Gulf Sulphur and United States Cast Iron Pipe were among the best ground gainers of the week.

Only a temporary money stringency was experienced in the face of a recordbreaking distribution of dividend and interest payments, exceeding $600,000,000 around the first of the month. Call money at one time rose to 5 per cent, but the rate was later reduced to 4½.

Grain and other commodity markets were generally firmer, although a sharp break of $1.50 to $2 a bale in cotton prices followed the publication of the first Government crop report of the season. Part of this loss was recovered before the market closed for the week.

Dry Goods Market Review.

NEW YORK, July 3.—In many divisions, primary dry goods markets were closed today because of the holiday. Cotton goods were somewhat easier, spots of 64x60s being available at 7c and 68x73s at 7⅞c, both ¼ of a cent down. Yarns were dull. Japan shipments of raw silk for the season ending June 30 show shipments to the United States of 411,960 bales; Europe, 18,800; stock, including Kobe, 19,000 bales. This compares with shipments to the United States, in 1925 of 389,877; Europe, 18,842; and stocks, 15,000. American woolen lines of men's wear for spring will be opened on Wednesday.

Tentative Valuations Made.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Tentative valuation of the El Paso & Southwestern Railroad was placed by the Interstate Commerce Commission today at $15,000,000 as of June 30, 1917.

The El Paso and Northeastern was tentatively valued at $1,385,000 as of the same date, and the New Jersey & New York Railroad was tentatively valued at $1,48[illegible],000 as of June 30, 1918.

PRICE CHANGES NOT LARGE ON LOCAL MARKET

Transactions in Individual Stocks, With One or Two Exceptions, Under the Five Hundred Share Basis for the Week.

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, July 2.—A total of less than three dozen stocks participated in the activities on the local market during the past week. Final prices were unchanged in about half of the cases while among the other half the gains only slightly outnumbered declines.

In only one instance, Missouri Colliand, did transactions aggregate in excess of 500 shares for the week. Boyd-Welsh and Fred Medart were probably next in comparative activity along with Scruggs common. A little International Shoe sold higher.

Bond transactions were about on par with previous week.

BOND MARKET FEELS NEW STOCK INTEREST

NEW YORK, July 3.—The investment during the week just past was limited by the renewed interest in stocks. Transactions fell off as attention was concentrated on the rise in stocks. The pause, however, did not involve any weakness. Prices were well maintained all through the list. It was simply that there was a lack of the normal in-and-out business, which, even in the bond market, goes to make up a large share of the dealings.

Prices of the highest grade of investment bonds are off a point or two from the year's best. Even the general average is down a shade from the level of three weeks ago. The higher yielding descriptions, bonds which have some speculative quality, have done better, and this is true in the domestic and foreign fields alike.

The fact is that bond prices are now so high and yields are so low compared with what they have been at any time since the World War that buyers, institutional or individual, shop around trying to find something selling out of line. When their ideas are not met they step aside for a time, awaiting a reaction, which does not materialize and finally they enter the market again and prices once more slowly rise. This procedure has been going on for a long time now and it has always resulted the same way.

Surplus funds accumulate and eventually are forced out into the market. Undoubtedly this is what will happen with the enormous distribution of half yearly interest and dividends. At any rate, bankers continue to offer new securities with every confidence that they will be quickly sold and holders of seasoned bonds are content to wait until buyers are willing to meet their views.

Weekly Metal Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The splendid showing made by the steel industry as a whole during the first half of the present year, following last year's record production, resulted in a feeling of extreme optimism in the market during the past week. Buyers of steel generally displayed more confidence by making larger purchases for both prompt and forward delivery.

Pig iron was more active generally, with prices steady.

The copper market remained quiet. With no improvement in conditions abroad, buyers for domestic consumption have been holding off and there were rumors of price shading on small lots during the earlier part of the week. Later some business was reported at the 13¾-cent level, however, while there was some improvement in the inquiry and producers generally were said to be holding for 13¾ cents.

Tin ruled comparatively steady for prompt straits on account of favorable monthly statistics, with demand mainly from dealers. Futures reflected continued indifference on the part of consumers and declined about a cent.

Lead held steady, with producers well booked up for July and with August offerings light. Consumers appeared well supplied for immediate needs.

Zinc was steady with a fair consuming inquiry, but offerings from smelters were light, due to the firmness in ore.

Antimony was steady owing to the firmness of china, with a better consuming demand.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review says:

"The outstanding feature of the week was the collapse in the French exchange rate carrying checks on Paris down to the new low record of 2.62, passing the previous low of 2.72¼ made on May 14. This new low record was established without any violent trading or fluctuations the market on several days being directed by transactions in London where declines occurred before New York opened and the quotations here were adjusted to a great extent to the London level with a further downward movement coming in the late afternoons for the few past days. Tourists expenditures must be already on a large scale with a certainty of an increased flood of spendings during the coming season but while institutions making a specialty of tourists fund transfers are doing an enormous business the purchase of Paris drafts has not exerted the slightest influence on the exchange market.

"Belgian exchange in which there is only a small amount of business transacted here followed French closely and was also established at a new low record. Developments in Italy looking to improvement in its commercial and mercantile position were without strengthening influence in Italian exchange and lire checks moved steadily downward all through the week. In many quarters early strength in sterling carrying cables up to $4.86⅞ the highest since August 1914, was looked on as the most important feature in the week's developments. That high level, however, was maintained for only a short period, being followed by a reaction to $4.86½. Spanish exchange had wide movements during the week an advance to 16.27 in peseta checks being followed by a sharp decline to 16.05 yesterday. Fluctuations in Scandinavian exchange were unusually narrow leaving the market for those exchanges showing little net changes at the end of the week.

WHEAT CLOSES LOWER ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

Corn Futures Slightly Higher —Local and Kansas City Only Markets Open.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, July 3.—Trade in futures was light on the local market today, as was to be expected with the local board and Kansas City exchange the only two American markets open.

Wheat futures showed fractional decline at the close but corn prices were slightly higher.

In the local cash grain market old soft wheat of good quality met a limited demand and prices were down 1 cent. Off grades were fairly steady, there being a little better inquiry for cheap milling and mixing grades. The first new Missouri wheat on market, a car of 61.2-lb. No. 1 red of 9.20 per cent moisture, received bid of $1.38. Hard wheat declined 2c on both old and new. Buyers held off. Heavy test old wheat sold at $1.39 to $1.40. New Oklahoma and Kansas No. 1 hard and No. 1 dark hard on track at $1.37 to $1.41½. Mills bought few cars new No. 1 hard 13 per cent protein for immediate shipment at $1.36. To arrive, 5000 bu new No. 1 hard 12 per cent protein or less at $1.35 for next week's shipment, 5000 bu new No. 1 hard 12 per cent protein at $1.34½ for next week's shipment. Cash corn prices were unchanged except on No. 2 white, which was ½c lower. There was fair demand. Most of the yellow was taken by mill and scattered local trade, white and mixed going to elevators. There was a fair demand for oats at unchanged prices. There was a good clearance.

Unchanged to lower prices prevailed in the early trading. Liverpool wheat closed unchanged on July and ⅜d. lower on September. Winnipeg early was ¼c to ½c lower. Kansas City wheat declined fractionally early. Corn here was unchanged to fractionally higher.

July wheat opened at $1.30⅝, Sept. wheat, $1.32⅛; Dec. wheat, $1.35¼; July corn, 75⅝c, and Dec. corn, 76¼c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 96,600 bushels, compared with 63,000 a week ago, included 56 cars local and 13 through. Corn receipts, which were 86,800 bushels, compared with 70,000 a week ago, included 52 cars local and 10 through. Oats receipts, which were 44,000 bushels, compared with 38,000 a week ago, included 16 cars local and 6 through. Hay receipts were 5 cars local and 1 through.

Flour and Meal.

Some mills reported an improvement in demand for new flours. It was said that good-sized sales have been made to large bakers during the week for July-August delivery, specific amounts and prices not being made known. Little was done in old flours. Sales actually reported today were 1000 barrels new hard flour and 1 car to mills' regular trade on private terms, 1 car old extra fancy at $5.50 jute and 300 sacks for export to Cuba. Bids from Europe were called too low.

SPRING WHEAT BELT NEWS LARGELY DOMINATES MARKET

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Facing the critical time for the new spring top, wheat values show a decided tightening up of late, except trifling declines in quotations on July delivery. Reports of drouth and excessive heat in the Northwest have been a good deal responsible, shifting speculative interest largely away from the harvest fields southwest and west.

Compared with a week ago, Chicago prices vary from ⅝c off to 2¾c advance, with corn ranging from ½c declines to ⅞c gain, oats ⅛c to 2⅝@2½c down and provisions 2c lower to a rise of 25c.

Pessimistic reports this season as to the outlook for spring wheat have put in an appearance earlier than usual. Observers of field conditions report damage over many sections northwest, South Dakota and the lower half of North Dakota in particular.

Throughout this region, according to trade advices here, much of the planted area will apparently fail to yield any more than a return of seed.

Unofficial estimates by the foremost Chicago experts indicate that, judging by present information, 1926 spring wheat crop will total about 207,000,000 bushels, a minimum seldom reached in a long series of years. Under such circumstances and with the annual race yet to come against injury from black rust, prices for deferred deliveries of wheat have shown a tendency to rise, the most distant active month, December, rising the highest.

Contrasting with the backwardness of spring wheat, the largest winter wheat crop being harvested in the Southwest and West is being rushed to market with surprising rapidity. As a result, primary receipts in the last week have been nearly double those of a year ago. Mills and exporters, though, have taken the grain about as offered, and less than the usual amount of hedging sales in the speculative market has developed.

Influenced more or less by defeat of the bulk of proposed farm legislation at Washington, corn and oats have touched new low price record for the season. Lateness of the growing crop of corn, however, has tended at times to rally the corn market.

Provisions have reflected improvement in cash demand, both for meats and lards.

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, July 3.—The most liberal run of cattle yarded here this year was on sale last week. Considering the fact that last week had but five days trading owing the National Yards closing Saturday in celebration of July Fourth it was an exceptionally heavy run. In the face of liberal receipts big killers gave attention to anything displaying good grain finish and values on the best end are showing a 15c to 25c advance. A top on steers of $10.40 was made in several instances, while bulk of fed cattle moved from $8.75 to $10.25. Medium grass cattle were hardly as good, however, and in most cases closed the week 15c lower. Westerns were in liberal supply. Market closed around 25c to 50c lower for the week. A spread of $5.35 to $7.50 caught the Texas steers with a few loads of Oklahomas at $8.50 early. Heifers and good fed yearlings were exceptionally good selling classes. Market last week showed another advance of 25c to 50c bringing the market on these classes to the highest level of the year. A new top for the year on stright heifers of $10.40 was made while mixed consignments sold up to $10.50. A range of $9 to $10.25 caught bulk of best yearlings. Cows were uneven. Some right good beef cows and choice top heavy kinds were steady but medium cows were largely 25c to 40c lower. Top cows $7.25 while bulk of best sold from $6.25 to $7.50. Medium grades sold from $4.75 to $6. Canners and cutters closed steady to 10c to 15c lower selling from $3.25 to $4.75. Bulls were strong movers, especially god weight bolognas which sold up to $6.50. Stockers and feeders were very much as they have been for the past 30 days. Demand exceeded available offerings for choice, good colored cattle and prices ruled strong but medium and plain stockers were little better than steady. A spread of $6 to $8 caught the bulk of sales. At the high point vealers sold at $12, but late week top and bulk hovered around $11.75. Canner yearlings continued to sell at $4.50.

Erratic Hog Market.

One of the most erratic weekly sessions that the hog trade has seen for some time was brought to a close Friday, prices averaging sharply lower than the previous week's close on practically all grades of swine. Receipts during the early part of the week showed an increase both locally and at other points throughout the West, and with an insufficient order buying demand to move this surplus, the market was left to the packers in many instances and sharp declines followed such an event. Prices were on the downward trend up till the Wednesday session, when an upward reaction raised values and subsequent advances had raised the peak to $15 in the closing session. This price was short-lived, however, and the three consecutive holidays (considering that packers do not kill Monday) had a very adverse effect on prices. Light hogs showed a decline of 10c to 35c from the previous week's close, at $14.75 to $15, medium and light weight butcher hogs 25c to 35c off and heavy hogs generally 50c lower. Closing sales on this class were noted down to $13.85, against a low of $14.40 the previous week. Another feature which proved a drug on the market was that shippers with the expectation of receiving orders later in the week took a good share of offerings during midweek and when orders failed to materialize were forced to throw these hogs back on the market. Bulk of sales for all weights during the week is $14 to $14.90. Pig prices were very uneven and ranged from higher to lower for the week. Best killing-weight pigs of 130 lbs. average and better close the week in good shape, at 15c to 25c loss, lighter weights and peewees, however, show 50c to $1 decline. This drop was effected under abnormal conditions, however. Bulk of good pigs cleared at $14.75 to $15, with lighter kinds and inferior Southern grades downward to $12.50. Packing sows suffered a 75c cut in price, light kinds dropping to $12.25 and bulk of offerings moving in a spread of $12 to $12.15. Stags were in good demand throughout the week and except for a decline on the lighter grades in sympathy with sows, little change was shown. Best light kinds dropped back to a $12.25 top, with bulk selling the same at $11 to $12.

Lamb Prices Lower.

Generally lower values prevailed in the lamb division the past week, advances and declines appearing at very irregular intervals. Closing sales showed a decline of 25c to 50c from the previous six-day period windup—Southern lambs carrying the big end of the decline. This, however, is nominal, as supplies in this line were too light on the close to furnish an accurate criterion of the market. Top for the week was $14.50, with bulk of Kentucky and Tennessee lambs making this figure. Natives ranged from $13.75 to $14.25, with the bulk of sales at one figure, $14. Medium and off quality lambs ranged $12 to $13 largely, some selling around $10 to $11 that graded little better than culls. This latter named class showed no change from day to day, clearing at $9 chiefly throughout the week. Skips sold mainly around $6 to $7, although plainest kinds ranged downward to $5. Buyers for these grades were few and salesmen found it hard to move them at anythink like satisfactory prices. The aged class for sheep showed no change the past week. Best light mutton ewes bulked at $5.50, with medium to good kinds $4.50 to $5. Plain and heavy kinds ranged downward to $4. Choppers and bucks cleared at $2 to $3, with canners $1 to $2. Complete quotations of the different classes follow: Good to choice lambs, $14 to $14.50; medium to good, $12 to $14; plain to medium, $10 to $12; cull and common, $9 to $9.50; skips, $5 to $7. Good to choice mutton ewes, $5 to $5.50; medium to good, $4.50 to $5; plain to medium, $4 to $4.50. Choppers and bucks, $2 to $3; canners, $1 to $2. Fat goats, $2 to $3; thin goats, $1 to $1.50. Fat kids, $5 to $6; thin kids, $2 to $4.

Horse and Mule Market.

Receipts of horses and mules for the current week total 745 head, compared with 471 head last week and 247 a year ago. There is a complete clearance out of first hands. The liberal receipts for the week are due largely to the arrival of stock to fill contract needs rather than to any general demand. As a matter of fact, trade in ordinary commercial types is very quiet. Prices hold steady on the big fat mules and Spanish types, also big, rugged work horses. No dependable outlet for common to medium grades of mules or horses and the undersized stock is particularly draggy. June receipts totaled 2108 head, the heaviest supply for the sixth month since 1921.

COTTON PRICES ADJUSTED TO LATEST CROP INDICATIONS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The feature of the cotton market during the past week was the publication of the first Government crop report of the season yesterday. As usual, this official statement as to end June crop prospects was preceded by a number of private reports, and trading was pretty much confined to the evening-up of old commitments after the first of these reports made their appearance.

As a result, fluctuations were rather nervous and irregular, but rallies on covering by people who had sold on the declines earlier in the month were held in check by the continued favorable character of the daily weather and crop advices, and the market broke rather sharply after the publication of the Government crop figures. The private reports on the average, had pointed to a condition of about 76.2, an acreage of about 47,334,000, and a crop indication in the neighborhood of 15,406,000 bales.

The Government report placed the condition at 75.4, or slightly below the average of the private figures, but estimated the acreage under cultivation as of June 25 at 48,898,000 acres, which naturally pulled up the crop indication.

The latter pointed to a yield of 15,635,000, or about 200,000 bales above the average of the private reports, and evidently inspired considerable selling. All the new crop months made new low records for the season shortly after the report was published, and while the decline was checked by covering for over the three-day adjournment, the market was nervous and unsettled at the close of the week.

The Government's figures on the crop to be expected, if conditions are as unfavorable as in 1921, 1922 and 1923, during the balance of the season, were 13,726,000 bales, and the indication based on conditions as favorable as in 1924 and 1925, was 16,294,000 bales. There have been further complaints of insect activities and reports that while rains had favored growth, the plant was not putting on much fruit in some sections, but the most generally expressed opinion was that the crop had made fair progress since the date of the Government report. July and August, however, are regarded as the critical months in the developmnt of the plant and it is during these months that deterioration is considered most likely.

MOVE TO RESTORE ALDERMEN IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Commission Form of Government Is Attacked by Improvement Associations.

An organized movement has been formed in East St. Louis to change the present commission form of government back to the aldermanic form with the Mayor as executive head of the administration.

The movement took form Thursday night at a joint meeting of four East St. Louis improvement associations at which it was charged in speeches that the present form of government does not safeguard the interests of taxpayers in that it is not representative, as it would be in a Board of Aldermen, and further, as government by commission is directed by a majority of the five commissioners, it is most difficult to place responsibility on an individual in the administration.

As an example of how abuses creep into the commission form of government, paving contracts under a so-called closed specification were cited, following which a resolution was unanimously adopted advocating a change in the form of government and providing for the immediate circulation of petitions to this end.

Mayor Opposes Commission.

There were about 400 men and women at the meeting, which was held at Jefferson School, and the situation was earnestly discussed, indicating a determination to go through with the proposal.

Many of those present signed petitions for a change in the form of government that was proposed four years ago, at which time Mayor M. M. Stephens was one of the foremost champions of the change. He has repeatedly expressed a desire for a return to the old form of government on the ground, among other things, that the commission form of government has no head by reason of the fact that it governs through a majority vote of the five commissioners.

Edward Barmann, president of the Lansdowne Improvement Association, presided, and set forth the purposes of the meeting. He plunged at once into a discussion of closed specifications in street and sewer contracts that frequently have aroused the taxpayers, citing the Lansdowne sewer project as an instance of closed specifications that result in high prices for public improvements and big bills against taxpayers.

Tells of Pipe Specifications.

Barmann told a Post-Dispatch reporter that his association had employed expert engineers who would testify that the Lansdowne specifications were so drawn as to eliminate all but one bidder. These engineers, Barmann said found that the pipe specified for the job is manufactured by the Independent Concree Pipe Co. of Indianapolis, and is a patented pipe that can be supplied only by this concern.

The Lansdowne sewer project is estimated to cost $837,000 and to drain a large residential district with 9000 population. The project is now pending before the Board of Public Improvements of East St. Louis. The taxpayers interested have requested hearings, and it was said at the meeting that they would oppose the project through an attorney they have employed until the specification is opened to admit of free competitive bidding.

Edward Guenther, president of the St. Clair Avenue Improvement Association, related that 91 per cent of the taxpayers on that thoroughfare had petitioned the City Council for concrete paving, notwithstanding which the City Council specified asphalt.

Petitions to Be Circulated.

Guenther expressed the opinion that asphalt was specified by the City Council to favor one company that has been awarded all asphalt paving contracts in East St. Louis since 1923 through a specification that called for "lake" asphalt, an exclusive product of the Barber Asphalt Co. of Philadelphia, for which the Concord Construction Co. of East St. Louis has an exclusive agency in East St. Louis.

G. Locke Tarlton controls this company, and taxpayers who have protested against this brand of asphalt on other streets have called it "Tarlton's salve," for the reason that on some jobs it was laid over brick pavement. Previous protests against this pavement, and the closed specification that is said to permit the Concord company to make its own prices, have disclosed that paving prices in East St. Louis are considerably higher than in St. Louis.

Representatives of the Sixth Street and Tenth Street Improvement associations also attended the meeting and pledged support to the program for a new form of government. It was said following adoption of the resolution that petitions for the change would be prepared at once and circulated by a separate organization to be formed for this purpose. It will require 25 per cent of the signatures of all registered voters, or about 7000, to call a special election for a vote on the proposal. The commission form of government was adopted by East St. Louis in 1919.

BRITISH WOMEN ASK FOR EQUAL RIGHTS

Americans Join in Parade Preceding Oratorical Suffrage Demonstration.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 3.—From 15 platforms in Hyde Park—the soap box forum of the empire—British women, with the moral support of American sympathizers, today demanded political equality with men.

Although their demonstration was not accompanied by the militancy of the days of the early suffrage leaders, the speakers hurled vigorous oratorical attacks against their Government for withholding the ballot from women until they are 30 years old although men are enfranchised at the age of 21. Strenuous attacks also were directed against the refusal of the House of Lords to permit peeresses in their own right to sit in that chamber.

A group of 30 Americans, members of the National Women's Party, lent their moral support to the demonstration by marching through London in a great parade of more than 2000 women from Victoria Embankment to Hyde Park.

Carry Flags Used at White House.

The Americans carried a huge banner, proclaiming:

"All women in the United States can vote. Why not here?"

Each marcher in the American division, which followed that of Lady Rhondda's Six Point group, carried one of the historic purple, gold and white flags which once picketed the White House at Washington in the days of American women's fight for the ballot. The Americans did not participate in the speech-making at Hyde Park but outplanted their colorful standards alongside the various rostrums and joined in the applause.

RUBAN ROUGE LOSES WITH JONES UP

Jockey Delays Too Long in Starting Drive at Finish—Final Saturday Card of Fairmount Meeting.

Six Records Shattered in Junior A. A. U. Carnival; Newark Team Wins Title

Graham, California Tech Star, Sets New Figure of 13 Feet 2 7-8 Inches for the Pole Vault—Sober Negotiates 880 in 1:54 4-5.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—East triumphed over the West today when the Newark Athletic Club's athletes captured the National Junior A. A. U., track and field championships in a meet that saw six records toppled.

It was the opening skirmish of the three-day A. A. U. athletic carnival which will be continued Monday and Tuesday at the sesquicentennial stadium with the national senior title games.

The Nework A. C., brought the team crown back east with a score of 31 points after it had been a year in the possession of the Hollywood A. C. The New York Athletic Club finished second with 21 points. The Los Angeles Athletic Club, leading the invading contingent, took third place with 19 points, one more than the Boston A. A., and two more than the Olympic Club of San Francisco.

Graham Furnishes Thrill.

Glenn Graham, California Tech. pole vaulter, and Pincus Sober, New York middle distance runner, furnished the chief thrills of a series of brilliant performances. Graham, who was runner-up to Lee Barnes for the 1924 Olympic title, vaulted to a new mark of 13 feet 2 7-8 inches, breaking the senior as well as the junior record. Sober won the half mile title in 1:54 4-5, displacing a record that has stood for 19 years.

Other record-breaking performances were registered in the javelin by Creth Hiner of the Chicago A. A., with a mark of 196 feet; Levi Casey of the Los Angeles A. C., in the hop, step and jump with a mark of 47 feet, 11⅞ inches; by Mike Pecore of Hazleton, Pa., in the three-mile walk with a time of 23:16 3-10; by Ed Moeller of the Los Angeles A. C., in the discus with a toss of 145 feet, 7¾ inches.

Competition Collapse.

The championships were fought out under a blazing sun that caused the collapse of a number of competitors in the six-mile run and three-mile walk. The distance running title went to an Indian runner, Philip Osif, from the Haskell Institute, Kansas, who outlasted a big field. Pecora won the walk in record time after several of his rivals fell by the wayside, including Frank Miller, Baltimore policeman.

The final team scores: Newark A. C., 31; New York A. C., 21; Los Angeles A. C., 19; Boston A. A., 18; Olympic Club of San Francisco, 17; Pittsburg A. A., 11; Century A. C., of New York, 11; Geneva College, 7; Holy Name Club, New York, 5; Westinghouse Club of Pittsburg, 5; California Tech., 5; Meadowbrook Club of Philadelphia, 5; Chicago A. C., 5; Hazleton, Pa., Y. Edith Cavell Is Easy Winner in Latonia "Oaks"

Black Maria, Another Eastern Filly, Second With Helen's Babe Next.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LATONIA, Ky., July 3. — The East gave the West a decisive trimming in the "Latonia Oaks," worth $10,920 to the winner, when Edith Cavell, Walter M. Jeffords' bay daughter of Man o' War-The Nurse, galloped home in front, while Black Maria, owned by W. R. Coe, another Easterner, landed in second place. These were the only Eastern horses in the race. Hal Price Headley's Helen's Babe was third, with the Coldstream Farm's Barbara fourth. Ten accepted the issue in the rich stake.

Jockey Frank Coltilleti rode Edith Cavell, and she led her rivals over the entire route of one and one-quarter miles, which she covered in 2:03. At no stage did Coltilletti allow her to fully extend herself, and when Black Maria offered a challenge in the stretch he had only to shake her up a bit.

Blabbermouth essayed to run with the Easterners in the early stages, but she again demonstrated that claiming races are her forte.

Dark Phantom Disappoints.

Dark Phantom, of which the West expected much, proved a disappointment. At no time could she run a lick, although she was forced to race wide. Her showing was a sorry one.

Edith Cavell went to the post the choice, at odds of 12 to 5. Black Maria, which won the "Kentucky Oaks," also came in for a lot of consideration, but she was plainly overmatched. The two fillies each carried 126 pounds, and Black Maria had no excuse.

The Oaks winner and Black Maria will be returned to New York tomorrow. Jockey Coltilleti and A. Mortensen, who rode these fillies, went back to the metropolis tonight.

Brown Reaches Final Round in Illinois Tourney

St. Louisan Crushes Shaw With Loss of but Two Games in Three Sets.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Wray Brown, of St. Louis, tenth ranking net star in the United States, went into the final round of the Illinois State men's singles tennis championship today, crushing Art Shaw, fifth ranking western player, in straight sets 6-1, 6-0, 6-1.

In the other semifinal, A. H. Chapin Jr., of Springfield, Mass., came from behind to defeat George M. Lott Jr., leading Western star, 3—6, 6—3, 5—7, 6—4, 6—3. Chapin will play Brown for the title tomorrow.

Brown literally crushed Shaw. His steady barrage of chops and drives kept Shaw pounding his shots into the backstop.

H. H. Bancroft, San Diego, and John Doeg, Santa Monica, had just started their semifinal men's doubles against Art Kaiser and Guerdon Hamilton, when rain stopped play.

Bancroft and Doeg went to the final of the junior doubles by trimming Donald Cram, Nashville and John Thomas, Chattanooga, 6-2, 6-1.

Jean Armstrong won the girls' title taking six straight games from Ruth Willard.

BROWNS PLAY LOOSELY AND LOSE, 8 TO 3

Jim Joe Edwards Toys With Sisler's Men, While White Sox Bat Milt Gaston Almost at Will.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Jim Joe Edwards, the pride of Mississippi, the schoolmaster who forsook his books for the baseball diamond, knew what he was doing. Apparently, he could not have accomplished much with the Browns with books yesterday afternoon. It was too hot. But with a baseball he plotted some baffling curves and taught the Brownies that he was their left-handed master, baseball, if not school.

There were some safe hits against the left-handed delivery of the sturdy Southerner, but they were well scattered and the outcome of the game was not in doubt very long.

The White Sox had a two-run lead before Sisler's men crossed the plate and before they could ring the run register again, the Sox had a 6-to-1 advantage. The final score was 8 to 3, the Browns registering a futile tally in the ninth inning.

Browns Play Loosely in Field.

To make the defeat more one-sided and to make the sailing easier for Edwards, the Browns put up the worst fielding game they have played in months. Four errors were charged and there were other plays where the fielders might have been penalized.

Gaston escaped in the first inning, the only hit off his delivery in the opening frame being a single that Collins bounced off Melillo's shins.

In the second inning, however, the bombardment started in earnest. Sheely opened with a single to left and went to second on Miller's fumble. Harris doubled to left, scoring Sheely, but when Harris tried to stretch the hit, he was out, Miller to McManus. Harris' ambition cost a run, as Kamm followed with a double to right center.

With two down in the third, Eddie Collins drew a pass and Falk smashed a double to center, but Collins tried to score and was out, Melillo taking Durst's throw and relaying to Schang at the plate.

Kamm, the Hitting Kid.

Kamm contributed another extra-base hit in the fourth inning,

Hornsby Will Be On Bench Today, Directing Cards

Manager Will Be Out for Indefinite Period—Extra Gates to Be Open.

Only four games away from first place in the National League pennant race, the Cardinals will begin a series with the leading Cincinnati Reds at Sportsman's Park this afternoon, which opens a long home stay for Hornsby's men.

Manager Hornsby will be unable to play today and, according to Dr. Robert Hyland, club physician, the Cardinal leader will be out for an indefinite period. Hornsby underwent an operation last Tuesday, having a carbuncle removed.

Hornsby to Be on Bench.

"I do not care to hazard a guess as to when Hornsby will be able to return to duty," said Dr. Hyland yesterday afternoon at Sportsman's Park, where Hornsby saw the Browns' game. "We will just have to wait until nature pursues its course and Hornsby recovers. He is still suffering much pain and while he will direct the team tomorrow from the bench, he will not be in uniform, if he takes my advice." "A fine trimming we got today," said Hornsby, when the score of 12 to 3 was flashed on the board. "I'll be out there tomorrow. Why can't I put on a uniform?"

While the Reds and Cardinals are tangling here, the Pittsburg Pirates will be playing at Chicago. The Cubs yesterday finished a series with the Reds in which McCarthy's sluggers took four out of six games, and they will be no easy snap for the world champions, who yesterday took second place away from the Cardinals.

Should the Cardinals win today and the Pirates lose, Hornsby's men would move back into second place, while gaining a full game on the leaders. The locals yesterday moved half a game nearer the goal, although they lost, because Cincinnati dropped a double header to the Cubs.

Cardinal fans holding reserved seat and box tickets for today's game and for tomorrow's double header will find special gates ready to take care of them. President Sam Breardon of the Cardinals announced yesterday that entrances would be open at the old vehicle gate on Spring avenue, between Dodier street and Sullivan avenue. Holders of such tickets will be admitted also through the general admission gates on Dodier street.

Sherdel Likely To Oppose Reds In Game Today

WILL SHERDEL, the little southpaw, who in his last few outs has shown a return to the form which made him the National League's leading hurler in 1925, will likely face the pace-making Cincinnati Reds in the first of a five-game series at Sportsman's Park this afternoon. Jakie May is due for the pacemakers.

The teams will meet in a double-header tomorrow, starting at 2 o'clock.

Latzo Will Box Nelson July 16

Bout at Steubenville, O. Will Be 12 Rounds to a Decision.

By the Associated Press.

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 3. — Pete Latzo, world's welterweight champion, will meet Ted Nelson, Richmond, Va., in a 12-round bout here, July 16. The bout was arranged by the Steubenville Athletic Association.

The fight between Latzo and Nelson will be to a decision.

JONES TO PLAY OVER WASHINGTON COURSE IN MATCH TODAY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Bobby Jones gave his admirers the slip today and went unheralded to the Pomonok Club on Long Island for a round of golf. The new British open champion received enough adulation to last him a long time on his arrival from abroad yesterday, so he took great care that no one should learn in advance of his excursion to Long Island today.

He played a two-ball match with members of the club, and no attempt was made to keep scores.

Jones will leave tomorrow for Washington, where on Monday he will play 36 holes over the Burning Tree Country Club course with Watts Gunn of Atlanta, and probably Roland MacKenzie of Washington.

C. R. SOMERVILLE WINS CANADIAN GOLF TITLE

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Ont., July 3.—C. Ross Somerville of London, Ont., won the Canadian amateur golf championship this afternoon from C. C. Fraser of Montreal in the 36-hole final. He won 4 up and 3 to go.

CHALLENGER EARNS A REFEREE'S DECISION IN TEN-ROUND FIGHT

Twenty Thousand Fans See Rockford, Ill., Lightweight Defeat Champion in Downpour of Rain—No Knockdowns Scored.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 3.—In a downpour of rain and with 15,000 to 20,000 spectators in attendance, Sammy Mandell, the sheik of Rockford, Ill., won the world's lightweight championship today. He was awarded a referee's decision over the grizzled Rocky Kansas, of Buffalo, the titleholder, after a ten-round contest in an open air arena signalizing the opening of legalized boxing in Chicago.

Mandell, in the opinion of the experts at the ringside, won from six to eight of the rounds, by outboxing and out-generalling the veteran titleholder.

Mandell popped left handers into Kansas' face and body with such swiftness and accuracy that the Buffalo veteran was bewildered. Kansas, however, never stopped trying to whip over a knockout punch, but most of his blows failed to find their mark.

The titleholder, battling courageously and aggressively, carried the fight to Mandell, but was ineffective in landing. He appeared to be himself in two or three rounds, cutting loose with a body attack that forced Mandell to break ground, but Mandell managed to escape without serious damage. This was especially true when Mandell was trapped in a corner and Kansas started whaling away, hoping to whip over a knockout punch.

As the fight progressed, Kansas evidently realized that he was running second and made a desperate attempt in the ninth and tenth rounds to land a finishing blow. The elusive Mandell, however, maintained his lead, and kept shooting his left into Kansas' reddened face, always keeping him off balance and never letting him get set.

Kansas is Disappointed.

The fight was held under canditions unparalleled in modern ring history. For two hours previous showers swept the White Sox baseball park, drenching the spectators occupying the ringside seats, and when Mandell and Kansas entered the ring, the felt padding and its canvas covering were rain-soaked, making the footing heavy and slippery. Mandell slipped two or three times in furious mix ups leading to clinches and the heavy-going also made conditions unfavorable for the titleholder.

Kansas and his manager, Dan Rogers, were bitterly disappointed at the decision, the first under the new Illinois fight law. The worst they should have received, they said, was a draw, because of the conditions under which the contest was decided, and the fact that Kansas carried the fight to his opponent.

"It was a shame for Rocky to lose the title under such circumstances," said Rogers. "In our judgment the worst we should have received was a draw. It's a cinch we'll never get another match with Mandell, because he will not get within 20 miles of Kansas. The slippery ring bothered Rocky more than it did Mandell, because Rocky was unable to get set for his punches."

As Mandell left the arena, crowned the new lightweight champion, he was greeted with a tremendous round of cheers, mingled with a few hisses and boos. Some of the spectators evidently thought that the fight wasn't decisive enough for Kansas to lose his title.

Mandell Lost Money.

Eddie Kane, Mandell's manager, promised that the new titleholder would be a fighting champion, meeting any logical contender after he returns from a honeymoon next week. Mandell will be wedded to a boyhood sweetheart.

Mandell, although winning the title, lost several thousand dollars to capture the prize he has sought for three years. The Rockford youth and his manager, Eddie Kane, dug into their own bank rolls to the extent of $50,000 to guarantee this amount to Kansas, win, lose or draw.

Mandell took down 55 per cent of the receipts, which the promoters said amounted to a trifle more than $75,000. They had expected a gate of more than $100,000, which would have assured a profit for the Loyal Order of Moose, under whose auspices the match was held, for the purpose of raising funds to build a gymnasium for the orphan children at Moose Heart.

Chicagoans, denied legalized boxing for 25 years, endured a steady drizzle to watch the flying fists, and seemed to like it. The semi-windup between Shuffle Callahan, an Irish truck driver, and Dan Gaspara, was won by the former by a technical knockout in the ninth round. Gaspara was unable to continue, because of an injured knee.

New Champion's Record Indicates He Lacks a Punch

SAMMY MANDELL, the new champion, is one of a growing army of Italian boys who have climbed to the top, or near it, in ring affairs. Mandell was born 22 years ago in Chicago of Italian-American parentage.

He is 5 feet 6 inches tall and at this time he doesn't have to amputate a leg to get within the 135-pound weight limit.

His first professional fighting occurred in 1920, and in the six or seven years he has been at his profession he has fought 91 fights, knocked out only 17 foes, won 34 decisions fought the same number of no-decision contests, had four draws, has been defeated twice and was knocked out once.

His knockouts came in 1923 at the hands of Joey Sanger. Not a single name of note is listed among his own knockout victims.

He is a clever boxer and New York thinks he is a wonderful boxer, as, indeed, he is, since he outpointed the Gotham flash, Sid Terris.

He is fast and shifty, but can't finish the job when it comes to decisively beating his opponents.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES TEAM WINS ONLY TITLE FOR U. S. AT WIMBLEDO

Cochet and Brugnon Beat Americans in Men's Doubles — Mrs. Godfree Wins Women's Singles Final.

By Herbert L. Bourke,
England's Foremost Tennis Authority.
(Copyright, 1926.)

LONDON, July 3.—It is a fortunate for the Americans gathered here that tomorrow is their Independence day when they will have something to cheer for and celebrate, for there was no cheering material left for the Yankees when the Wimbledon golden jubilee tournament ended this afternoon.

Their representatives had been shut out of the women's singles as the result of which the American gallery was forced to sit through an all-continental final in which Mrs. L. A. Godfree, the former Kitty McKane, vanquished Senorita De Alvarez, and when that was done they suffered the unhappy experience of seeing their mens' doubles team, Vincent Richards and Howard Kinsey, whipped in the final round by Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon of France, and then their mixed doubles team of Kinsey and Miss Mary Browne defeated by the British finalists, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Godfree.

There was great enthusiasm in the Wimbledon stands when Mrs. Godfree, after a great recovery in the final set, won the women's singles title for the second year in succession, beating the Spanish Senorita 6—2, 4—6, 6—4.

Experience Aids Mrs. Godfree.

As I expected it was the case of the more experienced British players exposing the limitations of the Spaniard's game, which is marked with aggressive brilliancy without consistent stroke control.

For the most part Mrs. Godfree was content to play Senorita De Alvarez from the back court; relying on her opponent's mistakes and errors and her own clever tactics to swing the tide of battle. The British matron concentrated on Senorita De Alvarez's forehand, for the latter's back-hand is her most formidable weapon. Cross-court drives to the forehand had the Spaniard frequently running on the defensive, while on some occasions the senorita was running the wrong way when alternate strokes to her back-hand corner were made.

There was a period in the match, however, when Mrs. Godfree seemed to be adopting the wrong tactics in playing so much in the back court. This was notable in the final set when the senorita led 3—1 in games with 40—30 in points. But with a display of grit so characteristic of the British player, Mrs. Godfree came to the net and was rewarded for her courage when her opponent became erratic and began overhitting the ball, in addition to scoring a costly double fault.

When Mrs. Godfree attacked, Senorita De Alvarez, who relies so much on her ground strokes, seemed to have no set scheme of countering.

Suzanne Twice "Indisposed."

It is a coincident of 1925 and this year that Mrs. Godfree won the championship in tournaments in which Suzanne Lenglen retired from play owing to indisposition.

The winning scores of Cochet and Brugnon over Richards and Kinsey in the men's doubles were 7—5, 4—6, 6—3, 6—2. It must be said that Richards is a most hapless player in Wimbledon tournaments and today, as was the case when he and Miss Elizabeth Ryan were defeated in the mixed doubles, he gave his partner inadequate support. The same was true in 1924 in the men's doubles, for while Richards and his partner, Francis T. Hunter, did win the final, it was mainly through Hunter's brilliant work.

Today Richards seldom produced fast convincing service of which he is capable and frequently double faulted. His net game, too, was bad and to be compared with that of the French players who sat on the net leaving no margin for the trap shots by which the Americans hoped to score many points. The winning pair also excelled in low volleys, while Cochet's ground stroking was nothing short of marvelous and produced many openings for Brugnon'es delightful cross volleys.

Eleven consecutive games in the first set went to service before France broke through Richards—the final point being presented to the French players by Richards' double fault. Richards steadied in the next set while the Americans were taking a 4-0 lead, but France rallied to 3-4 and won the ninth game after Cochet twice double faulted. The Americans gained a lead of 21 in the third set, then Richards' service was collared, and although Kinsey won his service games, scoring several aces, the Yankees could not save the set.

French Outplay Americans.

The fourth session of play saw the French so vastly superior that the issue was never in doubt. The final point in their favor was a net from Richards' racquet.

The mixed doubles match, won by Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Godfree, by the scores of 6—3, 6—4, proved the best match of the tournament, and it was no disgrace for the American team of Kinsey and Miss Browne to lose.

The Godfrees never displayed better individual form or teamwork. Kinsey, who removed his eyeshade in the second set, was sometimes bothered by bad light and netted or outed at crucial times. Miss Browne was strong over head, but the feature was the forceful play of Mr. Godfree, who excelled in angular smashes.

During the match two squadrons of airplanes from the Hendon Pageant flew over the courts, forcing a temporary suspension of play.

St. Louis Clubs' Greenest Rookies Become Greatest Stars in 3 Years

OSCAR MELLILO

CHARLES FLINT RHEM.

Browns' Flash Once Called "Worst Infielder"—Cows Chased Cardinal Hurler to School and He Shied at Trains.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Three years ago, while the Cardinals were playing the Milwaukee club of the American Association in an exhibition game in the South, the baseball correspondents and scouts noticed an infielder who was trying to land a job with the minor league team.

"Isn't he terrible? Why do they send fellows like that to a Class AA team?" one scout asked.

"The worst infielder I ever saw," was the verdict of another self-acknowledged expert.

Three years ago a big, raw-boned youngster was pitching for a Southern college team. Somebody who had great respect for a strong arm was attracted by the youngster's speed. He wrote to Branch Rickey, then manager of the Cardinals.

"This kid still shies at the trains and the cows chase him to school every morning, but he's got speed and a terrible curve and he's going to be a great pitcher some day," the letter said. "Better send Barrett down to look him over."

Three Years Later.

Today those two young men, the one the terrible infielder and the other the strong-armed Southerner that the cows chased to school, are major league stars and potential candidates for the honor of being declared the most valuable players to their teams for the 1926 season.

The terrible infielder has developed into a second baseman who is considered the find of the season. He is Oscar Melillo of the Browns. The pitcher is the actual leader in the National League, with 11 victories and only one defeat. He is Charles Flint Rhem of the Cardinals.

Melillo, the Brownie second baseman, will be handicapped by the unfortunate showing of the Browns. If the team had lived up to advance predictions and fought for the pennant, Melillo would come in for much of the credit. He has fielded brilliantly and his batting has been timely. He can range far to his left or race over to his barehand side for brilliant stops. He can throw from any position, he can run and he is clever at starting double plays and at pivoting for the throw to first as the middle man.

Slow hoppers, teasing rollers, hot liners, all chances lok alike to this infield demon, who three years ago was such a joke as a fielder that the scouts and the correspondents moaned because they had to watch him.

Ball's Bargain Buy.

Melillo cost Phil Ball approximately $60,000 in players and cash and Ball would not sell him today for twice the price, in cash. He has made good. He is a fixture at second base. In figuring on rebuilding, as the Browns must do, Melillo is one of the few players forming the nucleus around which the Browns must be built.

The Browns gave Milwaukee four players and cash to bring the total to the $60,000 given out by the Browns as the price paid for Melillo.

The players are Simon and Flippin, infielders, and Danforth and Stauffer, pitchers.

"What value would you place on the players?" was the question put to Business Manager Bill Friel of the Browns.

"I'd place a $6000 valuation on Simon, $7500 on Danforth and $1000 on Stauffer," Friel replied. "We had to buy Flippin from ourselves at Tulsa and we had to pay ourselves $7500 for him. We woudn't take a cent less, so we had to pay it. I'd say Stauffer was worth at least $1000."

4 Players Worth $22,000.

Adding the figures carefully the total of $22,000 given as the valuation of the four players leaves a balance of $38,000 as the cash figuring in the transaction.

"I won't say how much cash," said Phil Ball, "but it was plenty of cash. We'll pay it when we see we're getting something."

Rhem, the Cardinal ace, has a fine chance to gain the honor of being the league's most valuable player and of knocking down that $1000 cash prize. He has the best pitching record in the league thus far and it is due largely to his success on the hill that the Cardinals are fighting for the pennant.

If Sam Breadon, owner of the Cardinals, had suddenly lost his mind and decided to sell Rhem he probably could get any price he asked. A team with a pennant chance would have paid high for the right-hander, for such a pitcher, added to a pennant contender, would make the contender almost a sure thing. Undoubtedly if Rhem had been put on the market before the deadline on major league sales, he would have brought more than $100,000.

What did Rhem cost? How are such pitchers found? What is the history of their entrance into the big league, the story of their journey to a place among the stars?

He Cost Club $3000.

Rhem cost the Cardinals just $3000.

When Charley Barrett went south to look at the green youngster referred to in the letter to Rickey, he found just what he had been advised he would find. A big, raw boned southerner, green as grass, chased to school by the cows each morning and still inclined to shy at trains.

But this lad had the arm. A powerful arm and the knack of curving a baseball. He was pitching for Clemson College. Green, but tinges of gold. So Barrett bought a ticket north for Rhem, another for his college coach and one for himself, and carefully guarding the youngster, the party set out for St. Louis. Barrett did not want anything to go wrong with this deal and so he brought the prospect to Rickey. That meant he was a goner.

Rickey got Rhem and the coach in his office and talked to them for four days, with time out only for lunch and sleep. Finally Rhem and the coach were talked into submission and Rhem signed his name on the dotted line. Three thousand dollars constituted the bonus that was paid to Rhem for signing. Of course, the coach got nothing, he was just interested in seeing Rhem get what was coming to him. Of course.

Recalled From Fort Smith.

Rhem spent one short season at Fort Smith. That was in 1924. He distinguished himself by leading the baseball world at striking out batters. Quickly he was called to the Cardinal colors. He started 1925 by winning six games. Then he got a sore finger or something and lost his effectiveness. But he recovered during the winter and this spring he started out again.

Rhem won 11 of his first 12 games this season. He has a fine chance to equal the record of Vance, whose brilliant pitching for Brooklyn in 1924 won him the honor of being declared the most valuable player in the league.

If the Cardinals win the pennant Rhem and Hornsby will be the leading candidates for the honor, and inasmuch as Hornsby already has had the honor, Rhem probably will be favored by many of the ballot casters.

And this pitcher cost only $3000. And Melillo only $60,000. Each was dirt cheap at the price.

treme pressure in a close finish. The time was 1:59 1-5, as compared with the old mark of 2:00 2-5.

Jones held Fabian far off the pace and it appeared for a moment that he had delayed just one stride too long in starting his sprint. Fire Under, with the rail position, was showing little inclination to weaken. Spanish Name was just a nose back of the leader and they were running close together. As Fabian came up, passing one contender after another, it became a thrilling three-horse race. Then in the last 50 yards, Fabian cut directly in front of Spanish Name, causing Hexham to pull up and finish third, while Fabian went on to nose out Fire Under.

Shades of Night in Sixth.

Shades of Night of the Keeneland Stud had to be far superior to the six others to win the sixth race. The big, black filly was left propping on her hind legs as the barrier was sprung and before Pool could get her in stride, the field was 10 lengths away. Infatuation, on top, raced like the wind for three furlongs and threatened to build up an insurmountable lead.

Finally, Shades of Night started to run and when they went around the far turn had passed up several contenders. At the three-quarters pole she was second, and as they entered the stretch Pool sent her to the front, never to be headed. Infatuation was second and Vennie Sue third.

League-Leading Reds Drop Two Games to Cubs

Wilson Hits Homer in Second Tilt—Scores Are 6-2 and 3-0.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Cincinnati's pennant aspirations were given a setback today when the Chicago Cubs defeated them in both games of a double-header, 6 to 2 and 3 to 0. The locals bunched hits in the first game, driving Mays off the hill in the seventh inning.

In the second game Percy Jones let the league leaders down with five scattered hits while Chicago bunched its hits off Luque. Wilson smashed a home run in the eighth inning.

PHILLIES TAKE TWO GAMES FROM BRAVES; WAYLAND DEAN STARS

BOSTON, July 3.—The Phillies took both games from the Braves 4 to 1 and 3 to 2, here today. In the opener, Mogridge was hit hard in the sixth and seventh innings. Wrightstone knocked in two of the Quaker runs in the final and what proved to be the wining run came in the eighth when Brown dropped Mokan's long fly near the score board. The runner advanced on an infield out and scored on a sacrifice fly.

The first game marked Wayland Dean's fourth straight victory and the fourth time in which he let down the opposition with one run.

GIANTS BEAT ROBINS, DIVIDE DOUBLE BILL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The New York Giants and the Brooklyn Robins broke even in their double-header here today before a 40,000 crowd. The Giants took the first game, 4 to 3, in a great struggle between Greenfield and Grimes, but Scott, Fitzsimmons and V. Barnes were easy for the Brooklyn batters in the second, while J. Barnes was a puzzle. The score was 9 to 2.

Fewster hit a home run with a man on base for the Robins in the first game, while Herman lifted the ball over the fence with two on in the first inning of the second battle off Scott.

LABARBA FAVORITE IN BOUT WITH RIVERS

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 3.—Fidel Labarza, flyweight champion, was a two-to-one favorite today over Georgie Rivers of San Francisco, against whom he defends his title here Wednesday night in a 10-round bout. The champion today was two pounds over the 112-pound flyweight limit. Rivers has had no difficulty in making the weight.

No Ale or Beer For American Athletes Abroad

By the Associated Press.

PLYMOUTH, July 3.

ALE, beer and stout, which are permitted to athletes in training in England, will not be used by the 26 Cornell and Princeton athletes who will compete against Oxford and Cambridge on July 10.

The Americans arrived here today on the Caronia after a smooth voyage which enabled them to carry on their training exercises en route as scheduled.

The American athletes laughed at a report that they had brought their own drinking water supply. Their spokesman said that they would live and train under English conditions—but minus ale, beer and stout. They felt sure that all would be acclimatized within a few days.

The college men are welcomed by J. P. McGovern, vice president of the American Olympic Association, and Evan Hunter, secretary of the British Olympic Association. Later they proceeded to Oxford to begin training.

Left Hook Will Put John Risko In Title Class

Cleveland Heavyweight Who Shows Here July 13 a Big Bat Nelson.

Fight fans began to take notice when Promoter Leo Heyman announced the signing of John Risko, Cleveland heavyweight, and King Solomon, for a heavyweight bout here in Sportsman's Park July 13. Both men have figured prominently in the fight news although neither is yet of championship caliber.

Reports of Risko's achievements reached here some weeks ago following his fight with light heavyweight champion Paul Berlenbach, whom Risko knocked down and, according to descriptions of the battle, savagely punished. He gained the decision and would have knocked out the champion had the fight been a round or two longer. Only the fact that Risko was not under the light heavyweight limit saved Berlenbach's title.

Heyman returned here from New York last night after having seen Risko fight Mike McTigue, to whom he lost a point verdict.

"McTigue found a boxer to his liking, because Risko is too recently in the professional ranks to have the experience. Against a fighter, Risko is at his best for he has a great left hook, one that one day will class him with Sam Langford, Jeffries and the other wielders of this weapon. Few boxers perfect this punch. Risko has it naturally," Heyman commented.

"I look to see Risko go a long way on the heavyweight trail both because he can punch and because he is almost a rubber man in endurance. He can absorb punishment and still fight hard.

"I think the public will be satisfied with the match between Risko and Solomon because both will FIGHT."

Solomon, too, can hit. He knocked down Jim Maloney, the Bostonian who was supposed to be the "coming Dempsey" and who would have scored a knockout but for the fact the bell ending the fight sounded the count of eight and saved Maloney.

Risko is expected in St. Louis several days in advance of the fight and will give fans a chance to look at him. However, he is not a show fighter.

INDIANS ROUT COOPER AND DEFEAT TIGERS

DETROIT, Mich., July 3.—Cleveland won the final game of the series from Detroit here today, the score being 7 to 5. Lack of hitting on the part of Detroit was responsible for the defeat. George Uhle pitched for the Indians and held Detroit to eight hits. Only in the ninth could Detroit bunch more than one hit to a round.

By the Associated Press.

HENLEY-ON-THE-THAMES, Eng., July 3.—Jack Beresford Jr. won the diamond sculls in the Henley regatta, today, for the third time in succession, easily defeating G. Goddard of Jesus College, Oxford.

Beresford, who defeated W. M. Hoover for the Philadelphia gold cup, last year, is a member of the Thames club.

THREE MORE GOLFERS START PRACTICE OVER TITLE EVENT COURSE

By the Associate- Press.

COLUMBUS, O., July 3. — Three more qualifiers arrived here today and put their first licks in at the Scioto Country Club, where next Thursday 153 golfers, representing four lands, will start in pursuit of the 1926 national open golf championship.

Besides Willie Hunter, who came in from Los Angeles, the others to put in their appearance were John J. O'Connor, "pro" at the Peningo Club, Rye, N. Y., and Harry Cooper, Kansas City (Mo.) "pro."

MacDonald Smith, who tied for the national open title 16 years ago at Philadelphia, and Peter O'Hara, the Australian, continued their task of getting acquainted with Scioto's intricacies. Smith's play again strengthened the opinion that he would have to be counted strictly in the running barring unforseen difficulties.

Old Terry McGovern Gave Britt A Surprise and Got Popular Decision

NO. XIV.— FAMOUS BATTLES OF THE RING

TERRY McGOVERN met Jimmy Britt at the old Madison Square Garden in New York on May 28, 1906, long after his prime, and went 10 rounds as speedily as the "old Terry." The bout was a no-decision affair.

To be fair in the matter, I must say that the majority of those present that night thought Terry the winner. Terry was the big favorite with the crowd long before the gong sounded. They all seemed to be McGovern men, and they wanted to see Britt "get it good" if he was to get it at all. It was the West against the East, and James was not in it for the cheers.

Tim Hurst, the referee, said it was the hardest fight he ever refereed in his life, as both men held continually and were too strong for him. Britt outjabbed McGovern three to one. There were times in the fight when he landed as many as six jabs without a return.

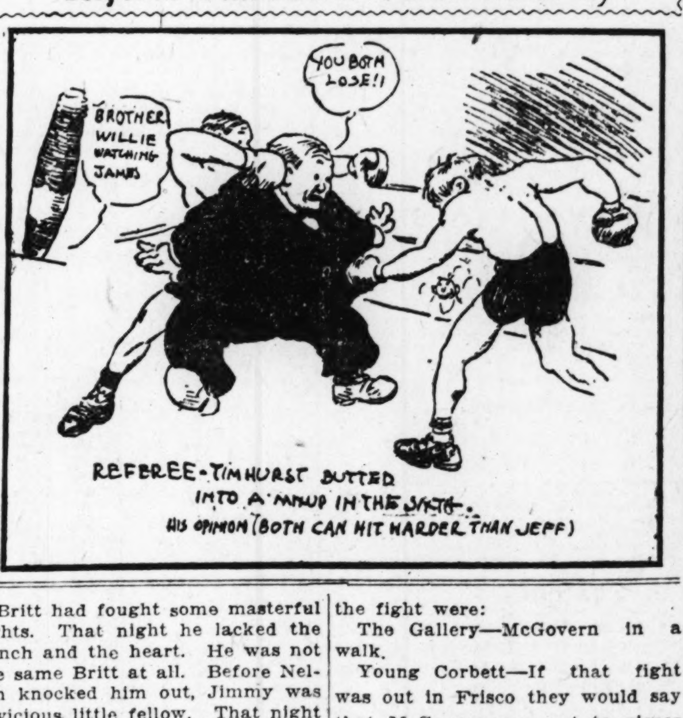
There were no knockdowns in the fight. There was never a time when either went reeling. Terry had the wallop, but couldn't land it. Britt had the jab which landed, but it had no more effect than if he had left it in the dressing room. At that, he was the better boxer, fighting a man with a knockout punch. Both were on their feet at the end of the battle and it might have gone 10 rounds more at the same pace.

Terry Proved a Surprise.

Before the fight they were offering 2 to 1 that Britt would easily outpoint Terry, and there were some that bet even money that Britt would knock him out. Terry was the surprise and Britt the disappointment.

Terry entered the ring fat. He looked as if he had trained about a week, but he went those 10 rounds as fast as any greyhound.

Referee Tim Hurst Got in the Way



BROTHER WILLIE WATCHING JAMES
YOU BOTH LOSE!!
REFEREE-TIM HURST BUTTED INTO A MIXUP IN THE SIXTH.
HIS OPINION (BOTH CAN HIT HARDER THAN JEFF)

Britt had fought some masterful fights. That night he lacked the punch and the heart. He was not the same Britt at all. Before Nelson knocked him out, Jimmy was a vicious little fellow. That night it looked as if he had gone back to a mere boxer.

True, he staggered Terry a few times and tried to drop him, but the sting was not there.

He was as clever as ever, but he was not the snappy hitter with the ripping left and the cutting right. McGovern was still the hero. He was cheered to the echo on leaving the ring. He had a cut over his left eye, while Britt had a cut over one eye and had the other almost closed.

It was a great fight, however, and one that New Yorkers cannot forget. Neither backed away. Terry forced most of the time, but there were times when Britt went in and battled him punch for punch, setting the house to cheers and balling up the fight so that either one might drop at the next punch. There was never a time when one man had a big lead over the other.

A few of the opinions regarding the fight were:

The Gallery—McGovern in a walk.

Young Corbett—If that fight was out in Frisco they would say that McGovern was cut to pieces by Britt. They can't say that here. Terry won by a mile. I had Britt beaten a thousand miles, but they gave it to him. I can lick either one of them right now.

Jack O'Brien—It was a very fast fight. Britt was a disappointment to me. Yes, I think Terry beat him and deserved the decision.

Billy Roche—I couldn't give it to either one of them. Terry was the dangerous man, but it would be cheating to favor either one.

Spider Kelly—Britt outboxed, outgeneraled and beat Terry at every turn. The only punches McGovern landed were lucky ones. He had to swing five in order to get one in. He was as wild as an Indian, and Britt made him look silly.

Sam Harris—Mitt me, pal. Isn't Terry immense? He was trained down fine and beat Britt at that. He would have knocked him out in five rounds more.

TWO SCOTTISH STARS JOIN INDIANA TEAM OF AMERICAN LEAGUE

NEW YORK, July 3.—Two crack soccer football players, Harry Chatton, halfback, and Alexander Donald, fullback and utility man, late of Patrick Thistle, first division, Scottish League, arrived here last week aboard the steamship Caledonia and reported to Capt. Bob Millar of the Indiana Flooring team of the American Soccer League, for whom an agent recently signed them in Scotland.

Both Chatton and Donald formerly played for Dumbarton of the Premier Football Circuit of Scotland, and Chatton, capped as an Irish Internationalist, is rated one of the greatest halfbacks the old country ever let get away for America and the better paying professional ranks.

Donald is a highly versatile player, according to Ernie Viberg, Indiana secretary, who met the arriving players, and can fill any position on a soccer team.

Browns Play Loose Game And Lose to Chicago, 8-3

getting three sacks on a drive to left which Miller played poorly. Schalk followed with a smash to center, scoring Kamm, and when Durst let the ball bounce past him, Schalk continued to third.

The Browns got one of the two runs back in the fourth, but needed a walk, a single and two sacrifices to push a man over the plate. McManus drew the walk to start the inning, stopped at second on Miller's safe bunt, moved to third on Rice's sacrifice fly and scored on Schang's sacrifice fly.

Chicago increased its lead by a run in the fifth, Mostil hitting to center for a base, advancing on a sacrifice and scoring on Falk's single to left.

In the seventh, Gaston had to retire under heavy fire. He started his own trip to the showers by walking Hunnefield and Falk after getting Collins on a fly to right. The runners advanced on an infield out and then Harris sent a line drive straight at Sisler. It was a hard hit ball, but it was straight at George, and when he dropped it, permitting Hunnefield to score, Falk. Falk to reach third and Harris first, the official scorer charged George with an error. Kamm then kicked in with his third straight hit of the day, shooting a triple to irght-center, scoring Falk and Harris.

It was too late, now, but Sisler decided it would be well to have Gaston out of there and Davis went in and stopped the rally.

The Browns scored their second run in the eighth, Miller hitting a double to left with two down and scoring on Schang's single to left.

Vangilder pitched the eighth and ninth for the Browns. He retired batters in a row in the eighth, but in the ninth he walked Collins and gave Falk a fast ball that the Texas knocked all the way to Grand boulevard.

Lamotte batted for Vangilder in the ninth and walked and scored the Browns' third run when Durst clicked a double to left-center.

Low Record for Saturday.

The smallest Saturday crowd of the season witnessed the game, the attendance being estimated at 4000.

While the Browns made four errors and played poorly in the field, they cut down several runners by accurate throws to hold down the Chicago total. Miller's throw nipped Harris at third in the second inning and Melillo took Durst's throw and nailed Collins at the plate in the third. In the sixth, Kamm tried to score from second on Mostil's single to left, but was nipped on Miller's excellent throw to Schang.

Despite the defeat the Browns finished with a record of .600 for the short stand at home. They broke even in two games with the Tigers and took two out of three from the White Sox.

Immediately after the game the Browns departed for Cleveland to open a long road campaign. They will travel until July 27, visiting every city in the circuit except Chicago.

3 RELAYS TO FEATURE TUBERCULOSIS DAY HERE

Three relay races, one 300-yard and two 440 yards, will be run as a feature of the athletic carnival which will precede the big league ball game between the Cards and Brooklyn Robins at the Tuberculosis day celebration at Sportsman's Park on Wednesday, July 14.

The 300-yard relay, in which every municipal pulayground will participate, is supplanting the shuttle race for girls, which has been an annual event of Tuberculosis day for the last four years. Requirements for entrance in this race are that each team must be composed of six girls, each of whom are under 16 years of age and not over 62 inches in height. Two substitutes will be allowed each team. As in last year's shuttle race, gold pencils will be given to members of the playground team winning first place, while the second and third prizes will be silver pencils.

The two 440-yard relays are new features in this year's field events. The first will be for girls and the second will be for men. As in the W. A. A. U. race, the teams will be composed of four men, who will each run 110 yards.

DAVID SHARPE, U. S. TUMBLING CHAMPION, VISITS FATHER HERE

David L. Sharpe, son of Harry Sharpe of this city, and winner of the sesquicentennial tumbling championship at Philadelphia, and Paul W. Krempel, all-around gymnastic champion of the Pacific Coast, Sharpe's friend and adviser, halted in St. Louis yesterday on their way to Los Angeles, where both reside.

Sharpe, who is only 16 years old and holds many honors in the gymnastic field, already is pointing for the Olympic championships of 1928. He has taken up apparatus work, in which he expects to qualify when the Olympic trials are held.

Sharpe had a singular experience at the Philadelphia championships. After the judges had announced his victory in the event, a check of figures apparently showed that he had tied with another contestant. To settle the matter the event was held again and the second time David clearly demonstrated his superiority.

Krempel, who is an architect, has held the all-around gymnastic title of the Pacific Coast for 10 years. He, too, was a contestant at Philadelphia in the all-around event.

Krempel at Philadelphia made a fine showing. He won the flying rings championship, the free calisthenics title, was second in the all-around gymnastic event and third in the parallel bars.

MANDELL RECEIVED BUT 35 CENTS FOR HIS FIRST CONTEST

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Sammy Mandell, the new lightweight champion, received the princely sum of 35 cents for winning his first ring engagement. He was rewarded with a bunch of bananas for his second.

His first battle, which doesn't appear in the record books, was in a picnic grove at Rockford, Ill., his home, when somebody called him a "wop."

Mandell is just 23 years old, and is of Italian parentage. He was born in Italy and was brought to this country by his father, along with his sisters and brothers, when he was a baby. Sammy's mother died when he was nine months old. His sister, Marion, has been his guiding spirit and a mother to him. She instilled a liking for the church and religion into the new champion, and impressed upon him the value of a clean life. His sister's teaching is the reason why Sammy never fails to attend church on Sunday and why he never smoked or drank.

Mandell's right name is Samuel Mandello. He purchased a home for his father on the best residential street in Rockford and a year ago retired his dad from the foundry in which he worked to support his children in their youth.

Chandler Retains College Net Title

Defeats Holman in Four Sets, 6—0, 6—1, 6—8, 6—1 in Final of Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—Repeating his triumph of a year ago Edward G. Chandler of the University of California today retained his intercollegiate tennis crown by defeating Cranston Holman of Stanford in the final round, 6—0, 6—1, 6—8, 6—1.

Chandler, whose victory a year ago also was scored in four sets, apparently was overwhelming Holman when the Stanford man rallied gamely to take the third set.

The champion sped through his rival for 11 straight games in the first two sets. Holman then stemmed the tide to break through Chandler's service for his first game, but the titleholder immediately replied with a counterbreak to finish the first two sets in 20 minutes.

A perceptible letdown on the part of Chandler gave Holman his chance in the third set. He put added pace in his drives and came to the net for spectacular volleys which temporarily checked the University of California player.

Paired with Chandler Tom Stow aided in defeating Holman and Lionel Ogden for the doubles honors, 6—0, 7—5, 1—6, 6—1, this victory marking the third successive season in which the East has been shut out of both finals.

Chandler also has the distinction of winning the singles title twice in consecutive tournaments for the first time in 31 years. His feat parallels the achievement of M. G. Chace of Yale, who reached the college net pinnacle in 1893, 1894 and 1895.

AQUEDUCT, N. Y., July 3.—Crusader, winner of the Suburban Handicap and the Belmont Stakes, beat Chance Play by the action of a nod in the Dwyer Stakes, at one mile and a half here this afternoon, after perhaps the greatest race that has been run on the American turf in 20 years.

Four lengths behind, Espino, favorite for the classic, staggered in well beaten.

They say the Man o' War-John P. Prier race in the running of this classic six years ago, was the greatest race in recent years—that may be—but in the Dwyer today, two superlatively game horses battled three furlongs farther at a faster pace.

The time was 2:29 3-5, and it clipped 5 2-5 seconds off the track record which has stood for 19 years, and approached closely the record time of 2:28 4-5 set by Man 'o War himself.

Such time was only possible because of the pace set by Dress Parade, stable mate of Crusader, though it may be said Chance Play forced that pace all the way. They went to the quarter in :23 3-5; the half in :49 1-5; six furlongs in 1:14 1-5; the mile in 1:39 1-5; one mile and a quarter in 2:05 2-5 and the 12 furlongs in 2:29 3-5.

Dress Parade went to the front at the break, but to the surprise of the crowd, Barnes sent Espino right up with him with Maiben running in third position with Chance Play and Crusader last. Crusader was almost half a dozen lengths behind Light Carbine when the run into the back stretch was reached, while L. Fator was hustling Dress Parade along. At the end of a mile that indefinable something known as class began to tell for Espino began dropping back, while Dress Parade kept on under pressure with Chance Play just behind him.

Crusader Comes Strong.

As they straightened into the stretch, Dress Parade was still in front, but Espino was done and Crusader had not begun his run. Chance Play looked the winner over the eighth pole, but suddenly Crusader loomed up beside him and Sande and Maiben fought it out in the finish seldom seen on the race tracks. Dress Parade tired badly at the end, but with his work done Fator made no effort to beat Espino for the shortest end of the purse. Light Carbine was just one of the runners.

The Dwyer was worth an even $15,000 to the winner, putting Crusader at the top of the winning list among the three-year-olds for the year.

Stecher Agrees To Meet Lewis In Bout Here

Plans Being Formed for Title Wrestling Match at St Louis U. Field, Aug. 4.

Joe Stecher, world champion heavyweight wrestler, has agreed to defend his title against Ed "Strangler" Lewis, a former champion, in a St. Louis arena, according to an announcement made last night by Promoter Tom Packs, following a two-day conference with Anton Stecher, brother and manager of the titleholder.

Packs stated that he will depart tonight or tomorrow for Chicago, where he has arranged to confer with Lewis. If the former champion accepts the proposed engagement the bout will be scheduled for the St. Louis University Athletic Field on or about August 4.

The terms under which Stecher has agreed to meet Lewis in defense of the catch-as-catch-can crown were not announced by Packs.

Lewis and Stecher have not met on the mat since their engagement in December 1920, when the "Strangler" annexed the championship for the first time. During the period of approximately four years he retained the title, Lewis spurned all offers for a return battle with the Nebraska scissors specialist.

Wayne Munn won the title from Lewis at Kansas City in January 1925 and lost it to the veteran Stanislaus Zbyszko at Philadelphia three months later. Stecher regained the crown from Zbyszko by defeating him at the St. Louis U. Stadium on Decoration Day of last year.

Besides the Stecher-Lewis match, Packs is also angling for finish bouts between John Pesek and Marin Plestina and between Pesek and Jimmy Londos.

ALEC MERMOD

THE channel cat is easily recognized by its forked tail and the irregular dark spots, which in some localities give it the name of spotted cat.

This species does not reach the size of its cousin, the blue cat; 11 pounds is the largest I have seen, though some anglers claim to have taken them weighing as much as 25 pounds.

While the channel cat is not considered very highly as a sporting proposition, they really make a good pan fish, and by many are preferred to some of our game fish.

To many people a cat fish is just a "mud hog" that has more of the appearance of a reptile than a fish, but really, unless too fat, the meat of the channel cat is sweet and firm.

No Mud Wallower.

This species is not a mud wallower, for he prefers running streams of clear cold water instead of a stagnant pool.

Catfishing does not appeal very strongly to either the fly or bait caster, as he does not care for any artificial lure, though once in awhile one is taken on a fly.

George Prendegast, during the last two years has taken three cats with flyrod and fly.

Live minnows and worms make good bait, but this fish really prefers a hunk of meat or fish, and will strike more readily if the meat is a bit spoiled, so it would appear that fish have a decided sense of smell.

I have known a few "dyed in the wool" fly fishermen who will use nothing but a fly rod, that when bass are not striking will bait their hook with a chunk of tainted meat and go after the cats.

One Thrill Lacking.

These men claim that a one-pound cat, when hooked with fly tackle, will put up as good a fight as a small-mouth bass of the same weight.

However there is one thrill lacking and that is the possibility of losing your fish after he is hooked, for as a rule, the bait is swallowed and the hook will not tear out.

It is a well-known fact that a catfish will live for hours after being taken out of the water, and it is also known that he is hard to kill by the ordinary methods but here's an easy way.

Make an incision with a small knife blade in the center of the top of his head, then run a broom-straw or stringing needle back through this slit about two inches, and your fish will give one last wiggle and is dead.

Carp, Game Fish's Enemy.

This fish brought overseas a good many years ago by some well-meaning idiot, probably a relative of the man who brought over the English sparrow, has quite a score marked up against him, for the carp is one of the worst enemies the game fish has to contend with.

The carp is a bottom feeder of the sucker species, and feeds on the eggs of other fish, besides destroying the plant life so necessary to the young fish who live on the small animal life found in and around this growth.

Where it is at all possible carp should be removed from all bass waters, but seining should only be done during the late fall and winter, so that other fish are not disturbed.

Creeks Seldom Fished.

Throughout the entire Ozark region we have numerous small creeks that are never fished except by a few of the most persistent fishermen, who come back with full creels, but when questioned as to where the catch was made give rather vague answers.

In Reynolds County there are three forks of Black River, West Fork, Middle Fork and East Fork. All of these streams may be reached from Centerville.

The catch consisted of a dozen and a half small-mouth bass, weighing about a pound each, and 14 frogs, the latter shot with a rifle. Mr. Weber prefers fishing with fly rod and fly, but after devoting considerable time to this style without a strike, used a casting rod and artificial minnow with single hook.

Otto Pogenmiller of North St. Louis spent his vacation near Olney, Ill., and reports plenty of sunfish, crappie and some bass. Remember that if you want any fishing today and Monday, keep away from the large streams.

New Challenge Cup.

A new challenge cup for women's singles has been presented to the O'Fallon Park Tennis Club by Dr. Irwin B. Dunhaupt. It is a three-time trophy and will replace the one offered by Martin Telle several years ago. The Telle Cup is now out of competition, owing to the fact that Virginia Baer won it three times.

ST. LOUIS STARS NOSE OUT CLEVELAND TEAM IN SERIES OPENER, 5-4

The St. Louis Stars in the National Negro Baseball League defeated the Cleveland Elites in yesterday's game at Stars' park, 5 to 4. The Stars had a lead of four runs up to the fifth inning, when the visitors collected four runs, aided by Jim Taylor's home run with a man on base. The Stars scored the winning run in the seventh inning when Brannigan hit a batter and, with the bases loaded, forced in the marker that clinched the game. The feature play of the game was made when Suttles leaped up to catch a fly single-handed off Brannigan's bat. The second game of the series will be played this afternoon.

MANAGER JOHNSON SWATS THREE HOME RUNS AND FRIEDENS WIN, 9-

Richards in United Drug Circuit Grants Only One Single; Gold Dust Rally Climaxed When Batter Loses Ball.

The mighty bat of Manager Johnson of the Friedens hit three home runs against St. John's in the Evangelical League, winning for the former team, 9 to 3.

Other developments extraordinary in the Municipal League contests yesterday included the following:

Richards, pitching for the Office in the United Drug circuit, stopped Town Talk with a single hit, permitted no base on balls and struck out eight men. The Office swept by an 18-to-1 victory.

Dorley, on the hill for the County team against the Steam team in the Union Electric League, struck out 18 batters, allowed only two hits and collected two triples and a single for his afternoon's work at bat. The County won, 15 to 0.

The Gold Dust team hopelessly beaten when the final inning rolled around in their game with Pilgrim, put on a mighty rally to beat the latter, 14 to 13. Harris, who handles the shortstop position for the winners, sent the deciding runs across the plate with a hit that traveled so far the fielder refused to pursue it. Because his marker was not needed to win, Harris was deprived of a home run in the box score.

In seven innings Huff, on the mound for Maplewood, struck out 16 of the Optimists No. 2 team and permitted only three hits. The first named team is in the Employed Boys' League, won, 8 to 3.

The changes in league standings were few and not of particular significance, although the Century Electric team in the Commercial League went into a tie for second place by a victory. Alhambra won, 2-1, from Fendler one of the best games of the day.

GALVESTON SWIMMER SEEKS LONG DISTANCE RECORD AT COLISEUM

An attempt to establish a world's record for long-distance swimming in an indoor tank will be made by Herbert Bernau Jr. of Galveston, Tex., at the New Coliseum pool in this city, during the latter part of August, according to an announcement yesterday by Herman Laubis, aquatic director for the local tank. Bernau is now in St. Louis and preparing to begin a course of intensive training which will include from three to six hours of continuous swimming each day.

The world's record of 16 hours held by Capt. Dalton of England is the mark Bernau hopes to shatter. The Texan already holds the American record of 12½ hours which he established in the Gardner Park Natatorium at Dallas, Tex., on July 19, 1923.

Babe Ruth Lists Melillo Among Rookie Stars

However, He Says Tony Lazzeri of the Yankees Is Find of the Season.

By BABE RUTH

Babe Ruth.

The question of the best rookie ball player to come up this season has come up. Naming him is a tough job. There have been a lot of good ones—and anyhow, the most valuable man doesn't always mean the best ball player. To my way of thinking, the most valuable player is the one who fits into his own club best. For instance, with a club like the Cincinnati Reds, that already has a great pitching staff, a fair shortstop might be a lot more valuable than a first-class pitcher, while some other club, like the Giants, could use a mediocre kid pitcher better than they could a star second baseman.

Looking over the American League clubs, it seems to me that there are about five outstanding players who have broken into the league this year. Three of them—Lazzeri, Koenig and Collins, are with the Yankees. Then there's Melillo of the Browns and Hunnefield of the White Sox. I haven't seen the National League teams, but judging from the box scores and the records, I would say that Waner of the Pirates and Emmer of the Reds, were about the class.

Likes Lazzeri Best.

Of the lot, I would say that Tony Lazzeri was about the most valuable. Understand, I'm not picking him as the best ball player of the lot. He may be that, and again he may not. It's too early to tell. But I do believe that he has added most to his club. And Hunnefield of the White Sox ranks second. He may not be any baseball wonder but he has plugged a bad hole in the White Sox infield—and that was what Eddie Collins needed to be up there in the race.

But all of these kids have done well—and they've all been real finds for the clubs that have them. How far they may go in baseball or how great they may become is a matter that will have to be determined in two or three seasons from now.

With the season gone at the halfway mark and the Yankees continuing to hold their lead, I've quit worrying about our club and started to watch the doings over in the other circuit. We'll win—even with Bob Meusel on the sidelines and some of the other boys crippled a bit.

The Rise of the Reds.

But the boys who are surprising me are the Cincinnati Reds. We saw them in two games down south this spring, and at that time I figured they were a club that had four or five good pitchers and eight other ball players. And now they're right up at the top of the league fighting the Cardinals and the Pirates neck and neck for the pennant.

Which is just more proof of the old story that a team is just as strong as its pitchers. Take away Jack Hendricks' pitchers and his club wouldn't even be in the first division. But with Luque, Donohue, Rixey, Mays, Lucas and the rest going the way they are now they're a club to be figured on right up to the finish. And they've got just as good a chance as anybody else of copping the pennant.

Incidentally that might make an interesting series if the Yankees and Reds should meet. At any rate, a lot of fans would find out the answer to the old question about what happens when an unbeatable pitching staff hooks up against a non-stopable outfit of sluggers. The Reds certainly have the pitching and you've got to admit the Yankees represent about the best there is in hitting and slugging ability. Of course, I figure we would win—for we've got pitching along with our hitting — but it makes an interesting thing to think about anyhow, even if it is a bit like counting chickens before they're hatched.

Meantime, just remember my dope. Tony Lazzeri is about the most valuable young player to come up this year. See if I'm not proved right three seasons from now.

"There is no more firmly e tablished right under the la and customs of the United Stat than that of a citizen, howeve humble, to petition the Govern ment for the redress of a griev ance. I am such a citizen American in every fiber and bone and drop of blood. For seven generations on my father's side and for seven generations on my mother's, my ancestors have lived in America, a hundred and fifty years as American subjects of the British crown, a hundred and fifty years as American citizens. I am, therefore, qualified, am I not, to avail myself of the aforesaid right?

"My grievance is briefly stated. It is this: America is being sold, betrayed, dishonored. By its own Government, the nation is being made odious in the estimation of mankind, the object of universal hatred as a merciless, money - grabbing extortioner. Availing itself of a pure technicality, the Government of the United States is exacting the payment of unthinkable sums of money from England, France, Belgium and Italy for advances made to them upon our entrance the late war and by our law declared to be "for the purpose of the more effectually providing for the national security and defense." To enable "the Governments engaged in war with the enemies of the United States" to maintain their armies, to fight America's battles until we could prepare armies to do our own fighting, to stand between us and Germany, we advanced our late associates something like $10,000,000,000. Every dollar of it was for our benefit, we so stated at the time, and now we demand its repayment with $11,000,000,000 more for time in which to pay.

"Be patient with me, Mr. President, for I am a plain, blunt man, little skilled in the use of soft phrases. I can only speak right on, tell you that which you know full well, set forth the simple facts as they appear to simple men and bid them speak for me; but do not think that I stand alone, a solitary voice crying in the wilderness. ELOQUENT APPEAL FOR CANCELLATION OF WAR DEBTS MADE TO COOLIDGE

Frederick W. Peabody, With Lofty Rhetoric, Makes Protest Against Financial Terms Imposed on Allies.

ASHBURNHAM, MASS., JULY 3.

AN eloquent demand for the cancellation of the war debts of the nations associated with the United States in the World War was mailed this week to President Coolidge by Frederick W. Peabody, now living in this quiet New England town.

Frederick W. Peabody, member of a noted American family, a well-known publicist and member of the bar of his native State, as well as New York and California, although now retired from active law practice.

The text of this letter, abounding with lofty rhetoric, and regarded as the best presentation of arguments yet made by those urging cancellation, is as follows:

"There is no more firmly established right under the laws d customs of the United States an that of a citizen, however mble, to petition the Government for the redress of a grievnce. I am such a citizen, merican in every fiber and bone d drop of blood. To enable "the Govrnments engaged in war with the emies of the United States" to aintain their armies, to fight merica's battles until we could pare armies to do our own hting, to stand between us and many, we advanced our late ociates something like $10,-0,000,000. Every dollar of it s for our benefit, we so stated the time, and now we demand repayment with $11,000,000,-0 more for time in which to pay.

lls Settlement "Brand of Shame."

"Plainly expressed, my grieve is that the honor of my ntry is being bartered for $21,-0,000,000, and I address this ition to my Government for a ress of that grievance in the rformance of the most solemn ty of American citizenship— preservation of the nation om history's brand of shame.

There no hyphenates amongst them, ympathizers with our late ies. Aside from my own conon, I know whereof I speak I have on my desk assurance eof from all parts of the try.

ies Nation Gold-Mad.

"True, there are those who have that I but waste my breath; this nation is a nation of mon worshipers, that gold is their god, that they have but one absorbing passion—to get all the money they can for the gratification of every selfish desire. If I did not, in the depths of my soul, believe that to be a lie, I should indeed know that I but waste my breath.

"Then, too, Mr. President, I have been told that you will not even read my petition. It may be so; but that does not discharge me from the obligation that presses upon my conscience and my heart. Others will read it, if you do not.

"The World War began on Aug. 1, 1914, and ended on Nov. 11, 1918. For upwards of two years and a half it was waged without our participation. Our ultimate participation was inevitable; but nothing whatever was done to prepare for it and when our war declaration came in April, 1917, we were totally unready to put a man on the battlefields of France and it was more than a year thereafter before we had any share in the fighting.

"Upon our entrance of the war, it was perfectly plain to the Government of the United States that, if we were not left to face Germany alone, our associates, Great Britain, France, Belgium and Italy must be maintained by us with all necessary supplies until we could join them in the field. The security and defense of the United States imperatively demanded it at whatever cost. The allies needed it for their own interest, of course; but they needed it before we went into the war and only got it when it would be of benefit to the United States, when it became a matter of necessity to us, a legitimate, an inevitable war measure. There can be no two opinions about this, for the Government of the United States so declared.

Nation Pledged Everything It Had.

"In his speech to Congress asking a declaration of war against Germany, the President definitely pledged "our lives and our fortunes, everything we are and everything we have" to its prosecution. He didn't suggest loans for our defense to be repaid with interest. He committed America to the contribution of everything we had to the winning of the war, and Congress promptly proceeded to carry out his pledge.

"In little more than a week thereafter, Congress voted to make the war supplies that had accumulated in the country available to the Allies, as the law put it, 'to the Governments engaged in war with the enemies of the United States.' This act of the national Legislature providing for the establishment of credits in favor of 'the Governments engaged in war with the enemies of the United States' opened with words that should be known to every citizen as well as they are known to you and to me. But for them, this petition would not be sent to you. These words (would that they might be blazed across the sky!) were: 'For the purpose of more effectively providing for the national security and defense and for prosecuting the war.'

"How could anything be plainer than that? The credits were established and some $9,500,000,-

Foresees Plan to Deliver Philippines To "Big Business" for Exploitation

Pedro Guevara, Representative of Islands in Washington, Dissects Bill in Congress to Create Colonial Empire Out of Moro Group, Leaving Only Luzon Semi-Independent — "Paradise for Corporations," He Says, "if Bill Goes Through."

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 3.

"A BILL to dismember the Philippine Islands, allowing the Filipinos to keep half of them, and turning the other half over to the big American rubber companies."

In this somewhat ironic fashion one opponent has described a measure which was pending in the House of Representatives as Congress was making its plans for final adjournment. Nobody believes for a moment that adjournment is the end of the proposal. It is certain to be revived at the next Congress, and just as certain to result in a prolonged and bitter controversy. The stake is large, and for the Filipinos, at least, the issue is desperate.

Nor is it vital to them alone. Introduction of the bill, in the opinion of many legislators, was the boldest step ever taken toward committing this country to a policy of undisguised colonial expansion, involving all the pomp, peril and authority of empire. Its adoption they affirm, would definitely signal the abandonment of the traditional American principle that small nations are as much entitled to self-government as large ones.

While the author and official sponsor of the bill is Congressman Robert L. Bacon (Rep.) of New York, it is generally believed that the real forces behind it are the great rubber corporations, which are seeking cheap land, cheap labor and freedom from annoying legal regulation; and Gen. Leonard S. Wood, Governor-General of the Philippines, who desires more freedom of action in dealing with the natives.

Religious Question Is Made a Factor.

Of the principal two arguments advanced in behalf of the bill, one is very curious. It is that Mohammedans, who comprise about 5 per cent of the population of the islands, are entitled to a separate government from that under which the Christian Filipinos live. The other argument, baldly stated, is that American capital should be given a free hand to "develop," i. e., exploit, the rich natural resources of the more fertile islands.

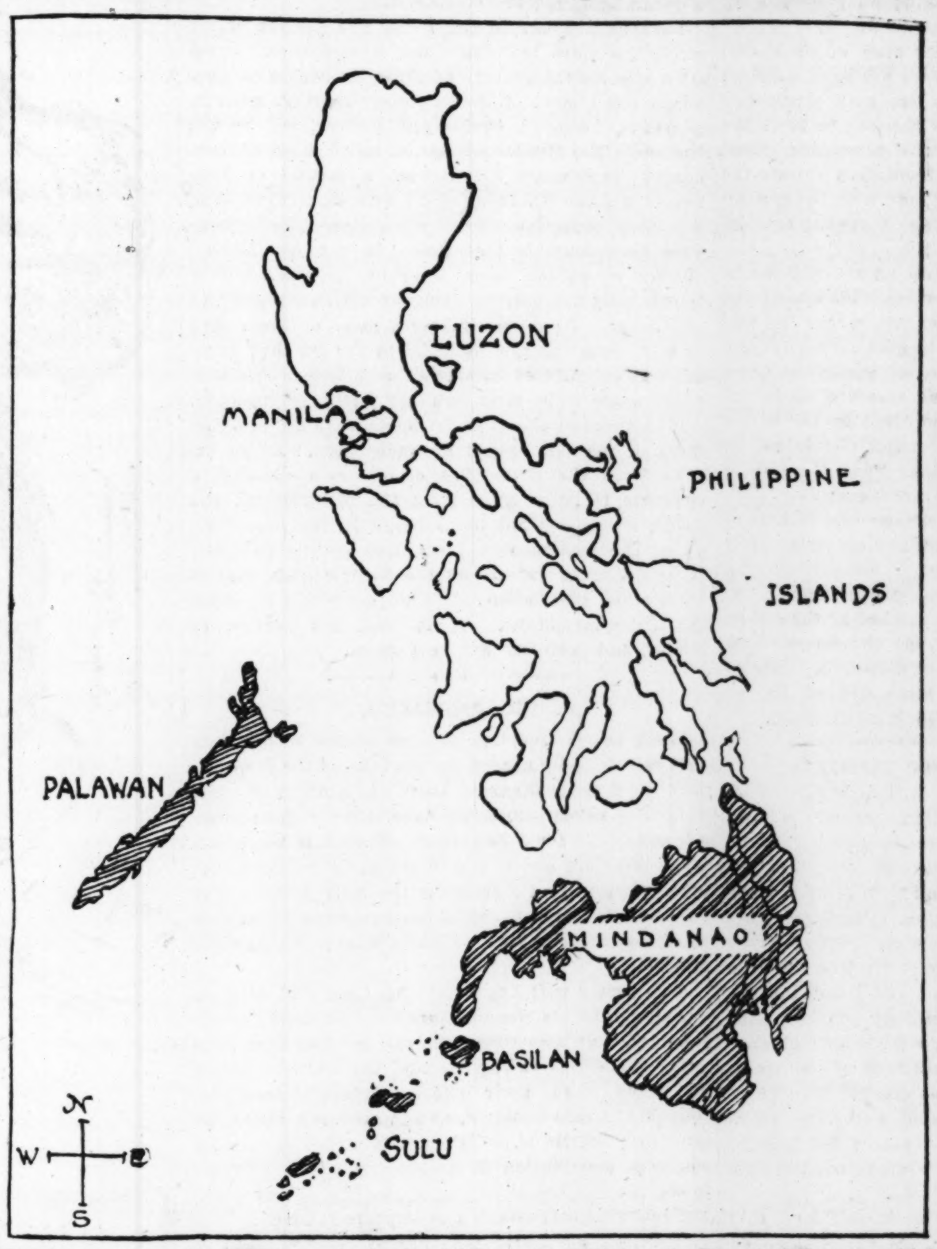
The whole area of the Philippines is 114,000 square miles—about the area of Italy. By far the greater part of this territory lies within two large islands, Luzon, which is about the size of Ohio, and Mindanao, which is about the size of Indiana. The present population is approximately 12,000,000, of whom the great majority live on the island of Luzon. While virtually all the natives are of Malay extraction, about 500,000 are Mohammedans, more than 11,000,000 are Christians and the remainder are pagan Igorrotes. More than 400,000 of the Mohammedans, commonly called Moros, live in Mindanao, comprising slightly less than half the population of that island. The remainder of the Moros live in Basilan, Palawan and the Sulu Archipelago. Consequently they are called Moro islands. The name Moro is a religious appellation, rather than a racial one. Civilization among the Moros is in a far less advanced stage than among the Christian Filipinos.

Independence Promised Islanders Many Times.

Following the destruction of the Spanish fleet by Dewey at Manila Bay, and the capture of Manila by the American army, in 1898, the islands were ceded to the United States by Spain on payment of $20,000,000. At first the islands were under a military government, and subsequently were governed by an American commission. In 1916 the Jones act abolished the commission and established a native legislature, with a Governor-General appointed by the President of the United States. Members of the Legislature are elected by popular vote, but the franchise was not extended to the Moros, it being held that they, in their savage state, were incapable of exercising it.

From the acquisition of the islands onward, it had always been the declared policy of this Government to grant full independence as soon as the Filipinos had demonstrated their ability to govern themselves. It had always been asserted by all administrations and by both political parties that there was no disposition to retain the islands permanently. This policy was reiterated in the preamble to the Jones act, as follows:

"It has always been the purpose of the people of the United States to withdraw their sovereignty over the Philippine Islands and to recognize their independence as soon as a stable government can be established thereon."



THE islands in white comprise the lands of "Christian Filipinos." The shaded ones, which do not include many score of others too small to be indicated on a map, are the "Moro group." Under the provisions of the Bacon bill, these latter would be declared a territory of the United States to be governed by Americans appointed by the President. These Moro islands contain millions of acres of land suitable for rubber plantations, have huge deposits of iron, and can produce much copra, hemp and other things—all undeveloped as yet.

The Moros, a fierce and warlike people, gave the American military forces much trouble. Under Spanish rule they had successfully resisted every attempt to penetrate the interior of Mindanao. Numerous and bloody were the forays and ambushes which they carried out against the military. Their resistance, however, was gradually broken down. It was in this service that Pershing won his reputation. So ferocious were some of the reprisals conducted against the Moros, involving, in the bloody affair of Mount Daho, the killing of several hundred native women and children, that the Moro Datos (chiefs) came to fear the Americans and to let them alone.

Since his appointment by President Harding as Governor-General of the islands, Gen. Wood has engaged in numerous controversies with the Philippine Legislature. He has vetoed many bills, and the Legislature, in turn, has refused to confirm appointments and make appropriations wanted by him. The feeling has been intense.

Plans for Ruling Newly Created Territory.

A few weeks ago Congressman Bacon introduced in the House of Representatives a bill which provided that the Moro Islands—Mindanao, Palawan, Basilan and Sulu Archipelago—be separated from the remainder of the Philippines and made a territory of the United States. It provided that these islands be placed under a legislative council, of six American and three Filipino members, all to be appointed by the President of the United States.

The American members would consist of a Governor, Secretary, Legal Adviser, Director of Education, Treasurer and Engineer, the Governor to receive a salary of $10,000 a year and the others $7500 each. The Filipinos would be associate members, and their salaries would be fixed by the American members of the council. All would hold office at the pleasure of the President.

In short, it provided for a colonial government of the strictest type, responsible solely to Washington, and under no restriction whatever from the native population.

Obviously, the three Filipino members would be completely at the mercy of the American members of the council; and, lastly, the pledge of ultimate independence, in so far as the Moro Islands were concerned, would be canceled.

Four Reasons Are Given for Action.

Congressman Bacon presented four main arguments for the adoption of the bill, to wit:

1. That the Moros and the Christian Filipinos are hereditary enemies, and that the Moros bitterly resent the fact that the Christians control the Legislature, and that union in one government with the Christians is highly distasteful to them.

2. That shortly after the cession of the islands, an agreement was entered between Gen. John C. Bates, representing the United States, and the Sultan of Sulu, representing the Moros, in which the Sultan recognized the sovereignty of the United States, and in return obtained recognition by this country of the Moros as a distinct and separate racial and religious group.

3. That Christian Filipinos have been appointed Judges, prosecutors and constabulary in Moro territory, to the rage and humiliation of the Moros, thus fanning the hereditary enmity and causing disturbances.

4. That, under present conditions, American capital cannot engage in the development of the vast natural resources in the Moro Islands, particularly in the matter of establishing rubber plantations which would eventually make the United States independent of Great Britain's rubber monopoly. Also that the Bacon bill would facilitate the development of a great iron, coffee, sisal and copra industry in the islands.

Filipino Representative Denies Every Charge.

In reply to these arguments, the official representatives of the Filipinos make, in order, the following answers:

1. That the Moros and Christians are not hereditary enemies, and that the attempt to divide them into different racial groups has no scientific basis in fact; that the denial of the vote to the Moros was by act of the American Congress and not by act of the Christian Filipinos, who earnestly desire that it be extended to them. That, contrary to opposing union with the Christian Filipinos, a majority of the Moro Datos have petitioned Congress to grant them independence in union with the rest of the Filipinos.

2. That in the agreement between Gen. Bates and the Sultan of Sulu, Gen. Bates was never authorized to speak for the United States, nor did the Sultan have any authority to speak for the Moros, and that the agreement was specifically abrogated by President Roosevelt in 1904, and has never been recognized since then.

3. That if Christian Filipinos have been appointed to official positions over the Moros, such appointments were not the acts of the Filipinos, in view of the fact that every single one of those officers is appointed by the American Governor-General.

4. That the Filipinos would welcome the entrance of American capital for the development of natural resources, but are opposed to its entrance under conditions which would shortly reduce the natives to peonage and result in the cruel plantation system estab-

ECONOMIC REVOLUTION PEACFUL OR VIOLENT IMPENDS IN ENGLAND

There Is No Class Warfare, but Workers Are Too Poor and Are Demanding Relief From Insufferable Condition.

The following is the first article of a series by Edward Price Bell, special correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News, dealing with European economic conditions. In his introductory installment Mr. Bell deals with the present crisis in Great Britain and the constructive efforts among all classes, regardless of differences of opinion, to bring about understanding and harmony between the complementary factors of production.

By EDWARD PRICE BELL.

LONDON, England, June 28.

GREAT BRITAIN, like the whole of Europe, is passing through a historical crisis of the first order. Fundamentally, as the writer sees it, this crisis represents a struggle of the European masses for the larger liberty and the greater happiness which springs from widely diffused prosperity.

Europe's workers are too poor. They know they are too poor. They have heard of America's economic progress. They are saying to their leaders, to their elite: "Show us a way out of this wilderness."

Certain nations of Continental Europe have political crises of a crucial character. These nations have not found themselves constitutionally. Their traditions are not those of Great Britain. They are wavering somewhere between the realms of autocracy and democracy.

Great Britain has no political crisis. No one demands that the King shall go, nor that Parliament shall shut up, nor that any part of the Constitution shall be scrapped. Great Britain's crisis is purely and simply a social and economic crisis.

Little Class Hatred.

Moreover, the social crisis, so far as the phrase suggests class warfare, seems to have no really serious features. I never have been able to observe in the past, and cannot observe now, that the British masses are affected by any considerable antipathy to the British classes as such. British workmen have no objection to education or refinement or decent leisure or a high standard of living. On the contrary they respect these things, as they respect the gentleman, so long as he is a gentleman. What disturbs the British working class are not social distinctions, but an economic condition that strikes it as squalid, unjust, insufferable and unnecessary.

Is it unnecessary? Is there something wrong that good-will, energy, talent, science, modern methods and machinery, can put right? This is the burning question of the whole position. Employers and employes, the fortunate and unfortunate are too far asunder.

Understanding, harmony of endeavor, between the complementary factors of production—these are the great objectives toward which British spiritual and intellectual forces are moving. And these forces never before were so active and so earnest as now. Great Britain is aroused more thoroughly, is intent and experimentally constructive, over a larger area of her pouplation than she was in the darkest hours of the World War.

"Toil of thought for the national betterment"—the expression of England's greatest economist, Sir Josiah Stamp—is found in all sections of the community.

It is a great spectacle—this spectacle of the morality and the intelligence of one of the foremost units of advanced civilization rallying to a world-honored flag. Dark as the outlook is one looks in vain for despair. Yet it is a fact that the actual methods and mechanism of recovery are yet to be evolved.

An Embarrassment of Ideas.

If anything, too many ideas—not too few—are Great Britain's embarrassment now. There are not, of course, too many good ideas, but the task of winnowing the grain from the chaff is almost overwhelming.

If students of government and of economics are turning their thoughts increasingly to the United States to plumb the secret of its growing wealth, so are they studying Great Britain, with its problems of geography, raw materials and population, in search of lessons for battling against conditions that threaten a degree of general poverty incompatible with the stability of capitalistic democracy.

What are some of the surface aspects of Great Britain's profoundly altered mood? Symptoms of post-war feverishness—the high temperature, the quickened pulse, the thirst for an unending sequence of excitement are gone. Great Britain's eye reflects the grave and resolute spirit of a nation perplexed, or a nation heavily burdened, but of a nation calmly bent upon measures of redress.

To dine at any leading hotel or restaurant in London at this time is to have an experience totally different from that of a similar occasion as late as 1924. Great crowds assembled then. Dining rooms overflowed. Lobbies were packed. It was a bedlam of pleasure. Chill winter has fallen over all this. I do not mean that these dining rooms are desolate or empty now. But almost indescribable is the transformation. No jostling concourse of revelers. Just moderate gatherings of quiet diners.

Jazz Is Dethroned.

Immediate post-war stimuli no longer please. Discordant mob pulsations have lost their tinkle. Syncopated music runs ill with the national preoccupation. Dining tonight in London, one does not jump to jazz; one grieves or rejoices with composers like Mozart, Verdi, Chopin, Mendelssohn, Tschaikowsky and Mascagni.

Prohibition is unknown in Great Britain. British statesmen, whether opposed to alcohol or opposed to the social evil of betting, do not push recklessly into the domain of the moralist and the educator. They know that unenforceable laws are vicious laws. Prohibition is unknown here, but temperance is quite general. Among the fashionable set it is far more general than it was.

Fox-trotting and one-stepping and waltzing convulsed all England for half a decade after the armistice. It was a sore-hurt people's ecstatic escape. To the British capital flocked the greatest jazz artists of the world. Relaxation, forgetfulness, joy — oases of joy in measureless wastes of bereavement —these were England.

It is different now. Britons have come to see that the armistice was not the end, but the beginning of the latest test as an independent, freedom-cherishing and freedom-serving people. So the frivolities, generally speaking, have had their flaunting day and passed into oblivion.

Seriousness of temper showing in look, word or act, has supervened in all the principal walks, if not in every nook and corner of the country's activity. Science, literature, art and the drama are sensitive to the new emotions. Invention is at concert pitch.

Self-Trust Is Shaken.

Doctrinaire thinking, pride of intellect, overconfidence in cultural background are perceptibly less disdainful than they were in days of comparative bouyancy. There was a time when intellectual Brit-

Senator Williams' Logic.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE arbitrary invasion by our Government of State rights is a simple question. The arbitrary invasion of personal rights by our Government is a simple question. The destruction of personal liberty for the questionable good of the few is a simple question. The destruction of the spirit of self-reliance of the citizen is a simple question. The destruction of our fundamental principles of government by the existence of the eighteenth amendment is a simple question. The destruction of the privacy and security of our homes is a simple question. The reckless casting into the gutters of the taxpayer's money is a simple question. Our prideful army of snoopers is a new, but simple question. The practicability or futility of the Volstead act is a simple question. The part that Volsteadism has to do with our crime wave is a simple question. The fact of what is actually intoxicating as a beverage is a simple question. The question of the harmful or beneficial influence on our citizenry, rich and poor, young and old, powerful or weak, is a simple question. But even if questions are simple they may be nevertheless most vital questions—except in the eyes of Senator Williams. The threatened or possible invasion by internationalism or the World's Court of our Government's rights, however, is a complex question—in the eyes of Senator Williams.

On simple questions, the people should lead their Senators—on complex questions, the Senator should lead his people. So logically argued our worthy, at present, junior Missouri Senator at California, Mo. A wee bit of naive egotism, nicht wahr? Naturally such an understanding of leadership hesitated not, when his clarion call echoed throughout his cerebellum, but unhesitatingly led the President of his party and the President of these United States on the complex World's Court question.

When Senator Williams was surprisingly appointed by our Country Cousin, one of his close friends joyously told me that the then new and untried Senator had emphatically stated that there would be two things that he would stand his ground upon—the first, against the World's Court; the second, against prohibition. He kept faith with himself on the World's Court as we gladly admit, but—there was no all-powerful World's Court Association facing him on the first, as was the Antisaloon League on the second. Compulsory Vaccination.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN AN article, "Secrets of Health and Success," in the Post-Dispatch of June 3 it says "It nearly always happens that you or your children may accidentally be exposed to smallpox in localities in which it yet prevails, largely through the activity of antivaccinationists."

If vaccination absolutely prevents smallpox, why should those already vaccinated become so alarmed at being exposed to the disease, and why insist so strenuously that all others be vaccinated, when they themselves cannot take it. It looks like bunk to me.

The doctor writing the article mentions the experiment of a Dr. W. Kuhle in which he notes the effect of vaccination on 40 infants in which the most of them suffered from fever from six to ten days and some of them a few days longer; now why should a parent with a healthy, normal child be compelled to make it suffer 10 or more days, and perhaps have its constitution permanently weakened?

The doctor calls vaccination, "this innocuous and scientifically established operation." Is inoculating a calf with disease germs and then taking the serum prepared from this and putting it in the life-stream of an innocent child scientific?

Men Are Selfish.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

NO, MISS 1926, the sheiks never stop to think what anyone's opinion of them is. I have never been "stung" by any sheik and I'm not a man hater by any means. But you know, Miss 1926, I think that just because they were here first they're under the impression that the world and everything in it belongs to them.

All men are selfish to a certain extent. They all want the best of things. When they're going with a girl they usually like the fastest ones best. Then after their sheiking days are over they think they ought to get the sweetest girl in the world for their wife. They never stop to think what becomes of the silly little things they've had so much fun with. Neither do they consider the girl they marry—if she must be 100 per cent pure, isn't she entitled to the same thing?

Well, Miss 1926, I hope some day they'll stop thinking of themselves long enough to realize that whether we're angels or the kind of girls men forget, we get cheated either way.

WHERE IS OUR INDEPENDENCE?

Where is now that independence, that spirit of '76? asks George Bernard Shaw. It is a pertinent and pungent question on the eve of the nation's celebration of its 150th birthday. The question cannot be answered in a Fourth of July speech recounting the courage of the Fathers who defied the tyrannical rule of George III. It can be answered by comparing the revolutionary spirit of the founders of our Government with the complacent subserviency of our officials today.

The armies of King George III may not be thundering at our gates, but the armies of oppression have camped within our capital. Our legislators would be wrathfully eloquent if the Filipinos or the Haitians showed the independence which we celebrate on the Fourth of July, but would those legislators, in the face of opposition from their constitutents, stand squarely for independent thinking on questions of government?

It has become the custom for most of them who rule over us to count votes before taking a stand in legislative halls, and to fall in line with expediency rather than with right, if right happens to be in the minority. Jingo shouts from an organization intent on passing its special bit of legislation drown the voice of God, and the lineup swings with the organizations making the most noise and throwing the biggest scare at the elections.

Perhaps independence is almost an exotic thing in a democracy and therefore to be regarded among the priceless treasures. In our country, where the majority rules, we are likely not to give proper respect to minorities. In our disregard of minorities there is danger that genius, truth and rare virtues in the race may be destroyed and smothered by the desire to conform with what seems the majority opinion. It was to prevent majority tyranny that the bill of rights was incorporated in the Constitution.

America has choice spirits, true spiritual fathers of the country, who search for truth and follow where it may lead, regardless of penalties. They are working in their laboratories, in the market place and in the forum. Some persons are often shocked by the daring independence of these pioneers, but the defenders of liberty are not unduly alarmed or dismayed. Reasonable independence is what is most desired by all Americans with the spirit of '76 in their blood.

MAUDE ADAMS; A LOVELY TRADITION.

In retirement Maude Adams writes her memoirs for current magazine publication, gently wistful things, a little smile, a little sigh in words. She remembers Peter Pan. It was the role she liked best of all. How long ago was that? Well—just long enough to make a lovely tradition. There are other recollections: "The Little Minister," "What Every Woman Knows," "Quality Street," "A Kiss for Cinderella." Their memory is sweet, and Maude Adams, who graced them, comments blithely on her triumphs. Fairy stuff, most of it, a trifle old-fashioned for us now; it came in the childhood of our stage, but the characters Maude Adams created have never been outgrown. The earth could not quite claim them. Her characters were not people but beliefs; young faiths in the goodness of womenkind, and children, and fairies.

She seems glad, looking back at herself now, that she withdrew from the stage when she did, an always somewhat mysterious withdrawal which she does not trouble to explain in much detail. Remembering the Maude Adams of tradition, we are glad, too. The modern stage might not have been so kind to her. It has treated those feminine stars of the older generation, who remain, very shabbily. Miss Barrymore plays declasse heroines now; there do not seem to be any other sort to be played. Mrs. Fiske wastes her charm depicting horribly outspoken harridans; characters of the present-day stage are all horribly outspoken. Miss Anglin reduces her mature strength to the sobby weakness of intriguing wives; all stage wives nowadays are intriguing. There are few wholesome or memorable portraits to be drawn from the drama of today.

Maude Adams, happily, has been spared all this. Just before the decade of disillusionment, profanity and lewdness on the American stage she retired. Was she a prophetess? No matter. The Maude Adams tradition is beautiful, untarnished; part of the loveliness of fairyland which, no matter how blase the dramatic flair of the moment, will always be near us.

THE ARTISTIC HOD CARRIER.

The "certificate of craftsmanship," whatever that amounts to, has been bestowed upon Andrew Erec by the New York Building Congress. This distinction was won because Erec is a better hod carrier than his fellows, and, presumably, brought to his task a dexterity and finesse that elevated it to a craft.

If this had happened in one of Horatio Alger's books, Andrew's excellence with the hod would have carried him to the lofty heights of a brick mason, after which he would have become the leading contractor of New York, all the while being kind to the toilers in his employ. It probably won't happen that way in real life.

Something may be said in favor of doing the job well; in fact, most self-made men have said it frequently, but it would still depend somewhat on the job. The hod carrier who stays with it until he becomes an artist in his line is likely to form the habit, and decide to let the man at the top of the ladder do the work. Had his ambition matched his skill, he would have tackled a job with larger possibilities before becoming so adept.

Some day someone of place and prominence will record the simple truth, however iconoclastic, that he reached the heights because he didn't like his early drudgery, sidestepped as much of it as possible, and got into another line at the earliest opportunity. Because the Babbitts have said such kind things of industry, many a youth may start with the notion that nothing else matters, and confident that the beginner may start at the ground floor and work to the top.

That can happen, and has, but more achievement may be credited to imagination and a persistent search for something suitable, which is to say congenial and profitable employment. It is reasonable to assume that the world's greatest hod carrier, while following an honorable calling, still gets no more than the union scale, and is so busy he won't hear Opportunity when the knocking starts.

THE WHELPLEY COLLECTION.

There was an art before our own—the art of the Stone Age. What that was in North America above the Rio Grande is illustrated by the Whelpley collection. Here at St. Louis the aborigines had their metropolis, and in the region around flowered the arts of the people. Dr. Whelpley's father began the collection in Benton County, Ill. He lived near the clay bank from which were taken the flint slabs out of which the Cahokians made their spades and hoes. That was an agricultural community. It extended from the mounds on the St. Louis hilltops across to those on the Illinois side. Between those ranges of hills were the fields tilled with flint implements, and some scholars have thought the region was threaded by canals from the river. At any rate, no white man ever saw that great prehistoric scene, nor can imagination recreate it.

Perhaps nowhere in the world was the art of the stone age more beautiful than it was here. From Ohio west to the plains and from Wisconsin to Louisiana come most of the treasures in flint, granite, quartzite, hematite, copper and pottery, left by the Indians. The Meadows flints, so-called, a set of ceremonial implements taken from a mound in Tennessee, are the Kohinoor of all American flints. The Whelpley collection shows what fine artists there were hereabouts in that time. It is a bewildering display of garden tools, weapons, personal adornments, religious objects, domestic articles, pipes and playthings. It moreover traces most of these step by step from the raw material to the finished product. It constitutes altogether a priceless heritage which ought to be in an enlarged public art museum.

If this community is so fortunate as to get it, something of the sort should be undertaken. As an exhibit from the Stone Age of our own country, a veritable treasure trove from the mounds and the fields, its like is not to be found in the Field Museum, the Smithsonian Institution or the Peabody. It was a witticism among the archeologists that if Mexico had ever fallen Dr. Whelpley would have got the Calendar Stone. As it was, his service to science and posterity was very great.

THE RAINMAKERS.

Word comes from the tobacco region of Virginia that rain is badly needed for the sake of the crop and that the Episcopalians of Danville, mindful of their duty to the Commonwealth, have taken it upon themselves to pray for a downpour. Drouth is not peculiar to Virginia and it not infrequently happens that other sections find themselves similarly stricken and it sometimes happens, as it has happened there, that groups of devout persons undertake to change the situation.

It is pretty well known by this time that rain, at variable intervals, descends upon the just and the unjust, and that, sometimes, the just get less than they deem themselves entitled to and the unjust seem to get more than their share. Generally speaking, though, the rain business, as administered under the laws that control it, is fairly well attended to, with equitable distribution of its benefits. It is difficult to see how the Episcopalians of Danville or any other well-meaning enthusiasts can improve it much.

Watering the world is a big proposition. It appears to be in capable hands. It is quite doubtful whether it could be better done by any person or group of persons anywhere. Those who would essay the task may be guided by self-interest. It sometimes happens that, in the same locality, some want rain and some do not want it. This is especially true in a region as extensive as a state. It would be difficult to get all the people of a state to agree as to when they would have their rain, and how much. North Carolina found this situation when state-wide invocation for rain was suggested. Some of the Tarheels wanted their rain right now and others wanted theirs a little later. Local option was proposed, but there are drawbacks to that. Probably, all things considered, it would be better to let things remain as they are, as they are likely to do.

FOLLOW THE ARCTIC DUCKS.

Wild ducks, according to Major Lanphier, second in command of the Detroit Arctic expedition, are seen at Point Barrow in the spring flying northward and in the autumn flying south again with their young. Next year the expedition will renew its search for land for airplane landings where, presumably, the ducks found it for their nests, since they never nest on the ice.

If somewhere in that big white patch on the polar map indicating unexplored reaches north of Point Barrow and centering about the Pole of Inaccessibility land can be discovered, the finding will be of immense importance in arranging routes for transpolar flights connecting important population centers in northern lands. At any rate, the Board of Control is quite right in deciding that the further experiment is worth making. To glimpse new polar land is now the most tempting prize of aviation.

CHEATING OLD AGE.

Sir James Cantlie, a well-known British physician, taught that "old age is just a pose, and a man is as old as his arteries." He started classes in London for men and women past middle age, with a system called "physical jerks," boasted that, at 73, he could dance as well as when he was 17; took only four hours' sleep in the 24, eschewed tea, coffee and alcohol, but smoked tobacco, which he said was the least of the "four social poisons." And then the other day he died.

What is the lesson? There is none. At least none touching the best way, physically, to cheat old age. Every octogenarian, nonagenarian and centenarian has his or her own reason for living beyond the Psalmist's "three score years and ten." Some drink and smoke, work steadily and play heartily. Others live with extreme care and avoid everything exciting, sleep long and preach quiet and abstinence. But time respects none of their theories. Nature is blind to their various habits. As Solomon said long ago: "One thing happeneth to them all."

We can learn, however, from the best of the old-age records that life may be prolonged and that death may, in a sense, be cheated, by making life, while it lasts, happy and useful. He dies twice who permits old age to reduce him to mental and emotional poverty.

PICNICS.

Have you ever considered
Why people go on picnics?
Or have you gone
On the picnics,
Following your natural inclination,
Without minding
"The whys and wherefores?"
When you stop to consider
Picnics
They appeal to reason
As more or less
Of a nuisance.
Beforehand,
There is the worry
And bother
Of fixing sandwiches,
And preparing a basket
In such a way
That the fruit will not mingle
With the cake
To the detriment of both.
On the way out
Every motorist in town
Seems to have determined
To go in the same direction.
Arriving at the picnic grounds
You decide that the Vandals
Have recently passed through,
Until you recollect that the Vandals
Had never heard of tin cans;
Then you conclude
That the picnickers who were there before you
Were a "dirty lot."
It invariably rains on a picnic day,
And the ants discover the sandwiches
About 15 minutes before lunch time.
Considering all these disadvantages,
Chesterton has suggested
That if we sit on the kitchen floor,
And eat sandwiches
We can have all the fun
And none of the inconvenience
Of a picnic.
But if we sat on the kitchen floor,
Or on the front lawn,
We would still be
Either near the house or in it.
Is that why we go on picnics?
Most of us cannot get away
From ourselves,
So we do the next best thing—
Get away from the hum-drum realities
Which we see around us all the time.
There is no pleasure in picnics,
But if they give us a needed change,
Hurrah for picnics!

CAN'T KEEP A GOOD MAN DOWN.

(Boonville, Mo., Advertiser.)

When Abraham Lincoln was a young man he ran for the Legislature of Illinois and was badly swamped. He next entered business, failed, and spent 17 years of his life paying up the debts of a worthless partner.

He was in love with a beautiful woman to whom he became engaged—and then she died.

Entering politics again, he ran for Congress and was badly defeated. He then tried for an appointment in the United States Land office, but failed. After this he became a candidate for the United States Senate and was defeated.

In 1856 he became a candidate for the vice presidency, but lost the race. In 1858 he was once more defeated, this time by Douglas. In the face of all this, he eventually became one of the country's greatest men, if not the greatest.

WE CELEBRATE AN ANNIVERSARY.

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one amendment to dissolve the legislative bands which have connected it to the others, and to assume among the powers of the Constitution a separate and superior station to which the Antisaloon League and the W. C. T. U. would raise it, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare how they spent the money which impelled it to this superiority.

We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all amendments are created equal, that they are endowed by the Congress with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of enforcement. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among us, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of super-government becomes a nuisance of an accessory to these ends, it is the right of the people to halter or to hamstring it, and to institute an investigation, laying its foundations on Congress and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to disclose the identity of Messrs. X, Y, Z and Zero. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that under-cover government, long established, should be dragged into the light permanently; all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to bellow, when evils are insufferable, than to take such action at the polls as will insure open and above-board government. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute espionage, it is their right, it is their duty, to blow off steam and to make sure that it does not happen again.

William Feather, in "The Nation's Business" for July, has a new type of Independence day address, a speech which sedulously avoids making the eagle scream, an article which endeavors to interpret the soul of America.

It is Mr. Feather's contention that the soul of America is expressed in our boundless energy and in our material prosperity. According to this critic, we should quit apologizing for jazz and for sky-scrapers. Mr. Feather would have us accept both frankly as American art.

In our humble opinion, he is right. Americans have been called money-grubbers so long they have themselves begun to believe the accusation. Yet no people on earth are more liberal than those same money-grubbers, as countless foreign lecturers can bear witness. If the itching palm were peculiarly American, the accusation might stand. We hazard the guess that it is not.

Our architecture runs to sky-scrapers, yet a sky-scraper can be as beautiful architecturally as a cathedral. Most of the architectural masterpieces of Europe were finished before 1776, and are the heritage of the entire Western world. If jazz represents the quickened tempo of American life, if it is the first rude art expression of a people who have but recently conquered a continent, if it is as indigenous as corn on the cob, why apologize for jazz?

We declared our independence of Europe 150 years ago. The anniversary seems an appropriate time to declare our freedom from European art-forms, and from an embarrassed shyness in the presence of anyone wearing a high hat and a monocle.

The MIRROR PUBLIC OPINION

BACK OF THE FACADE.

From the New York World.

YESTERDAY the ringing of throughout this and other cities in the celebration of Independence It is a week in which countless appeals be addressed to national pride: pride the founders of the republic, in a centu and a half of popular government, in wealth, power and social achievement. nation which began its career weak despised now bestrides the world, financia ly and in some degree economically, like Colossus. There are innumerable for the Jefferson Bricks and Elijah Pogra of today. It is an ironic fate that at a moment lets the scaffolding slip and veals part of the imposing social and ical structure as Jerry-built and rotten.

It has happened before. It was a year to Americans, in just the degree in which were really patriotic, sick rather proud.

Two months ago self-righteous Ameri might have felt that there was no da of such a contrast arising between nati pretenses and realities. This assumption wholly superior virtue has faded. Eloquent Appeal for Cancellation of War Debts Made to Coolidge

000 were advanced to our associates in the war, solely and only the more effectually to provide for the security and defense of the United States; in other words, to enable the war-weary allies to prosecute the war alone against the enemies of the United States until we could join them, and thus save us from having to fight Germany without allies, or crawl on our knees at her feet.

Money Loaned Was Used for America.

"It was our bounden and officially avowed duty thus to defend America, as well as our only way possible for upwards of a year after we entered the war. And America performed her duty as became America. She poured out money like water. While her associates were holding the trenches with men, America was helping them with money. All that was done in battle during the first year of our war with Germany to save us from the catastrophe of having to stand against her alone was done by Great Britain and Belgium and France and Italy. All the bloodshed was British and Belgian and French and Italian blood, not a drop of it was American. Our money was used both for them and for us; and their blood was shed for us and for themselves.

"In a speech at Denver in August, 1924, the Commander in Chief of the American armies in France said:

"'What was the situation in 1917? We had no plan, no preparation, no artillery, no transportation, no ships; in fact, nothing.

"'If it had not been that the allies were able to hold the lines for 15 months after we had entered the war, hold them with the support of loans we made, the war might well have been lost. We scarcely realize what those loans meant to them and to us.

"'While I am on the subject, I want to say something I have never said in a public address before.

"'It seems to me there is some middle ground where we should bear a certain part of the expense in maintaining the allied armies on the front, while we were preparing, instead of calling all this money a loan and insisting on its payment.

"'We were responsible, we gave the money, knowing it would be used to hold the Boche until we could prepare. Fifteen months! Think of it! We sent our first men in June and they were not ready to go into the front lines until the following year.'

"What support, Mr. President, does the Government derive from this bravely uttered judgment of Gen. John J. Pershing? Would that he might tell us, even more candidly, what he feels deep down in his heart.

"The Government of the United States bases its right to demand repayment upon the merest technicality, a naked promise. It would seem that somebody in authority took advantage of the great need of our associates to require of them a promise to repay money advanced for our security and defense, and that, God knows, was so used. It was a mean and un-American thing under such circumstances, and in any court of morals, before any tribunal of honor, yes, as justice is administered between man and man, in any court of law, the United States would have no standing whatever. You and I, as lawyers, know that an agreement made without consideration is of no effect. As I have shown, and shall further show, the allies gave full value for the money they received and the agreement to repay is void for want of consideration. What man of fair mind and honorable instincts can say that the United States Government has not enacted the role of a cruel and harsh extortioner in the matter of these so-called debts?

"Let us glance in turn at the case of England, of Belgium, of France, of Italy.

Cancellations by England.

"England (meaning Great Britain) loaned her allies something like $10,000,000,000, but not as a substitute for men. Upon the invasion of Belgium, she entered the war with her armies, and before the awful death list made conscription necessary, enlisted 4,000,000 volunteers. England did that—loaned $10,000,000,000, recruited 4,000,000 volunteers.

"As a substitute for men, we advanced England something more than $4,000,000,000, under the law authorizing its payment for our security and defense. While her young men were dying by the hundred thousand in the trenches, fighting our fight as much as their own for more than a year, the war was not costing us a man. We did what we could. We helped England keep her soldiers in fighting trim by furnishing money for supplies produced in America. England asks nothing for her dead. We demand repayment of our money, with interest.

"We are the richest nation the world has ever known. England is embarrassed as never before. With a million unemployed, she carries a huge burden of debt and has resorted to a taxation almost confiscatory. America taxes an income of $5000 but $37.50; England taxes it $787. She is dependent for her revenue upon her trade and our tariff wall practically excludes her from trade with us. Nothing is undamaged but her honor; nothing unshaken but the unshakable steadiness of her soul. And yet we, the Croesus-nation, demand of struggling, staggering England not only the $4,000,000,000 we let her have but an additional $7,000,000,000 because she must have time in which to pay. Because she is in trouble, we charge her $7,000,000,000 for time. We have no moral right to a farthing from England, bue she signed and we hold her to her signature.

"Mr. President, what do you, as a man, think of the way we have treated England? What I think of it is of no consequence. What is of consequence is what the world thinks of it, what America thinks of it, what posterity, what history will think of it. It may be that, in time, language will contain words that will adequately characterize it. They are wanting in my vocabulary.

"England proposed cancellation of all war debts at a net cost to her of $6,000,000,000, inasmuch as the nations owe her that amount over and above what she is said to owe us. We declined the proposal and demand the uttermost farthing; and England now agrees to forgive her debtors all they owe her in excess of the amount we require of her. A striking contrast, that.

Belgium Pays Only U. S.

"Take Belgium—you remember how the world held its breath when Germany, unprovoked and in violation of her guarantee of Belgian neutrality, thundered into Belgium, laid her cities waste, massacred her civilians, all but annihilated her little army and swept the remnant over into France. Belgium might have bought immunity at the cost of honor. That was not Belgium's way. She was in honor bound to resist the encroachment upon her neutrality, to stand on her own soil between Germany and France. She was not even tempted to save herself. She preserved her honor intact. She stood her ground until the German monster crushed her.

"Belgium is a tiny kingdom, a quarter of the size of New York and with a population about two-thirds as large. We made the same kind of advances to Belgium as to England and we furnished her starving people with food. Belgium also signed, and we have called her attention to her signature and demanded repayment for the food as well as the credits.

With a greatly reduced man power, Belgium has ben struggling to rebuild her ruined cities. Her taxation is excessive. Incomes of $5000 pay $620, instead of $37.50 as here; but she is great of heart and endures. All the other nations have forgiven her debt to them. Only the United States insists upon payment, although President Wilson joined with the other powers in the agreement not to ask Belgium to pay. We demand payment of every dollar for food and advances to little Belgium; and, because she is pitiably poor and must have time, we make her pay for it. The food and advances totaled (in round numbers) $377,000,000. We expect every cent of it and charge her an additional $350,000,000 for time—in all $728,000,000, the equivalent of $100 for every man, woman and child in the kingdom. The other nations forgive her $800,000,000 of principal. Another contrast, not exactly pleasing to contemplate.

"How is it possible, unless the American people are the most detestable people on the face of the earth for the Government of the United States to justify such a performance as expressing the will of the people? It is a baseless assumption, and the action of the Government is a hideous perversion of the popular will.

The Case of France.

"Then there is France, Mr. President. France that came to our assistance when our struggle for national existence was all but lost. Washington himself was almost in despair. 'We are at the end of our tether,' he said, 'and now or never our deliverance must come.'

"Deliverance came—and from France. Across the ocean she sent us large sums of money, as gifts and as loans, and she sent armies and ships of war. France saved America. There is no controversy about that. Yorktown was captured and Cornwallis surrendered because Washington had under his command more French sailors and soldiers than Americans; and it was Washington who declared that America would cherish 'unalterable gratitude' to France.

"How has our 'unalterable grattitude' been shown by the Government of the United States?

"France, too, obtained credits from us upon our entrance of the war, and they were for the same legally declared purpose, the more effectual national security and defense; and France also appended her signature to the bond. The United States, through its constituted authorities, has demanded repayment. France is dreadfully poor and heavily taxed, incomes of $5000 paying $839 instead of our $37.50. Her war debt is enormous and to it has been added a debt of many billions for the rebuilding of the regions devastated by German cannon. Struggling bravely to keep herself financially above water, the United States adds to her burden a weight well calculated to sink her. Of all the great European combatants in the war, France is the greatest sufferer and Germany the least.

Where the Gratitude?

"We are literally glutted with wealth, far richer than any other nation has ever been in all the history of the world; and, with positively threatening aspect, we point to France's signature and demand that she pay.

"While America was putting only money into French battlefields, France was holding Germany, as was England, at the cost of hundreds of thousands of her young men. When America had not one man in the French trenches, France was raising a barrier of her slain sons over which Imperial Germany had not the might to pass. A barrier for France, do you say? Yes, a barrier for France and a barrier for the United States of America. Had Germany passed that barrier of French dead and trampled France beneath her feet, she would have triumphed over all but the United States, and America would have been left to continue the war alone. Visualize that, Mr. President, and you will realize what France did for America. And now, Almighty God! we demand of France the return of every dollar we gave her and penalize her for time in which to pay. Where is Washington's 'unalterable gratitude?' Where is the common decency that dwells in the heart of the ordinarily decent man? O shame, where is thy blush?

"In morals, in justice, in law, France doesn't owe us one centime, one-fifth of a cent, and we owe her for a second 'deliverance,' a second salvation. She got nothing but what our Government declared to be for the security and defense of this nation. According to Col. ——, France with England and Belgium saved us a quarter of a million lives and a million wounded—expressed in money, twenty-seven and a half billions of dollars. All the wealth of the world could not pay her for what she did for us—and she asks nothing; while we demand of France repayment of three billion and a half dollars we gave her in place of men and, because she can't put her hand on the amount and pay spot cash, an additional three billion and a half for time.

"The same thing is true of Italy. The financial condition of Italy may be judged from the wage of a dollar and a quarter a day paid her skilled labor compared with $10 and $12 paid here, and her tax of $1025 on an income of $5000 compared with ours of $37.50. Italy is a nation of the very poor and we are a nation of the very rich. For effectually providing for our national security and defense we advanced poor Italy, who also signed on the dotted line, a billion six hundred and forty-seven thousand dollars. We insist upon its repayment and, because it is impossible for her to pay at once, we charge her three-quarters of a billion in addition—for time.

More Than Nation's Debt.

"Now then, for the totals: We advanced these four Governments engaged in war with the enemies of the United States something less than nine billions and a half dollars and, upon a pure technicality, have demanded and they have agreed to pay not only the principal sum, but upwards of eleven billions for nothing but time—the total exaction by the United States from its late war associates and friends being over twenty-one billions of dollars—a billion more than the amount of our national debt.

"These four nations have been looking to German reparation payments to recover some of their war costs. Especially has France counted upon them for the expense of rebuilding her devastated regions; but our demands will annually take about 60 per cent of the German payments, if made. Much more than half of what a defeated Germany hands over to her former enemies to indemnify them for destruction wrought by German guns in an aggressive and unprovoked war, our Government intends to take from its war associates for a part of the cost of keeping their soldiers fit to fight "the enemies of the United States" for our "security" and to die in our "defense." The German payments cease after 35 years; those of our friends continue for 27 years thereafter and, in the end, we shall have exacted more than the total of German reparations. They, especially France, have begged that we make their payments to us dependent upon their collections from Germany. We have refused and insisted upon prompt payment according to the bond whether Germany pays or not. In the case of France, what an exhibition of America's conception of "unalterable gratitude!"

Calls Settlement Barbaric.

"I am addressing the President of the United States and want to maintain an attitude of courtesy as becomes a citizen in addressing his President. I may not say to you just what I should say to Calvin Coolidge, were he, like me, a private citizen of the Commonwealth of Massachusets; but were he such a citizen, I should not hesitate to say to him that the cruelty of the Government of the United States in this matter seems to me absolutely barbaric, its greed to attain proportions that may fitly be called infinite.

"When these incalculable sums have been paid (which Heaven forbid), how will it leave the United States? What will this nation be able to say it did for the prosecution of the war for the first 15 months of our participation? Nothing. Our associates will have prosecuted the war, fought our battles, saved a quarter of a million American lives and a million American wounded, or, expressed in money, 27½ billion dollars, and averted a contest between the United States and Germany alone—and they will have done all this without the help of a man or a dollar from us.

"In all sincerity, it seems to me America is more to be commiserated than our late associates; for they have only assumed unjust obligations of monstrous proportions, while the United States has made a cheap sacrifice of its honor. What a trivial price for a nation's honor—21 billions!

Earning World's Enmity.

"Can the United States afford to be wholly indifferent to the judgment of the world? A competent observer, who has visited Europe every year since the war, says that all the local hatreds have been combined in one "grand hatred" of America. A lady living at Nice writes me that she has frequently see French peasants spit at the mention of America, that we are called "the hogs' country" and that at a dinner recently attended by distinguished guests it was said that "if the world could be pictured as a mammoth body, America would be its stomach." The well known American publicist, Mr. Frank H. Simonds, publicly declared, only a few days ago, that "one of the two outstanding circumstances of Europe today is the rapid development of a common European dislike and worse of the United States, from Land's End to the Golden Horn," and he adds, "If I for one moment believed the debt settlements which have been made would last, would be carried out for even a decade, I should regard the European feeling with real alarm."

"And for all of this, America has to thank the Congress of the United States. Its members well know its action to be morally indefensible; know that every dollar of the money advanced to our associates was advanced for our own benefit and used for our benefit and that it benefited us incalculably. When the measure providing for these advances was being discussed in Congress, leading Represenatives and Senators loudly proclaimed them to be solely for the security and defense of the United States as declared in the law itself. Let me remind you of some of these utterances.

"Senator McCumber, chairman of the Finance Committee, said: "It is probably true that more than a quarter of a million men are going down to death or being wounded or captured, every month during the contest. Therefore, while they are suffering to that extent, we ought to be mighty liberal in the expenditure of money when we can take no part in the real battle, which today is the battle of the American people."

"While our associates were suffering so in the 'the battle of the American people,' we were suffering not at all—contributing money only to enable them to continue to fight that battle. Now we demand the return of the money.

Smoot's Wartime Opinion.

"Senator Smoot said: 'I think that every dollar that will be expended under the provisions of this bill, if it is expended honestly, will be for the benefit of the United States.'

"And we demand the return of every dollar so expended for 'the benefit of the United States' and $11,000,000,000 additional for time.

"Senator Kenyon said: 'I want to say this for myself that I hope one of these loans, if we make it, will never be paid and that we will never ask that it be paid. We owe more to the republic of France for what it has done for us than we can ever repay. I never want to see this Government ask France to return the loan we make to her.'

"If this distinguished Senator of 1917 were in the Senate today, he'd see this Government demanding not only the principal of the sum adadvanced to France, but three bilion and a half dollars interest upon it.

"Senator Cummings said: 'I am perfectly willing to give to any of the allied nations the money which they need to carry on our war, for it is now our war. I would give it just as freely as I would vote to equip our army or to maintain our own navy.'

"'We equipped other armies 'to carry on our war,' because we didn't have armies of our own to do it, and now we demand a return of the money for that equipment.

"Congressman Mann said: 'I think it is our highest duty in the making of war to give aid to those who are fighting the enemy against whom we have declared war.'

"Wherever and whenever such a thing could be done in the wars of history, it has been done; but the history of the world will be searched in vain for any other demand by a government for the return of money given an ally to do the fighting for it. The distinction is exclusively ours.

As Fordney Saw Loans.

"Congressman Fordney said: 'Their (the advances) only purpose is to aid them in the best way possible to fight our battles across the sea without calling upon our men to go there.'

"And now we demand the return of every gun, every shell, every rifle, every bullet, every reel of barbed wire, every gallon of oil and bushel of oats and barrel of flour we gave our associates so that they might continue to 'fight our battles across the sea,' or their equivalent in cash plus interest.

"Congressman Mondell said: 'We can (by the advances) effectively and in the immediate future, arm, strengthen and support those who are, since our declaration of war, fighting our battles.'

"And for the cost of arming and strengthening and supporting our friends to fight our battles we want payment in full, doubled.

"Congressman Rainey said: 'We are making this loan in order to further our interests primarily in this war, and from the moment when the Congress of the United States declared that a state of war existed between this country and Germany, every blow struck at Germany by any of her enemies was struck also in our interest.'

"And this same Congressman filed a minority report in the House of Representatives protesting that seven billion was not enough to wring out of France in payment for the weapon we put into her hands, and with which she struck Germany 'in our interest.'

"You have my grievance, Mr. President, set forth as clearly as my poor abilities permit; and the redress I ask, nay, demand, is cancellation of every dollar and cent of debt arising out of advances to those governments engaged in war with the enemies of the United States, for the security and defense of this nation. I ask, I demand, it on behalf of myself and every American who loves his country and has in his breast a spark of honor."

It is choose Mammon, Mr. President, if it sacrifice the world's respect and good-will for gain, if it barter the Nation's honor for $21,000,000,000 or $21,000,000,000,000, wherever it circulates the eyes of the world will see only the face of Shylock upon the nation's coin, and, wherever it floats, only dollar signs where the stars glitter in the nation's flag, and, in place of its stripes of red, yellow bars of gold.

May the just God, who presides over the destiny of nations, arouse the lovers of America to demand and procure the cancellation of every dollar said to be due us for money advanced to 'the Governments engaged in war with the enemies of the United States' for the 'purpose of more effectually providing for the national security and defence.' So shall they vindicate the honor of America in the august tribunal of world opinion.

I have the honor to be, Mr. President, your most obedient servant,

FREDERICK W. PEABODY.

A Specious Objection to Cancellation.

Since the foregoing went to press, the Secretary of the Treasury, who is also chairman of the Debt Funding Commission, has given the specious reason for noncancellation of war debts that the money represented by them was borrowed from the American people and must be repaid to them; and, if it is not repaid by our late associates, must be repaid out of the public revenues.

That goes without saying. Of course it must. All the other war costs were similarly met by money borrowed from the people, and there is no just reason for discrimination between them. About $19,000,000,000 of our remaining debt, which includes money borrowed for our allies, is for war costs, and it will all be paid from public revenues whether our former associates reimburse us or not.

At the rate at which our national debt with falling taxes, has been reduced since the war, it will all be paid inside of 20 years; but our associates, if the funding agreements are carried out, will keep on making their monstrous annual payments for 40 years after our bond holders have been paid in full.

ECONOMIC REVOLUTION, PEACEFUL OR VIOLENT, IMPENDS IN ENGLAND

ain did not care. Salvation always would come to the British, not in any noteworthy part from abroad, but nearly in toto from the fathomless wealth of their historical and cultural patrimony.

Upon this patrimony, undoubtedly, they still mainly depend, and will go on depending. But their complete intellectual self-trust plainly has been shaken. Rude and painful facts tell them that, with their economics, they dare not be content.

Four-fifths of Great Britain's 40,000,000 people are very poor. They are as patient as they are poor. Revolutionary fires find them as asbestos. But, after all, they are human, and there is a point beyond which human endurance cannot go.

It is a realization of this fact which is producing the altered mood in Great Britain and arousing economic curiosity with an intensity and on a scale heretofore unknown. There are few so blind as not to see that an economic revolution is inevitable. The only question is whether it shall be accomplished by violent or peaceful means.

Foresees Plan to Deliver Philippines to 'Big Business'

lished by American corporations in Hawaii and Porto Rico.

At this point it is interesting to observe three significant circumstances:

First, Congressman Bacon is an intimate friend of Gen. Wood and recently spent some time with him in the Philippines. Second, an article by him urging the passage of his bill recently appeared in the Dearborn Independent, owned by Henry Ford, whose interest in discovering a suitable place for production of rubber is well known. Third, President Coolidge recently sent a personal representative to the Philippines to study and report on general conditions there, and the representative was Carmi A. Thompson of Ohio, which is the seat of the American rubber industry.

Bacon Tells of Trade Opportunities.

In presenting the merits of his plan, Congressman Bacon said:

"Administration of the Moro provinces under Filipino control has proved wholly unsatisfactory. It has aroused hereditary antagonism between Moros and Christian Filipinos, and has resulted in unrest, trouble and bloodshed. The judges, prosecutors and constabulary in the Moro provinces are Filipinos. Even if it should eventually be decided that the rest of the islands should be given independence, the Moro provinces must be given a separate government. Their future must not be involved in the future of the rest of the islands. They have what we need, they have not the capital to develop them.

"The islands of Mindanao and Basilan contain 1,500,000 acres of the best land in the world for the growth of the finest para rubber. There is a tremendous amount of timber, especially fine hardwood; in Mindanao are iron ore deposits estimated at 400,000,000 tons, and on the island of Cebu are large seams of coking coal, making an ideal site for smelting operations.

"One-third of the world's supply of cocoanut meat is now supplied by the Philippines. The islands have practically a monopoly of the Manila hemp used in making cordage. Sisal, used in the manufacture of binder twine, can be grown there. All these are things which we need, and for the production of which American capital is available, if the proper form of government were established.

"The present political condition of the Moros is pathetic. They are deliberately denied any representation in the local government. Their judges, prosecutors and magistrates are all drawn from among Christian Filipinos. They desire American provincial governors, but the Legislature refuses to confirm any but Christian Filipinos. If we are to discharge our obligations to them, we must end this situation."

Another Poland, Says Filipino Leader.

To Pedro Guevara, Phillipine resident commissioner in Washington and entitled by virtue of that office to occupy a seat and participate in the debates in the House of Representatives, the writer went for the other side of the picture.

A dynamic little brown man, known as to be one of the ablest speakers and debaters in the House, despite the double handicap of an accent and a slight lisp, he was eager to state his case:

"For sheer barbarous cruelty," he said, "the Bacon proposal has no equal since the dismemberment of Poland by the Hapsburgs, the Hohenzollerns and the Romanoffs. It is a proposal to sever the living body of a nation. After our long and painful struggle to fit ourselves for independence and self-government that such a proposal as this could be offered and seriously considered is enough to make us despair.

"The effort to picture the Moro Filipinos and the Christian Filipinos as separate racial groups is dishonest, but it has a purpose. The most effective way to subjugate a people and get what you want out of them is to divide them against themselves. This is the motive of those who now endeavor to create an impression that there is a distinct racial division between people who have been living together for more than 400 years.

"True, we have different religious beliefs. So has the United States. It is unfortunate that a member of the American Congress has seen fit to raise a point of religious division in our country. Would he say that Catholics in the United States are entitled to a government separate from the Protestants? Or that the Jews should not be required to live under laws passed by Gentiles? The majority of the governing officials in this country are Protestants and Gentiles, but the Catholics and Jews comprise a larger percentage of the population of the United States than do the Mohammedans of the Philippines.

Denies Prejudice Because of Creeds

"Religious liberty exists in the Philippines and is guaranteed by laws passed by the Philippine Legislature. I challenge anyone to produce a single instance of official discrimination against anyone because of his religious beliefs. The attempt to stir up religious prejudice among our people is deplorable. I am sure the American people will condemn it when they understand it.

"But what strange charges are brought against us! It is declared that the Moros are not permitted to vote and that their representation in the Legislature is farcical. The Moros are not permitted to vote because the American Congress denied them that right and the American Congress is the only body on earth that can grant it. Their representatives to the Legislature are appointed by the American Governor-General, who is responsible solely to the President of the United States.

"It is charged that the magistrates, prosecutors and constabulary are all drawn from among the Christian Filipinos. If that is true, who is to blame? Every single one of those officials is appointed by the American Governor-General. There has never been one instance where Philippine Senate refused to confirm the appointment of a Moro official. I defy anyone to produce one.

"Again, it is said that the Moros would prefer American provincial governors. The remedy is plain. Let Congress grant them the franchise and they can elect whomever they pleased.

"The accusation is frequently made that local government in the islands is entirely in the hands of a few Manila politicians. That the people are ignorant, do not vote, and take little interest in public affairs. Let us see. In the last general election, in 1925, 85 per cent of the qualified voters in the islands cast their ballots. Compare that with the condition in the United States, where, in the presidential election of 1924, less than 50 per cent of the qualified voters went to the polls. Does that indicate political indifference in our country?

Intelligent Voting.

"Moreover, in the last general election, only 10 per cent of the ballots cast were straight tickets. In other words, 90 per cent of the voters scratched their tickets. Does that indicate ignorance, inability to exercise citizenship, or incapacity to discriminate in public affairs and between public men?

"The cold fact is that all this is a smoke screen, thrown up to disguise the real motive behind this bill. The real forces behind the Bacon Bill are the forces of American capitalism, who desire to exploit the resources of the Philippines, unhindered by regulatory laws, and without regard for the rights of the Filipino people. They want what they cannot get elsewhere—cheap land, cheap minerals, cheap labor and a government that will let them do as they please.

"In the Philippines, we have a land low which provides that no foreign corporation shall own more than 2500 acres, nor lease more than 2500 more. This does not suit the big rubber companies who desire to acquire vast plantations, containing millions of acres. Under the Bacon bill, the legislative council, controlled entirely by Americans, could wipe out all such laws with a stroke of the pen.

"We also have certain laws providing for the safety, sanitation and comfort of our working people. The corporations who desire to exploit cheap labor do not want to be annoyed by such laws. The legislative council could repeal them at will.

Capital Is Needed.

"We realize the need for American capital in the development of our country, but, like every other people, we desire to retain the right to regulate that development in the interest of our people. All that Mr. Bacon says of the natural riches of the islands is true, but does he think that our people have no natural rights at all? Are they mere chattles, bought along with the land? A more unAmerican doctrine is inconceivable.

"I can tell you what will happen if the Moro Islands are cut off from the Philippines and made into a territory governed by a council appointed in Washington. The first thing will be the abrogation of all laws that interfere with the plans of the exploiting corporations. The second will be the ruthless subjugation of any native groups that protest. The next will be the importation of shiploads of coolies from China to work in the plantations, mines and smelters at wages of something like 10 cents a day. It would be a corporation's paradise. A compliant set of officials, perhaps chosen from sources close to the big interests they were supposed to regulate. A helpless native population. A scene of action far removed from the eyes of the people of the United States, who would be poorly informed of conditions. The cheapest labor in the world. It would be a corporation's paradise, but it would be a living hell for the Filipinos.

"I do not believe the people of the United States will stand for this horrible betrayal of those who have trusted them."

Total Is Now About $900,000 —Owners File Exceptions.

Awards totaling $271,395 were entered in Circuit Court last week in connection with the condemnation suit for widening of Olive street between Twelfth boulevard and Channing avenue. The largest amount, $100,500, went to the Century Electric Co. for property at Nineteenth and Olive streets.

The orders for payment just entered were made by Judge Mix. Previously Judge Calhoun made similar orders in favor of a large number of owners whose property will be taken for the improvement and the total now ordered paid is approximately $900,000.

Some owners have excepted to the damages assessed in their favor by the commissioners in the suit and these exceptions probably will be taken up in September. They say the damages are inadequate.

The city has paid into court in charge of Circuit Clerk Schmoll $1,900,000 for the cost of the improvement and as awards are entered he issues checks against the fund in favor of the judgment holder. Pending termination of the case, which was tied up in the Supreme Court on a constitutional plea until recently, Schmoll deposited the fund at interest with various banks until now about $50,000 has accumulated from this source.

Several property owners, including the Century Electric Co., have made a claim for the interest which accumulated on their respective awards but City Counselor Muench contends the interest belongs to the city. He pointed out that during the litigation the claimants enjoyed the use of their property either by occupying it or renting it to tennants. Judges Calhoun and Mix have taken these claims under advisement.

ASHLEY K. HAMMOND DIES

Was for 15 Years Advertising Manager of St. Louis Republic.

Ashley K. Hammond, who for 15 years was advertising manager of the St. Louis Republic, died at his home at Stoneybrook, N. Y., Friday. He is survived by his widow and two sons, Ashley and Lewis.

Mr. Hammond left St. Louis about 15 years ago and located in New York as representative of the Clover Leaf Newspapers. He retired from active business about two years ago.

PAGEANT RE-ENACTING 75 YEARS OF MISSOURI PACIFIC HISTORY BEGINS TONIGHT

Spectacle, Which Will Be Shown for Week in Francis Field Washington U., Has More Than 1000 Participants.

Seventy-five years ago today, July 4, 1851, the first spadeful of earth was turned by Mayor Luther M. Kennett of St. Louis for the first railroad west of the Mississippi River. Seventh and Poplar streets was the scene. That was the beginning of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, now one of the great trunk lines, and a milestone in the romantic growth of American rail systems.

Beginning tonight, at the hour of darkness, and for every night through next Sunday, inclusive, the Missouri Pacific will conduct a boldly conceived spectacle, "Service—A Pageant of Progress," in Francis Field, Washington University, Forsythe and Big Bend boulevards. This will commemorate the historic occasion of 1851 and visualize the story of transportation.

Admission will be free to the public and the grandstand has been augmented by other seats to make the capacity nearly 30,000. Boy Scouts will be ushers and special agents of the railroad will handle traffic. There is large parking space and special trolley and bus service will be provided.

1000 Employes to Take Part.

More than 1000 employes of the railroad will take part in the pageant, nearly all being from St. Louis. There will be a chorus of 150 men and women. William A. Parsons, director of the Garden Theater orchestra, who will lead a band for this spectacle, picked its members from among 15 employes' bands on the Missouri Pacific lines. A "non-stop" musical score will include classical, patriotic and folk music. A band of 38 Mexican employes from Kingsville, Tex., also will participate.

Tomorrow night there will be an unprecedented Western radio hookup to broadcast the music. Included will be Station KSD, the Post-Dispatch; WDAF, Kansas City; WAOW, Omaha, Neb.; WMC, Memphis, Tenn.; KPRC, Houston, Tex.; WOAI, San Antonio, Tex., and WBAP, Fort Worth, Tex. A loud speaker will be in place for the local audiences all week. A moving picture record will perpetuate the event for future anniversaries.

Huge Stage in Stadium.

A huge stage has been erected in the university stadium, with one end set with evergreen trees transplanted from the Ozarks. A stage lighting system has been arranged, said to be more elaborate than any ever before installed here. Stage delays will be avoided. Except for a few brief speeches there will be no spoken parts, only pantomime, but in intervals a character representing History, on an auxiliary platform, will offer explanations.

Joseph Solari is general director of the production. Other local specialists prepared the costumes, dances and lighting. The original suggestion of the pageant was by F. P. Johnson, a vice president of the Missouri Pacific. Much of the labor of getting ready was given by railroad employes on their own time. Mayor Miller, officials declared, refused to permit use of Art Hill for the pageant because it would have interfered with one hole of the golf course.

The first half of the pageant will be in 12 episodes, extending from the time of an Indian village on the site of St. Louis to the present day. The actors will be garbed in imitation of the classes and periods they represent. Spanish soldiers will be followed by American pioneers and traders. Episode by episode, an advance in the methods of communication and travel will be depicted. Covered wagons and an old stage coach from Kansas will be utilized. A fiddler will call a square dance after a pony express rider departs.

One of Notable Scenes.

A notable scene will be the repetition in part of a famous speech by Senator Benton in 1836 which helped make St. Louis the first western railroad gateway. In another scene Senator Benton, Thomas Allen, first president of the Missouri Pacific; Mayor Kennett, James H. Lucas, John O'Fallon and Daniel Page, the last three members of old St. Louis families, will be shown arranging finances of the new rail line. Records show that Lucas, O'Fallon and Page each subscribed $33,000 and flipped a nickel for the honor of adding the odd $1000.

In portraying the turn of the first earth for the road, details of the actual event will be followed closely. For instance, modern counterparts of the famous military company of the St. Louis Grays will be there in uniform. A replica of a light locomotive and car of the 50's will be used in the construction episode. Price's Raid, a Civil War campaign in Missouri, will be reproduced to show how the line was blown up.

To Depict Jay Gould's Dream.

Jay Gould's dream of a railroad empire will be illustrated and the influence of his daughter, Miss Helen Gould, now Mrs. Finley Shepard, will be shown. For the windup, the chorus will sing, and a clever imitation of a powerful modern locomotive will rush on.

"The Court of Transportation," a fantasy, will be the second part of the entertainment, with much dancing. Leading figures will be Uncle Sam, Columbia, St. Louis, Queen Kansas City, Queen Wheat, King Corn, Queen Coal, King Timber, Queen Petrolia and King Cattle, the last six representing six states served by the road, and "Mexico, our friend and neighbor." As a climax, scores of employes will march on the stage. At one point 22 children of Negro employes will dance.

Dr. MacIvor's Anniversary.

The Rev. Dr. John W. MacIvor will preach his tenth anniversary sermon as pastor at the Second Presbyterian Church, Taylor avenue and Westminster place, at 8 o'clock tonight. In June, 1916, Dr. MacIvor succeeded the late Rev. Dr. S. J. Niccolls, who died in 1915 after a pastorate of more than 50 years. Dr. MacIvor is president of Lindenwood College Board of Trustees, succeeding Dr. Niccolls in this office. The service Sunday night will include patriotic features in observance of the Fourth of July.

STRAWBERRIES BY AIRPLANE

German Fruit Shipped 300 Miles to Denmark in Few Hours.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 3.—Strawberries raised on the island of Werder, near Berlin, are sold on the streets of Copenhagen, 300 miles away, four hours after they are picked. The expansion of commercial aviation in Europe has made shipping of perishable goods a regular feature. The fastest combination rail and water route to Copenhagen takes 12 hours.

Flying schedules are so arranged that strawberries go from the gardens into the planes in 1000 pound lots. They are sold in the Danish capital as "air strawberries."

Was a Good Judge of Liquor
"Since a young man I had a liking for liquor and was considered a pretty good judge of it at one time, but constant drinking gave me stomach trouble which became chronic. My stomach would have been a valuable addition to a gas factory. Doctors did not seem to relieve me. One day my druggist got me to try MAYR'S, and I am now as good as new." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. George Washington : Gentleman Farmer

THE Father of His Country gained his living from the land. He was the owner of many broad acres and enjoyed the seasonable victories of the harvest fields.

To sit on the veranda of the home in Mount Vernon and look out across the vista of hills, river, and woodland, gives one some knowledge of the reasons why George Washington was a great man.

Alexander Pope wrote: "Happy the man whose wish and care a few paternal acres bound."

It may not be possible to own a farm of even small proportions, but living in the suburbs with an acre or so in gardens and lawn is a satisfying adventure in contentment.

The ownership of such a home will develop the spirit of freedom and love of the beautiful in your children as nothing else you can give them will do.

In addition, the investment value of St. Louis' outlying suburban real estate is great. Improved or unimproved property bought today will prove a sustaining income-producer tomorrow.

There can be no better time to make a serious investigation than today — when leisure gives opportunity to visit some of the excellent offerings listed over in the "Real Estate" columns of today's Post-Dispatch.

For your future's sake—TODAY!

30 SCOUTS ON HORSES TO TRAVEL 200 MILES

Ranger Section at Irondale Will Start July 26; Only Picked Members Admitted.

When 30 picked Boy Scouts mount their horses and leave Camp Irondale, July 26, for a 200-mile trip through the Black and Current river sections of Missouri, the most ambitious and eagerly-awaited trip on the St. Louis scouting program will have begun. The trip will take 10 days and the boys will swing in a great circle through the counties south and southwest of Irondale, following roads which keep the farthest from civilization.

Only picked Rangers who have attended one of the four preceding sections of camp will be allowed to make the trip. The Rangers are a group of first-class scouts, experienced campers, who live apart from the main camp in open-front Adirondack shacks instead of cabins, and practice only advanced scouting, with emphasis on woodcraft and pioneering. To become a Ranger a scout must be first-class and have attended at least one previous section of the main camp. Rangers who attend any one of the first four sections of camp this year are privileged to apply for the 200-mile ride, and from these the 30 boys most fitted will be chosen.

To Average 20 Miles Daily.

The ride will be made in easy stages, averaging 20 miles a day, with time for swimming in the rivers and mountain streams encountered, and for the practical use of the boys' woodcraft and nature knowledge. The baggage of the cavalcade will be carried on ahead in a light truck, which will meet the scouts every evening at designated camping places, and also will be used as an emergency vehicle to carry anyone who may be temporarily rendered unable to ride. Provisions for the day will be carried by each boy. The boys will sleep in the open.

The 10-day trip is the climax of Ranger activities. The regular Ranger camp is divided into three divisions: Nature, Pioneering and Waterfront. The first is designed for scouts desiring to qualify themselves for such merit badges as Astronomy, Bird Study, Botany, Conservation, Forestry, etc. To those preferring to learn tower, bridge and cabin construction, to become expert woodsmen, the Pioneer division will appeal. To the scout who is already a Junior Red Cross Life Saver an advanced program of water safety, speed swimming, diving and projects such as boat-building and angling is offered.

Executive a Seasoned Camper.

The camp this year will be under the direction of Field Executive Jack Wright of the North District, who is a seasoned camper and intimately acquainted with the backwoods camping done by the Rangers. "Red" Leavitt, field executive of the Suburban District, and an experienced horseman, will have charge of the riding program.

MERLE D. SHIPPEY.

South Side field executive of the Boy Scouts, who will supervise the "Lions' Den Reservation" camp, near Steckman, Mo.

The "in-camp" program will be handled by Scoutmaster R. M. Jones of Troop 147, and Bud Carter, last year quartermaster of the main camp. One scout from each of the six sections has been chosen as section leader. They are: Arrow A, Robert Miller, Troop 5; Bar B, Thomas Shepherd, Troop 63; Circle C, Norvall Brasch, Troop 54; Diamond D, Carl Dobbins, Troop 18; Heart E, Sam Waymer, Troop 63; Flying F, Oliver Withington, Troop 60.

BELLEVILLE MAN AWARDED A CARNEGIE HERO MEDAL

Henry Niedenfuehr Saved Mrs. Loraine L. Riget From Drowning in Okaw.

Henry Niedenfuehr, former grocer, 318A West Main street, Belleville, received a Carnegie hero medal and $1000 Friday as a reward for saving Mrs. Loraine L. Riget, 420 South Third street, Belleville, from drowning in the Okaw River at New Athens, July 4, 1923.

Mrs. Riget was drawn into a whirlpool while swimming. As she went down the third time Niedenfuehr reached her side and was pulled beneath the water. He was compelled to swim under water while grasping the drowning woman until his feet touched the ground. Then he waded to the shore.

Y. W. C. A. ENTERTAINS GIRL SCOUTS IN CAMP

30 of Members Spend Two Days at Friloha and Hold Formal Flag Raising.

Upon the invitation of the St. Louis Y. W. C. A., 30 Girl Scouts from St. Louis and county troops spent last week end at Camp Friloha, the "Y" camp on Geyer road south of Kirkwood, arriving Friday evening and returning Sunday afternoon. The girls were divided into patrols, and each patrol put on a stunt around a camp fire Friday night. A formal flag-raising was held Saturday morning, after which the girls were grouped according to rank.

The Tenderfoot scouts worked on their second class tests. The second class scouts, under the direction of Miss Charlotte Lowther, passed the fire-making test—requiring the fire to be built without artificial tinder and with not more than two matches, and also were taught to make a hospital bed properly. The girls working on their first-class requirements went on a map-making expedition, each girl completing a map of the trip. In the afternoon all the girls participated in a Treasure Hunt.

Miss Ann Perkins took the scouts on a Nature walk Sunday morning, showing them the different trees, plants, birds and insects commonly found around this section of the country.

Arrowhead Troop 7 met on the lawn of their captain, Miss Eckleman, last Tuesday evening. A campfire was built, and songs sung and games played around it.

Troop 39 has voted to discontinue its meetings for the summer. Their captain, Miss Viola Noble, was married this week, but has promised to stay with the troop.

Troop 56 is starting to learn the Morse code in a body. The members have planned a hike to Kendrick Seminary for today, and intend to pass tests in signaling and fire-building while there. The troop has just registered, and is now ready to buy the girls' uniforms.

Troop 2, Webster Groves, held a marshmallow roast on the lawn of the Hagerty M. E. Church last Monday evening. Three girls, Betty Dunn, Louise Hobart and Eleanor Phipps, joined the troop. This troop nw ohas a membership of 45, being one of the largest in the district. Twelve have signed up to go to the camp at Jefferson Barracks, Aug. 6. The girls voted to continue meetings during the summer, but are not to make special efforts to pass tests until fall.

NEW FORM OF INDIVIDUAL BOY SCOUT RECORD SHEET

System Shows Immediately the Standing and Steadiness of Progress.

A new form of individual record sheet, whereby it is possible to tell immediately not only how far a scout has advanced, but also his rate and steadiness of progress, has been devised by Scoutmaster N. S. Smith of Troop 3, Webster Groves, and was adopted by the troop last Thursday night.

The sheet, which is of a size to fit the standard troop record book, is very simple and clear. It is divided vertically into columns, one for each month from now until March when the troop re-registers. Horizontally it is in three main divisions, for the thre classes of Tenderfoot, Second and First Class Scouts, each containing the same number of lines as there are tests to that class. The Tenderfoot division is at the bottom, the other two rising in order.

When a scout passes his first test, the name of it is written on the bottom line, in its proper month column, and the square blocked in. The second test is placed one line higher, in its month. In this way it is possible to see immediately how many tests were passed in a given month, whether a slump in the rate of test-passing has occurred, and what tests were chosen to be passed first. These features confer an obvious advantage to this chart over the old style, on which tests were merely checked off, with the date passed added.

POPE SENDS FELICITATION TO ARCHBISHOP GLENNON

Pleased With Demonstration at Consecration of Cathedral and Grants Apostolic Blessing.

The following cablegram of felicitation was received yesterday by Archbishop Glennon from the Pope:

"The Holy Father is profoundly pleased with the magnificence and solemn demonstration of faith and love for Christ, our Redeemer, on the occasion of the consecration of the Cathedral and the centennial of the illustrious diocese of St. Louis, rejoices with Your Grace and with his most beloved children, and he feels sure that this holy enthusiasm and its accompanying efficacious resolution will fructify ever more abundantly for the glory of God and the salvation of souls, and he grants with a full heart the apostolic blessing to Your Grace, to all the clergy and to the faithful."

The message was signed by Cardinal Gasparri, Secretary of State to the Pope.

Camp Irondale Notes.

Camp Irondale reports every cabin filled for the Second Section, which is now half over.

The First Section overnight hike took place a week ago Thursday and Friday, the last days of the section. While on the way the hikers were ambushed by a band of "Indians," who are said to be permanently camped along the trail followed by overnight hikers.

During the campaigning for the election of the Camp Goat, one of the two favored candidates, Knapp of the Eagles, was kidnaped by his opponent's sympathizers, and held captive until after the election. The deed did not accomplish its end, however, for his supporters swung to the Junior Officers' "Dark Horse," giving him the election, and defeating the other favorite, Cook, of the Owls.

Although a number of tests were passed and projects completed by the campers of the First Section, only one Scout, Irvin Keefer, completed the requirements for Honor Camper. He is thus the only Scout in St. Louis at present who has the right to wear the Camp Letters. At the rate projects are being accomplished, however, it is expected that several more will attain the insignia.

The Watercraft projects lead in popularity this section, but Nature, Handicraft, and Woodcraft all have a large number of entrants.

In all, 79 tests and 43 merit badges were passed during the first section, and 206 points secured for completion of projects.

The First Section Rangers qualified in 18 different nature projects, five waterfront, and four pioneer projects, the latter including the building of a 20-foot tower on Hughes Mountain, three miles from camp, a foot-bridge and several minor structures.

It is planned to have the Rangers act as shock troops in the Fourth of July sham battle, which will be participated in by all scouts in camp tomorrow. They will also give a rodeo this afternoon as part of the Fourth of July celebration.

Four scouts of the First Section completed the nature test trail consisting of 20 different species of trees and other plants, all of which had to be properly identified. Seven boys also passed the nature study test. In the Second Section, 15 boys have passed the nature test, and others are working on it. Several also have earned merit badges in nature subjects. The collection of lizards, turtles and snakes in the museum has been growing rapidly.

Suburban District.

The three patrols of Troop 3, Webster Groves, each gave a playlet to mark the last meeting of the troop until August. The Wolf patrol gave an elaborate "Dream of the Peace Pipe," written by Patrol Leader Bernard Gerdleman. Assistant Patrol Leader William Knox received the greatest applause for his hunter's costume made from sacks. Clarence Duencke's Eagle patrol enacted a tragedy entitled "The Lighthouse Keeper's Wife of Reckem Reef," and Henry Gurley's Panthers dramatised the troubles of a flivver's owner.

The Pine Tree Patrol is working on the shack given them last week, and have put a new roof on it. A local brick contractor has offered to build a fireplace in the shack.

Troop 3, Kirkwood, and Troop 15, Webster Groves, held a joint meeting a week ago Friday at the headquarters of the latter troop. The evening was spent playing games. Chief of Police McDonald of Webster Groves spoke on "Mother Love." Ice cream was served.

North District.

Troop 92, of the Samuel Cupples School, held a drill meeting a week ago last Wednesday night, drilling first by troop, and then by patrols. A game of indoor baseball was also played. Elmer Schwarz, Edmund Gerheasuer, and Eugene Scowden, prospective members, were visitors at this meeting. The following Saturday the scouts took their weekly swim in the indoor pool at the Armory, paying special attention to instruction in swimming to the Tenderfoot scouts.

The next day Patrol Leader K. J. Hufft took John Angello, Carl Hufft, and Durwood Kettels of his Wolf patrol, and Guy Thompson of the Raccoons, on a 14-mile hike to Cliff Cave. The boys paired off, Patrol Leader Hufft going alone, about a half-mile apart. Lunch was eaten on a ledge, christened by them Wolf Camp, after their patrol. Scout Angello here passed his second-class fire-building and cooking tests. The scouts spent about an hour exploring Cliff Cave, and started their return trip by a different route. A half-mile trail was laid, and Scout Angelo passed the test of tracking a half-mile in 25 minutes. The scouts are each planning to make a map of the trip for their map-making test.

South District.

Acting upon the suggestion of the Scoutmaster, two weeks ago, that the boys collect and sell old papers for the troop treasury, the scouts of Troop 16 gathered a large stack last week. At their meeting Tuesday, after the customary drill, the troop was entertained by a pantomime from the Bible story, "The Good Samaritan," given by four scouts. A demonstration of first aid was given, and the bugler, John Cyzek, introduced a new game called "Gary Says." One of the scouts started a weird story, which continued after the troop's time in the hall was up and had to be completed outside on the steps. Some of the boys went on a hike the next day.

Sixteen scouts and six "dads," including the Troop Committee of Troop 245, went on an overnight hike last Saturday and Sunday to Schultz's Mill on the Big River. The program included test passing, games, stalking, swimming, Sunday school and stunts around the evening council fire.

West District.

Twenty-seven scouts of Troop 59 went on their first overnight hike under the new scoutmaster to Kenwood Springs last week-end. The camp consisted of 13 pup tents, a headquarters tent and the camp kitchen. Roy Blank, the troop's Indian dancer in the Indian Pageant at the Scout Circus last February, gave an Indian dance around a council fire Saturday night, and the other scouts sang songs. Music was furnished by members of the troop orchestra. A mystery hike, tent inspection, test passing and scout games formed Sunday's program. In the afternoon several of the parents visited the camp.

DENTAL EXAMINATIONS PLANNED FOR STUDENTS

Tuberculosis Society Also to Continue Teachers' Health Institute at Open Air School.

A number of plans for the summer have been completed by Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis, including a dental inspection for school children, the continuation of the Catholic teachers' health institute, and of the Open Air School at 9500 South Broadway.

The students of the Pershing High School will be examined for dental defects. These will be corrected and a check-up will be made during the next year upon their physical growth and mental alacrity. According to statistics made public by the society, more than 1000 dental faults were found in the children inspected, which aided in retarding their growth and their studies. The St. Louis County Dental Society will supervise the work, with the co-operation of the University City Parent-Teacher Association. The Tuberculosis Society also has under consideration a program of examinations for heart ailments among the children, following the discovery of its prevalence among the students at the open air school.

The health institute for Catholic school teachers will be continued this summer, held under the joint auspices of the Tuberculosis Society and the St. Louis University Medical School, the purpose being to acquaint them with the classroom methods of health teaching. More than 600 teachers attended the course last year. The date has been tentatively set for the latter part of August. Later, a similar course will be given teachers of St. Louis County.

The Night and Day Camp and Residential Open Air School at 9500 South Broadway, and the three daytime open air schools, will be in session through the summer with the exception of the latter two weeks in August when the pupils will be given a vacation.

Self-Propelled Barge Coming Here.

The self-propelled barge La Crosse will sail from Winona, Minn., tomorrow and is expected to arrive in St. Louis about July 14. Freight will be accepted for points south to St. Louis for direct delivery from the barge and for points south of St. Louis by delivery to the Mississippi-Warrior Service.

USER BRIDGE BASIS URGED BY C. E. SMITH

Believes It Will Reduce Terminal Railroad Charge for Handling Freight.

Advantages of the "user" basis of permitting railroads to use the Municipal Bridge over the "terms of exact equality" proposed by the railroads were cited to the Civitan Club Friday by C. E. Smith, consulting engineer for the city.

Smith is advocating the user charge, which is a per car charge based upon actual cost of maintaining the bridge, as likely to reduce the present charge of the Terminal Raiload for handling freight in and out of St. Louis over the river.

The railroad's ordinance permits the Terminal to name the charge for use of the bridge and it is presumed that the charge will be identical which the Terminal now charges over Eads and Merchants' bridges. If other railroads are not satisfied with the Terminal terms, they must appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission or Secretary of War.

Suggests City Name Charge.

Smith suggested that the shoe be placed on the other foot. He sugests that the city name the charge—the user basis—and if the Terminal is not satisfied let it appear as the objector before the Commission or the Secretary.

Smith also declared that the right of the city to make any disposition it chose of Eads Bridge tunnel when it came to providing a subway under the downtown district should be determined now, then the city has something to trade.

If it should wait, he pointed out, until the time for subways came, the city would be emptyhanded and likely would be compelled to buy not only the tunnel, but Eads Bridge.

Would Reinsert Clause.

Smith sugested also that the clause creating a terminals committee with authority to compel the railroads to make improvements in facilities as needed, which was deleted from the ordinance by Henry Miller, president of the Terminal, be reinserted.

As the ordinance now stands it relies upon the good faith of the railroads to provide the $50,000,000 program of improvements declared by the Committee of Engineers which surveyed the needs of the district to be essential to speeded and cheapened movement of freight in and out of St. Louis. Smith insists that a permanent committee be created to constantly survey needs and to compel the railroads to meet them.

SHEPHERD DOG CLUB FORMED

The Shepherd Dog Club of St. Louis, which met at the Cabanne Branch Library June 29, elected the following officers: Dr. J. H. Crenshaw, president; Archie C. Loud, vice president; M. F. English, secretary, and R. L. Goldsmith, treasurer. Board of governors, to serve two years: Casper Deloree, J. E. Holman and Frank Skinner. To serve one year: C. B. Kenamore, August E. Martin and J. J. Remaklus.

A committee was appointed to arrange for a field trial, also a committee to arrange for a match show in July or August. Roland Wilson of Peoria, a judge of fine shepherds, has consented to judge. The club applied for a match show license to the American Kennel Club.

SENATE CANDIDATES TO ADDRESS WOMEN

Six Seeking Nomination Are Expected to Answer Voters' League Questions.

The six candidates for the nomination for the United States Senate from Missouri have accepted invitations to address a special meeting of the St. Louis League of Women Voters at a luncheon meeting at Hotel Statler Monday, July 12. The meeting will be open to the public, and reservations for seats and luncheon may be made at the league offices, 3622 Olive street, or by telephone, Lindell 3454.

The candidates who will address the meeting are Senator George G. Williams, Congressman Harry B. Hawes and W. Blodgett Priest of St. Louis; Judge Ewing Cockrell of Warrensburg; State Senator David M. Proctor of Kansas City and Willis H. Meredith of Poplar Bluff.

Last week the league sent a list of 13 questions touching local and international questions, which the candidates are expected to answer for the enlightenment of voters on just what the candidates stand for and propose to do if elected.

This is the first of a series of candidates' meetings which the league proposes to give for stimulating the interest of women in the vital issues before the American people.

The luncheon will begin at 12:15 p. m. sharp and speeches by the candidates will immediately follow. Both women and men may attend.

BROTHERS FIGHT; BOTH DEAD

Duel With Knives Was to Settle Which Should Have Job.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 3.—The second of two brothers who engaged in a duel last Tuesday over a job, died of knife wounds in a hospital here today. He was Ernest Magnuson, 16 years old, of Gloucester. His elder brother, Oscar, who inflicted the wounds, committed suicide after the struggle.

The brothers had been out of work for sometime. They attacked each other in their lodging house room, and when the police arrived Oscar was dead and Ernest had been slashed terribly. The only explanation the authorities could find was that one job had been offered and the brothers fought for it.

AN EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION

Very Grateful to the Great Herb Extract Remedy Known as Herb Juice Because of the Wonderful Things It Has Done for Her.

"I just want to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to you for the most wonderful change your Herb Juice has made in my health. I have had the good fortune of finding relief through your remedy and I feel that I should at least tell you about it and thank you," said Mrs. L. Phillips, 817 Wilmington avenue, St. Louis, Mo., in a recent conversation with the special demonstrator at Walgreen's drug store.

MRS. L. PHILLIPS

Continuing her statement, Mrs. Phillips added: "Anyone who has suffered from constipation, nervousness, sleepless nights and general run-down condition can most assuredly appreciate what I have gone through. It is not the most pleasant thing in the world to have to contend with constipation, to say nothing of the other ailments, which I believe were caused from constipation. I was just run down generally and so nervous at times that I felt I would never be able to stand it. And my nights were spent in just tossing and turning because I was unable to sleep. But it certainly gives me a lot of pleasure to be able to say that after taking Herb Juice I am entirely rid of constipation, do not suffer from nervousness, sleep fine and have just been built up generally. I now have a remarkable appetite and plenty of energy, which is something I did not have before taking Herb Juice. I am glad of the opportunity to make this public statement, telling the people of the things your Herb Juice has done for me, and I trust that I may be instrumental in getting them to give it a trial because I know they will get the same beneficial results as I have, and in the end be as staunch a booster for it. I am glad to recommend it at all times."

This great laxative medicine is an Herb Extract preparation, known as Herb Juice and is outselling any medicine where it has been introduced. Many are calling daily to see the special demonstrator at Walgreen Drug Company, 514 Washington avenue, giving statements for publication, praising this great remedy that their friends may be induced to try it.

Women Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Countless girls and women now know how foolish and needless it is to "purge" and "physic" themselves to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, sallow skin, colds, or sour, gassy stomach.
They have found that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those heretofore chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement, but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate girl or woman. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

WHAT gives the baseball its ability to resist the terrific impacts of the bat? It is the cover. Remove it and the ball will quickly go to pieces. The same principle applies to plaster wall board.

You may have thought that any kind of paper would do for the surfacing of plaster wall board—that its strength and rigidity came solely from the quality of the plaster core. This is not true.

Beaver laboratory experts long ago made an important discovery. It showed that the quality of the facing or binder was far more vital to the strength and rigidity of the board than even they had thought—that by giving it a fibrous quality for toughness and combining it with a fine quality of rock plaster core, a startling increase in strength was gained.

This simple discovery has brought vital improvements. They are offered you today only in Beaver Bestwall, and at no greater cost.

Costs no more—see the Beaver dealer

For quick, permanent remodeling and repairs, as well as for new walls and ceilings, you can have Beaver Bestwall at no higher cost.

That is because the special fibre facing is made in Beaver mills by specialists with a complete organization and finest equipment.

Why be satisfied with less? Why let any buying habit influence you?

Here is great strength. Here is safety in handling—less breakage. Here are important advantages and improvements for which you pay no more. Why not have them?

You will know genuine Beaver Bestwall anywhere by the cream-colored surface and the Beaver trade-mark. Demand these marks of identification on every sheet.

There is a representative building supply or lumber dealer selling genuine Beaver Bestwall in every locality.

Perfect surface for decoration

The improved fibre facing of Beaver Bestwall, in addition to being tough, is unusually hard and smooth. Also, it is specially sized and calendered. Even a severe rubbing fails to make it "woolly."

This fibre surface offers a perfect base for most charming decorative effects. You can paint Bestwall. You can calcimine it. You can even apply wall paper and remove it without injuring the surface: Think what this means in redecoration.

Furthermore, this fine fibre surface saves you money in decorating cost. It does not drink up paint and calcimine like ordinary paper. Make the "water glass" and the "paint" tests, and prove it.

These tests prove it!

Beaver Bestwall is made with a plaster core of finest gypsum rock plaster. Then it is finished with a new, improved facing or binder of astounding toughness.

This facing is a fibre product, made by Beaver experts in the Beaver mills where wood fibre products have been produced for over 20 years. It adds several very desirable advantages to Beaver Bestwall.

A few simple but convincing home tests are listed and described. We invite you to make these tests yourself—to critically compare Beaver Bestwall and its tough fibre facing. Choose where you will spend your plaster wall board money by what you find out.

A Simple Comparison

Its tough cover enables the golf ball or baseball to withstand terrific impacts of club and bat. The same thing applies to plaster wall board. The extra tough fibre facing—permanently bonded to the rock plaster center—gives Beaver Bestwall its remarkable strength.

The "Water Glass" and "Paint" Test

Place a sample of Beaver Bestwall over a glass of water. Invert the glass so sample is underneath the water. Also apply paint to a sample. Note how little is absorbed in each case. Very economical.

The "Fire" Test

Every panel of Beaver Bestwall—the superior plaster wall board—is approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and manufactured under their laboratory supervision.

The "Surface" Test

Swiftly rub your finger tips over the fibre facing of Beaver Bestwall. Note that it does not scuff up and become woolly—a feature of the fibre facing which is sized and calendered.

The "Strength" Test

Lay a piece of Beaver Bestwall across two piles of bricks or between two chairs. Pile heavy weights on the center. Note the surprising weight it will hold without breaking.

Easy to Apply

Saws and nails like lumber. Quickly applied to studding over old walls or ceilings. Will not warp, buckle, crack, crumble or fall. Is fireproof, moisture-proof. Produces smooth, clean, permanent walls and ceilings.

Many Uses

Use it for durable, fireproof walls and ceilings in new dwellings and buildings of every kind.

For quick, permanent, economical repairs for remodeling at low cost—reclaiming wasted attic space; lining garage or summer cottages; adding needed rooms, or walls in the cellar; making partitions in stores, factories—and for 101 other uses where a smooth, clean, permanent wall that will not warp, crack, crumble or fall is required.

Country Clubs Provide Dances And Fireworks for Holidays

ST. LOUISANS are answering the call of the wide open spaces during the three-day holiday marking the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the independence of the United States. The country places near by abound in house parties, and almost every resort in the vicinity is crowded to its roof with persons taking advantage of the swimming, tennis and other sports afforded. The country clubs are proving a haven for those remaining at home, and each has made elaborate plans for entertaining its members and their guests. At many of them the festivities began last night with dinner dances, will continue informally today and will end tomorrow night with golf tournaments and pyrotechnical displays.

Perhaps the longest program is being given at the St. Louis Country Club. Last night its only al fresco dinner during the year was served at small tables on the terrace, while Japanese lanterns hung in the trees and about the verandas gave an eerie light. Flags and other appropriate Fourth of July decorations prevailed and after dark fireworks shot high in the air over the polo field. An augmented orchestra played music for dancing on the veranda, and Charleston dancers imported from one of the theaters diversified the entertainment. This evening a buffet supper will be served from 5 to 7 o'clock and tomorrow afternoon there will be a handicap polo match followed by music on the terrace and a table d'hote dinner until 9 o'clock.

Bellerive Country Club had its chief dinner dance last night with fireworks shot over the lake from No. 18 green. Golf tournaments for the men members and informal parties fill the remainder of the time. The dancing will be done in the pavilion out of doors. One of the largest parties last night was given by Mr. and Mrs. William G. Yantis, and Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Taussig entertained a party of friends for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Robbins of Kansas City, who are their guests over the Fourth.

More than 200 reservations have been made for the dinner dance at the Glen Echo Country Club dinner dance tomorrow night. A golf tournament will precede the party and fireworks will follow. Because of insurance regulations no fireworks will be permitted at Sunset Hill Country Club, although there was a dinner dance last night and a similar one has been arranged for tomorrow night. The swimming pool at this club is a popular drawing card, and there are many all-day parties.

At Algonquin and Normandy clubs dinners and golf matches are the diversions and the same program applies to Midland, with an approaching and putting contest for women golfers tomorrow afternoon.

The new Osage Country Club, Big Bend boulevard overlooking the Meramec River, will have its first gathering of members and their guests in the opening of its outdoor swimming pool, near the new club building, which is under construction. Refreshments will be served from the grill room in the basement of the new building by a staff of Filipino servants. The affair, which is the first of its kind at the new club, will be under the direction of Nelson Cunliff, president; Ralph F. Bixby, vice president and treasurer, and J. C. Smith, vice president and secretary.

Scatter on Vacation

Miss Claudia Matthews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Levering Matthews of 4660 Pershing avenue, departed Friday for Fish Creek, Wis., to be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Vilray P. Blair of Kingsbury place at their summer home. Another daughter, Miss Jane Matthews, has accompanied her father to California, and Mrs. Matthews has just returned from Montreal. She accompanied their son, Rives, who sailed from that port a week ago for Europe. He will spend several months visiting friends and relatives in the British Isles, and in the early fall his mother plans to join him for a few months.

On their trip East Mrs. Matthews and Mr. Matthews Jr. met Mrs. Stanley Stoner and her daughter, Miss Marion Stoner, who also sailed for Montreal for a summer's trip abroad.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 3.—The Free State of Saxony has acquired the William Heyer music collection, one of the most valuable in the world, for 800,000 marks (approximately $200,000), of which about $50,000 was contributed by a Leipsic citizen whose name is withheld. The collection, which was started by Heyer in Cologne in 1906, contains 2600 musical instruments, 20,000 manuscripts and autographs of musical celebrities, 3500 portraits of musicians and a music library with many rare prints. The collection is to be housed in the Grassi Museum at Leipsic.

German Contribution to Jazz.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 3.—Classics done into jazz and rendered by an orchestra of 300 mouth organs exclusively, is the latest German contribution to jazz. The programs of this unique group, inaugurated at Hamburg, found a good response when played at a fashionable charity festival.

LINKS USE OF RADIO WITH FREQUENT RAINS

Paul Painleve Thinks Man Eventually Will Control the Elements.

By the Associated Press

PARIS, July 3.—Paul Painleve, former Minister of War, who said recently that it was not illogical to think that the extensive use of radio may have something to do with this year's frequent rains, looks forward to the time when man will control the elements.

"I haven't been making any accusations," he said when asked about his remarks on the cause of the failure of summers to be summer-like in the last few years.

"All that I have done was to examine a hypothesis and declare that it did not seem logically to be absurd. When radio emissions pass into a carefully closed room, the air of which appears perfectly limpid and dry, after a minute drops of water will form on the face of anyone in the room. The Herzian waves have precipitated or 'ionized' the invisible moisture that exists in the room.

"The deduction that the multiradio telephonic waves that now pass through space produce a similar effect in the atmosphere is easily made but it is far from probable. It is one thing to make rain within four walls and another to provoke it in unlimited space. It would need intense emissions of formidable power."

Painleve finds a beginning of man's control of the elements in American experiments in dissipating fog. "Tomorrow wireless rays will perhaps be used for sweeping fogs from ports, channels and straits," he said, and added: "This is the direction in which the science of tomorrow will direct its energies. Humanity has enslaved water courses, dug out soil, pierced through and flown over mountains, but it has done nothing to conquer rain and cold."

"MONA LISA" WILL NOT MOVE

Request That Painting Be Exhibited in Philadelphia Rejected by France.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 3.—A formal application made to the Minister of Public Education, who is also the head of the Fine Arts Department, to allow Leonardo da Vinci's celebrated picture "Mona Lisa" to be sent to Philadelphia, to be shown at the Sesquicentennial exhibition, was refused by the Minister, although several influential Parisians supported it strongly.

The high authorities that control the Louvre Museum, remembering that the smiling face of Mon Lisa once was stolen from its galleries, seem determined to take no risks. It is possible that a slip made in the request sent to the Minister had something to do with the rejection. One of the arguments used was that the picture was to be exhibited as "the famous masterpiece of French art." Leonardo da Vinci certainly died in France, but he had only spent a few years in the country, not enough to make his native land of Italy surrender its claim to him as a master of Italian art.

MARY M'CORMICK DEFENDS BOB

Singer Who Appears in Paris as Juliet Says Style Is Esthetic.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 3.—"I intend to keep my bobbed hair," declares Mary McCormick of Chicago, who is to sing Juliet at the opera this week. "It is up to the world to get used to it," the operatic star added. "The boyish bob is just as esthetic as the old-fashioned styles and more sanitary."

Nevertheless, she probably will wear the long blond braids when she comes upon the stage to greet her Romeo on Thursday night. Miss McCormick admitted that she could not say many kind words for the modern flapper. "I've seen her in Europe," said Miss McCormick, "and have been shocked by her many times. She needs more training and good manners than she has now. I have watched many young girls in the bars behaving most atrociously. The modern girl has too much liberty."

Verdi Finds Champion in Franz Werfel

ustrian Novelist Defends Composer of 'Il Trovatore' Against Wagner, and Italian Opera Against Music-Drama.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

HE gallant spectacle of an Austrian rushing to champion an Italian composer ainst Richard Wagner, and Itala opera against Teutonic musicama," is exhibited in a recent ovel entitled "Verdi," by Franz Verfel author of "Goat Song." eferring once to the opera which e Municipal Theater Association ill present this week, Werfel aises "the red-blooded creator of Trovatore.'"

"What is known as musicama," declares the novelist, "is rationalization of a super-ranal form, which destroys the arm and sets aside the proroga of music while the psychologi meaning of the work is brought the foreground. This music a is the true child of the teenth century, the fruit of its logical and materialistic tency, of its thirst for causality.

was Verdi's mission to rescue traditional opera and secure its future development. We see genius harnessed to the double of renewing the old, worn form and restoring it to hu verisimilitude without enslav it to the music-drama of the rth."

"What need was there," Verdi is sed to reflect in reference to gner's elaborate librettas, "for sentences of many words that ody understood where there music going on? What was use of all that long-winded dision about mythological gods? served no purpose except to be wned by an exasperated orches No! It was all a mistake. ic was meant to express hu emotions, actions, character conflict, but never these abact contemplative ideas."

Meeting of the Titans.

HIS is no less than a theory of demoniacal possession. Werfel pposed that for 20 years, under thousand forms, Verdi had been rsued by the name, the work the being of Richard Wagner. en the Italians had forsaken to worship at the shrine of Colossus of Germany. For 10 rs Verdi had been struggling complete an opera on "King " but the creative impulse ed. At last he was driven to ke a journey to Venice, where gner was residing. His purpose, the Italian finally owned to him f, was to confront face to face enemy who had struck his gen ead—the enemy whom he had er beheld. The rivals, born in same year, were each 70 years

Their first encounter takes place the lobby of the Venice Theater, ere there is a performance of of Wagner's instrumental rks—presumably the "Siegfried yl." The author provides elo descriptions of the pair of ants. He speaks of Verdi's , rather misty blue eyes, their my intensity overshadowed by ly arched brows." In spite his white hair and beard, "no would have thought of calling man old."

"They would have been contra d by the sturdy, farmer-like e, strongly built and delicately ed as a fiddle body. A large, curved, sunburnt nose, and a system of little wrinkles the eyes, which from time to blinked in the darkness as if bright sunshine, gave to this something of the shrewd look farmer contemplating his dis fields in the evening, mingled the boldness of a pirate scan the seas from the deck of his but most of all it was the of a man of outstanding char self-possessed and self-as

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

HE gallant spectacle of an Austrian rushing to champion an Italian composer ainst Richard Wagner, and Ital- n opera against Teutonic music- rama," is exhibited in a recent ovel entitled "Verdi," by Franz Werfel, author of "Goat Song." Referring once to the opera which he Municipal Theater Association will present this week, Werfel raises "the red-blooded creator of Il Trovatore.'"

What is known as music- rama," declares the novelist, "is e rationalization of a super-ra- nal form, which destroys the rm and sets aside the proroga- of music while the psychologi- meaning of the work is brought the foreground. This music- ma is the true child of the teenth century, the fruit of its ogical and materialistic ten- y, of its thirst for causality.

Saved Traditional Opera.

was Verdi's mission to rescue traditional opera and secure its future development. We see genius harnessed to the double k of renewing the old, worn- form and restoring it to hu- n verisimilitude without enslav- it to the music-drama of the rth."

"What need was there," Verdi is used to reflect in reference to agner's elaborate librettas, "for g sentences of many words that body understood where there music going on? What was use of all that long-winded dis- sion about mythological gods? served no purpose except to be owned by an exasperated orches- a. No! It was all a mistake. sic was meant to express hu- n emotions, actions, character d conflict, but never these ab- ct contemplative ideas."

HIS is no less than a theory of demoniacal possession. Werfel posed that for 20 years, under thousand forms, Verdi had been rsued by the name, the work the being of Richard Wagner. n the Italians had forsaken to worship at the shrine of Colossus of Germany. For 10 s Verdi had been struggling complete an opera on "King r," but the creative impulse ed. At last he was driven to e a journey to Venice, where gner was residing. His purpose, the Italian finally owned to him- f, was to confront face to face enemy who had struck his gen- ead—the enemy whom he had er beheld. The rivals, born in same year, were each 70 years

Their first encounter takes place the lobby of the Venice Theater, re there is a performance of of Wagner's instrumental ks—presumably the "Siegfried l." The author provides elo- t descriptions of the pair of s. He speaks of Verdi's s, rather misty blue eyes, their y intensity overshadowed by y arched brows." In spite his white hair and beard, "no would have thought of calling man old."

They would have been contra- d by the sturdy, farmer-like e, strongly built and delicately hed as a fiddle body. A large, -curved, sunburnt nose, and a e system of little wrinkles d the eyes, which from time to blinked in the darkness as if bright sunshine, gave to this mething of the shrewd look a farmer contemplating his dis- fields in the evening, mingled the boldness of a pirate scan- the seas from the deck of his ; but most of all it was the of a man of outstanding char- , self-possessed and self-as-

The gods, to whom eternal th belongs, by no means always the form of youth, but often ared in mature manhood—Ju- r, Neptune, Vulcan. With this man, too, age was but a form of god-like, timeless youth."

Vivid Description of Wagner.

PRESENTLY the concert was over. Liszt emerged, talking with Wagner's children. Then came Wagner himself, with the crowd pressing and pushing behind him. He wore evening dress under a light overcoat, and carried a silk hat in his hand.

"The great vaulted skull, pale and downy white, shone transparently, as if an unearthly light burned within it. His slight body swayed with the force of the restless vitality that was pouring from him.

"He spoke loudly, emphasizing the breadth of his expensive German vowels, expounding, explaining, bantering; and he was the first to greet his own with with sympathetic laughter. No one seeemd to notice how the earthly vessel of this fierce vitality throbbed and quivered as if overcharged. But

"Il Trovatore" Will Be Sung in English At Municipal Opera

Special Cast for Production Opening Tomorrow Night Includes Frances Peralta, Marion Telva, James Wolfe, Judson House and Greek Evans—Fifth Undertaking of Goodman Players at Garden Theater Is "The Taming of the Shrew."

THE first recorded production of Giuseppe Verdi's "Il Trovatore" in an open-air playhouse will be undertaken this week by the Municipal Theater Association, which will present a special cast of singers, an augmented orchestra and a chorus increased from 96 to 112. At the Garden Theater the Goodman Players of Chicago will present Shakspeare's "The Taming of the Shrew."

This will be the third sally of the Forest Park organization into grand opera, and it will continue its adherence to the opera-in-English movement—a policy begun last season with productions of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Martha" in the vernacular. There will be seven performances of "Il Trovatore," beginning tomorrow night.

Marion Selva as Azucena.

THREE singers from the Metropolitan Opera Company will lead the cast. The role of Leonora will be assigned to Frances Peralta, who took the name part in a production of "Aida" with which the Municipal Theater was christened as a musical playhouse in 1917, and who has also appeared as Carmen on that stage. She has also been heard here as a soloist with the Symphony Orchestra.

Particular interest centers in the engagement of Marion Telva for the role of Azucena. Miss Telva is a native St. Louisan, who had her early training in this city. For several seasons she has been one of the active young contraltos at the Metropolitan. This will be her operatic debut in St. Louis, although she has been a soloist at a regular pair of Symphony Orchestra concerts.

The third Metropolitan singer is James Wolfe, baritone, who sang Zuniga in "Carmen" two seasons ago at the Municipal Theater, and took part last summer in several productions at the Garden Theater, his chief role being that of the Father in "Haensel and Gretel." He will have the part of Ferrando. Other principals of the cast are Judson House, well-known oratorio tenor, who will sing Manrico, and Greek Evans, who will serve as Count di Luna, and whose previous appearances here include one at the Odeon in 1920 with the Scotti Opera Company.

Louis Kroll, musical director of the theater, who has conducted numerous performances of Verdi's opera, will lead the big company throughout the week. The entire production is under the supervision of Charles Sinclair.

"Il Trovatore" lends itself easily to transposition into the open air, as many of its scenes are already set out of doors. In four acts, with a libretto by Salvatore Cammarano based on a Spanish melodrama, this opera was first produced on Jan. 19, 1853, at the Apollo Theater in Rome. It belongs to Verdi's so-called middle period, which also includes "La Traviata" and "Rigoletto." The first New York production was in 1855. Caruso, Eames, Homer, Destinn, Ober, Martinelli, Amato and Rothier have at various times sung its roles.

Theatrical Calendar

MUNICIPAL THEATER—Verdi's grand opera, "Il Trovatore," to be sung in English, with a special cast of vocalists.

GARDEN THEATER — The Goodman Players in Shakspeare's "The Taming of the Shrew."

A Sanguinary Melodrama.

THE opera begins with a midnight scene at the palace of Aliaferia, where an old servitor, Ferrando, relates to his companions the tragic story of Garzia, brother of Count di Luna, in whose service they are. In infancy, Garzia was bewitched by an old gypsy, and day by day pined away. The sorceress was burned at the stake, and in revenge her daughter, Azucena, stole the sickly child, whose fate still remains a mystery.

After the departure of Ferrando and his friends, Count di Luna enters and lingers beneath the apartment of the Duchess Leonora, with whom he is in love. Hearing his voice, Leonora descends to the garden, supposing it is Manrico, a troubador, whom she has crowned victor at a recent tournament and with whom she has become enamored. As she greets the Count, Manrico appears on the stage and charges her with faithlessness. The Count challenges him to a duel, and as they prepare to fight, Leonora falls insensible.

The second act occurs in a gypsy camp. Manrico, wounded by Count di Luna in the duel, is tended by Azucena. She continues Ferrando's narrative by declaring that when she saw her mother burning, she determined to throw the Count's brother into the flames in revenge, but by mistake sacrificed her own infant. A messenger informs him that Leonora, supposing him to be slain, has gone to a cloister. He hastens to save her from the convent and bears her away to his stronghold at Castellar, which is besieged by Count di Luna.

Leonora's Sacrifice in Vain.

THE Count's encampment is the setting of Act III. Azucena, arrested as a spy, is dragged in, and cries out Manrico's name, whereupon di Luna orders her burned in sight of the castle. Ferrando recognizes her as the supposed murderess of the Count's brother. Manrico charges forth in a desperate effort to rescue the gypsy, but is taken prisoner and thrown into a dungeon with Azucena.

Leonora offers to marry di Luna if he will spare Manrico's life, and the bargain is struck. She hastens to the prison to inform Manrico of his deliverance, but has previously taken poison rather than fulfill the hateful compact. Manrico refuses to accept his liberty, and di Luna, finding Leonora in a dying condition, orders Manrico to immediate execution. When the Count forces Azucena to witness the fatal scene from a window, she informs the horror-stricken Count that he has murdered his own brother, and falls lifeless.

This work contains some of Verdi's most popular musical numbers, such as "The Anvil Chorus," "The Miserere," "Home to Our Mountains," and "Di Quella Pira."

Will Include Induction Scene.

SHAKSPEARE'S farcical treatment of the war of the sexes in "The Taming of the Shrew" will be presented virtually without cuts, and will include the Induction, which is usually omitted. Whitford Kane, who played Bottom in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and Sir Toby Belch in "Twelfth Night," will appear in this episode as the drunken tinker, Christefero Sly. Miss Eula Guy will play Katherine, and Carl B. Reid will appear as Petruchio. The cast will be as follows:

Christopher Sly. . . . Whitford Kane
Marion Hackett. . Bernard Ostertag
A Lord. . . . . Roman Bohnen
Petruchio. . . . . Carl B. Reid

BEHIND THE SCREENS

MARJORIE RAMBEAU, stage star, is to make her motion picture debut, appearing in the role of herself in Corinne Griffth's current starring vehicle, "Tin Pan Alley." Miss Rambeau is to appear before the camera in the music shop sequence of "Tin Pan Alley," in which picture Miss Griffith plays the part of a New York store piano player who has aspirations for the stage.

The title of Marshall Neilan's picture starring Betty Bronson has been changed from "It's All Blarney" to "The Wearing of the Green."

Screen tests are being made to decide whether to make Hazel Forbes a vamp or a coy ingenue. Miss Forbes, winner of a national beauty contest, has been signed to a long term contract.

Ray Rockett's first production for First National, which is the film version of Cosmo Hamilton's novel, "Paradise," is well on the road to completion. This is being filmed at New York, with Milton Sills in the stellar role and Betty Bronson featured. Noah Berry heads the supporting cast of Charlie Murray, Kate Price, Lloyd Whitlock, Claude King, Ashley Cooper and others.

The latest addition to the cast of Colleen Moore's next starring vehicle, "It Must Be Love," from the Brooke Hanlon story, "Delicatessen," is Ray Hallor, juvenile. Hallor is playing the role of sweetheart to one of Colleen's girl friends, played by Mary O'Brien. Others in the cast are Jean Hersholt, Malcolm McGregor, Arthur Stone, Bodil Rosing, Dorothy Seastrom and Cleve Moore.

Marshall Neilan has completed production on "Diplomacy," and the pictorial reproduction of the Victorienne Sardou drama is now in the process of being cut and edited. This is Neilan's first vehicle under his Paramount contract. It was made, with the exception of a few shots taken in Deauville, France, entirely at the Neilan Studios. Blanche Sweet is the star of the picture and is seen in the role of Dora, which was created on the stage in Paris, 50 years ago.

Walter Hiers has been signed to play one of the chief supporting roles in Douglas MacLean's next feature comedy, on which the cameras will start to grind in a few days.

CHARLES CHAPLIN ENGAGES MELLER AT $12,000 A WEEK

Spanish Chanteuse Will Act in Movies for 10 Weeks at That Stipend—Another Producer Bid $100,000 for Her Services.

By WELLS ROOT,
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 3.

A FEW people were shocked at Raquel Meller because she presumed to give an evening's program of songs, nothing but songs, with a meager vocal equipment. These and the others who denied her magic for various reasons will have a chance to see Meller in another medium. Charles Chaplin has hired the Spanish singer to work for him 10 weeks in motion pictures. He will pay her -12,000 a week.

She is not unaccustomed to the studios. A goodly portion of her time in Europe is spent before the camera. One or two of the pictures have been reported as excellent, and at least one of them as just terrible.

Some of these films were in the hands of local distributers prior to her appearance at the Empire. They were being held, it was said, until her success has been established—or until she had faded away in failure. One can scarcely imagine a more magnificent success than she achieved. Her transcontinental tour was, with the exception of one or two performances, triumphant. The words are her press agent's. A press agent seldom gets such a chance to tell the truth.

Chaplin Raised the Ante.

THE films have not appeared. It is just possible that their owners are again biding their time. After the film made in America and directed by Chaplin, her name may well be one to conjure with in movie millions instead of theatrical thousands. Recall the brilliance of Mr. Chaplin's "A Woman of Paris," played by a relatively obscure cast. In the new picture he will split his glory. He may deserve most of it, but the chances are that the population will flock to see Raquel Meller. Griffith's is a great name, but the Ohio housewife goes to see the girl whom he made most famous, Lillian Gish.

If these things come true, the presumably inferior European films may be unleashed by the multitudes of prints. While the Chaplin picture is held for long runs in the cities, the earlier foreign photographs will be mopping up in Dallas and Glen Falls.

Famous Players offered Meller $100,000 for 10 week's work, and papers were all but signed. At the last moment Mr. Chaplin, raising the ante, won his case. Among Mellers' assets, or the assets of someone close to her, is included a very hard head for business.

Mr. Chaplin is, of course, gambling on margin. In the lists of the great cinema actresses there is not one who achieved major distinction on the stage. There is, perhaps, an indistinguishable twist of talent which does not adapt itself to both mediums. Alice Brady is probably the best movie actress among the legitimate stars. John Barrymore combines both talents most successfully. Yet his film value does not compare, for example, to Douglas Fairbank's. Marilyn Miller, incomparably the greatest of musical comedy girls, was not very good in the movie.

To Appear Again in New York.

SENORITA MELLER has a better chance. She was irresistibly intelligible in pantomime with (and probably without) the English program notes of her Spanish songs. These were just about as scintillating as most subtitles.

Meller will sing again on a New York stage. E. Ray Goetz, who brought her here, will continue to present her in person when she returns from Madrid in the autumn to fulfill her movie contract. He cannot again exact $25 a recital in a theater. Some say that he will put her in a night club. Then the weary entertainment seeker will not mind such a surcharge.

About 10 months ago we attempted to contrive a chart which would point to the thearical discovery or discoveries of the year. Who would be the happy individual, actor or author, who would awake the next morning to find his praises ringing through the city? As a matter of fact, such people never awake to such things. One cannot picture a hero awaking after a great triumph in the theater. He has unquestionably stayed up all night.

But no matter. We were thinking of Maxwell Anderson and Laurence Stallings, who were famous when the curtain dropped on the first night of "What Price Glory." And of Dorothy Stone, who made her overnight hit with her father, Fred Stone, in the family carryall, "Stepping Stones." Duse was said to have made her hit in just such a single evening.

Buy Two Unwritten Plays.

OF all the possibilities that presented themselves at the time not one made good. Week after week of the season rolled by and no giant rose from anywhere. The season closed, and still there was no sky-rocket celebrity.

Going over the results carefully, perhaps the nearest approach was made by Patrick Kearney. He wrote an excellent play, "A Man's Man," which, unfortunately, achieved no great financial recognition. It nearly won the Pulitzer prize.

It won for Mr. Kearney the enviable opportunity of making the dramatization of Theodore Dreiser's novel, "An American Tragedy." Glenn Hunter will act the play next fall. So good was this dramatization that the canny office of A. H. Woods, reading the manuscript in the production of which they will have no hand, approved it so thoroughly that they promptly purchased the next two Kearney plays. At present neither of these is written.

FAMOUS HYMN ON ATWATER KENT HOUR

Broadcasting Through KSD Tonight Will Include Also Victor Herbert's "American Fantasie."

As part of the nation-wide sesquicentennial celebration, the Battle Hymn of the Republic will be sung over the radio by Allen McQuhae through Station KSD and eight other connected stations, in his Atwater Kent concert tonight.

Mr. McQuhae said he selected this hymn not only because he considers it the finest and noblest battle hymn of any nation, but because it is free from sectional spirit, a prime requisite for broadcasting.

The popular tenor believes that nothing can help more to carry out President Roosevelt's expressed wish that all the people of the nation should be familiar with the words of the songs than to broadcast it in this national celebration. The then President characterized it as "a great national treasure."

The song is said to have been written by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe in the practical darkness of the gray dawn, the writer scrawling down the lines as they came to her lying awake int he early morn. "I learned to write to the dark under similar circumstances when a light would have aroused the baby," she explained.

The poem was written in 1861 when Mrs. Howe had come to Washington from Boston with Dr. Howe, then connected with the sanitary commission. A review of troops which Mrs. Howe and friends drove out to witness the day before had been cancelled by the unexpected approach of the opposing army. The congested road slowed traffic and the party sang, among others, "John Brown's Body." It was then suggested that Mrs. Howe should write a song to this stirring tune. She said she had tried without success, but the suggestion resulted in the song evolved through the night.

Mr. McQuhae will open his concert with the "Recessional" (Kipling-DeKoven), then the Battle Hymn of the Republic, "Annie Laurie" and "My Little Gray Home in the West," request numbers. The Atwater Kent Orchestra, directed by Nicholai Berezowsky, will play Victor Herbert's American Fantasie. The progrom will begin at 9:15, Eastern daylight time.

BIG WESTERN CHAIN FOR RAIL PAGEANT

KSD and Six Other Stations to Broadcast Missouri Pacific Jubilee Festivities Here.

Station KSD and a network of Middle Western and Southern stations will be linked for the broadcasting of the Missouri Pacific Lines Diamond Jubilee pageant and fantasy direct from the Washington University stadium here tomorrow night. The production, "Service—A Pageant of Progress," will commemorate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the construction of the first railroad west of the Mississippi, now the Missouri Pacific.

Arrangements have been made with the Broadcasting Company of America, Inc., operators of station WEAF in New York City, to furnish specially engineered and balanced telephone lines to link the speech input equipment installed at the stadium for this event with Stations KSD, St. Louis, and WDAF, Kansas City; WBAP, Fort Worth; WOAI, San Antonio, and KPRC, Houston; WMC, Memphis, and WOAW, Omaha. With the exception of the last named station, the stations will broadcast the production of the pageant from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m., Central Standard time, WOAW joining the network at 9 p. m.

The Broadcasting Company of America and the Missouri Pacific Lines have taken steps to make this demonstration one of the outstanding events in the history of radio broadcasting and the former company has detailed Gerard Chatfield, director of programs for Station WEAF, to St. Louis to lend whatever aid possible from the broadcasting standpoint so that listeners "tuning in" on this event will be able to discern what is transpiring at the stadium.

This Diamond Jubilee pageant and fantasy is to be a picture story of the development of transportation west of the Mississippi in 12 episodes, starting with the discovery of the territory around St. Louis and bringing the action down to the present, depicting the part the Missouri-Pacific lines has played in the development of the country to the west and southwest. By supplementing it with an orchestra of 80 pieces, a Mexican band of 36 pieces and a mixed chorus of 150 voices in front of the stage which will perform intermittently throughout the entire presentation is especially adapted for radio broadcasting.

For the linking of these seven broadcasting stations several thousand miles of telephone lines will be used. These normally are used for long distance telephone communication and although being used for the transmission of the human voice, telegraph and carrier frequency work, will have to be stripped of these facilities and specially balanced and engineered in order to fit them for the transmission of both vocal and musical frequencies. At certain steps along the line repeaters and special amplifiers will be used in order that the incoming volume to the broadcasting station may be the same at each radio transmitter. The necessary precautions will be taken against the interruption of service which might be caused by electrical storms, heavy winds and the like, thus making the entire demonstration one which commands the employment of the most modern facilities for the use of wire telephony as an adjunct to radio broadcasting.

NEW HIGH - POWER STATION

The municipal station at Atlantic City, WPG, is now operating with the first of the new Western Electric 5000-watt broadcast transmitters. This station, however, is not authorized to use full power, although an application is on file with the Department of Commerce. The new set is a remarkably fine piece of apparatus, fully three years ahead of other radio broadcast sets. It is designed to operate on any wave length from 200 to 600 meters, but is adjusted to send on 299.8 meters of 1000 k-cs. The transmitter is set at its standard frequency and does not vary, due to a frequency stabilizer. It is tuned very sharply and is the first station capable of transmitting the notes of a kettledrum successfully. From the new summer studio on the Steel Pier, 16 remote control stations are handled, permitting the picking up of many orchestras and bands.

To Increase Sensitivity of Set.

Increase sensitivity in a set by introducing regeneration. In case the antenna or grid coil has about 50 turns, insert a 35-turn coil (a honeycomb will do) in inductive relation to the grid coil of the same tube circuit. If it doesn't work immediately, reverse the connections.

AMAZONIAN INDIANS CAPTIVATED BY JAZZ

English Explorer, Dr. W. M. McGovern, Wins Hearts With Phonograph.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 3.—Jazz was used to pacify upper Amazon jungle tribesmen, who had never seen a white man, by Dr. William M. McGovern, explorer and anthropologist, who has returned to London after spending more than a year, among South American Indians.

Dr. McGovern estimates that in the great northwest country forming the tributaries to the Amazon, much of which has never been explored, there are from 300,000 to 500,000 Indians.

Soft, soothing music was played on a phonograph without any particular effect upon the natives, but the rythm of jazz caught their ears every time, and gained for the scientist almost anything that he might desire which the chiefs had the power of granting.

First Cousins to the Red Man.

These natives, Dr. McGovern concluded, are first cousins of the North American Indians, with a mixture of Mongolian.

Among some of the tribes, Dr. McGovern found overcrowding even worse than it is in New York, Chicago or London, regardless of the fact that there are thousands of square miles of land almost uninhabited. In the villages, the houses are built of loge and stones, and the natives think nothing of living 200 and 300 in a large room.

On the edges of the unexplored areas he met civilized tribes who were cultured and had elaborate political and religious organizations of their own.

Low Type of Savages.

Others, further in the interior, were so primitive they had no houses, lived in caves and hollow trees, had never learned to swim, and dug up roots for food. They differed from the beasts only in their use of fire and their fondness for tobacco, which grows wild in these regions.

Dr. McGovern, son of Janet Blair Montgomery, originally an American, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. Two years ago he visited Lhasa, the forbidden city of Tibet, disguised as a Buddhist monk, and has headed other expeditions in various parts of the world in the interest of anthropological work.

SPRINKLING OF LAWNS ONLY AFTER 6 P. M. IS ADVISED

Householders are requested to refrain from sprinkling their lawns until after 6 p. m. in view of a possibly serious situation resulting from overtaxing the City Waterworks, in an announcement issued today by Director of Public Utilities Pritchard.

Yesterday numerous complaints were received from residents living at a high elevation in the city who complained the pressure was so low that they could not obtain any water for household use. The complaints came from Hi-Pointe, near the City Sanitarium and from the neighborhood of Grand boulevard and Arsenal street. The low pressure was caused by the overtaxing of the Waterworks when it pumped and filtered 164,700,000 gallons of water.

Verdi Finds Champion In an Austrian Novelist

his wife, beside him, was nervously seeking to calm him, to stem the torrent of his words, to hasten his steps, to rescue him from his crowd of followers."

For a moment the foes stared each other in the eye. Wagner did not know Verdi, whose visit to Venice was incognito. "Wagner," relates the author, 'beheld the face of a stranger over whom he had no power, a face firmly closed upon itself and seeking nothing of others. He saw pride and a solitary reserve in the glowing eyes, an effortless energy which sought to borrow none from him.

"Verdi beheld an eye at first questioning, perplexed and searching. But soon the cloud vanished, and from that eye the inborn light flamed out, seeking love, seeking to attract; a stormy, strong and yet feminine soul, imposing its will, uttering its dumb, self-inspired cry, 'Be Mine' "

Burns Score of "King Lear."

SEVERAL times afterwards the Titans met, without speaking. Once they passed in gondolas on the Grand Canal, and Verdi had for a moment an impulse, put aside with shame, to kill the man who had unwittingly poisoned his life. "But the German had a good face," the Italian reflected. At another time Verdi walked to and fro before Wagner's palace, thinking he would enter with the greeting, "I am Verdi, you are Wagner." But he remembered that Wagner had sneered at his music as "trickling cantilene," and passed on.

One night, in a summer garden, a band was playing a potpourri of airs from "Aida." Wagner was seated at a table with friends, and Verdi, lurking in the shadows, watched him eagerly. It appeared to him that Wagner, with a gesture of the hand, thrust his music aside with contempt. What Wagner really said was: "This is true music!"

Filled with despair, Verdi went to his lodging and burned the score of "King Lear." Then, from a locked cabinet, he took the score of "Tristan und Isolde," which he had refused for years to examine. He almost believed that he should find this music written, not in the familiar notes and lines, but in sacred hieroglyphics befitting a mystery hitherto unrevealed.

WHAT was Verdi's astonishment and triumph to discover that he himself as a composer had no cause to blush before Wagner! There was nothing in the music to dazzle him by its novelty. The forms were such as he himself had used as a matter of course. If not in the vocal, then a hundred times in the orchestral part of the music would slip into the sheer aria. The harmony was based for the greater part on the diminished seventh, which Verdi had been using for years. There was no true polyphony in the middle parts, but figuration of melodic designs and broken chords which did not rise out of the themes proper.

The rhythm was confused and indefinite, so contrary to Verdi's own precision. There were the old forms of accompaniment—arpeggios, harmonized recitative, staccato notes. The melodies presented no feature with which the Maestro was not long since familiar. Even the two dancing triplets followed by a long note, a figure which since Bellini had been constantly used, was not lacking. The development of the motives usually consisted of sequences such as Verdi himself employed whenever that course commended itself to him.

"The Maestro had expected to read his own doom in this red volume," the author continues. "So far as his eyes could convey an impression the music was beautiful, narcotic, wistful and imaginative; but it was based upon its own time, it was the work of a man, and it could not undo his own work."

"Otello" Stems from "Rigoletto."

THE Italian rose cured of spiritual malady. The conviction came home to him that if he had a brother among his fellow artists, it was this man. A warm and unconquerable sympathy for Richard Wagner swelled in his heart. He went immediately to the German's dwelling. He was met at the door with the news that Wagner had died suddenly, only 15 minutes before.

Delivered from his incubus Verdi felt that his musical gift had returned. Soon he was deep in the composition of "Otello," which was produced when he was 74 years old. And in 1893, when he was 80, Verdi completed his last work and his masterpiece, "Falstaff."

As the book ends, Arrigo Boito, Verdi's librettist, is conversing with his publisher, Giulio Ricordi. The latter inquires whether there is any trace of Wagner's influence in "Otello."

"No one with ears in his head could think that," is Boito's reply. " 'Otello' is the inmistakable descendant of 'Rigoletto'."

Official fo American-British Company Says He Didn't Know Names of Stockholders.

By the Associated Press.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., July 3.—Loans of $295,000 from Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury and $250,000 from Mrs. Horace Dodge Dillman constituted the only financial assistance to the American-British improvement corporation of which he had knowledge, E. A. Usina, vice president and director, testified today in bankruptcy proceedings against the organization, the developer of the Floranada Club, a real estate project near here. He said he knew the corporation had sold property amounting to $1,200,000.

Usina said he knew nothing of any purchases of property and residences contemplated on the project by Mrs. Alexander Biddle, former King George of Greece, Mrs. Horace Dodge Dillman, Samuel Vauclain, the Countess of Lauderdale and J. S. Pillsbury.

Efforts of attorneys for the creditors to determine the list of stockholders were met with the statement of Usina that he did not know.

Counsel for the creditor sought to establish responsibility for what they said was the loss of valuable papers and documents of the corporation. They alleged these had been dumped into a nearby canal.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

AUTO INFORMATION

PART SIX. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 4, 1926. PAGES 1—40

REPORT ON MAIN MISSOURI ROADS OUT OF ST. LOUIS

Conditions That Motorists Will Encounter Surveyed —Construction Progressing Rapidly.

A thorough survey of the progress of construction on the four main traveled highways across Missouri out of St. Louis has just been completed by the Automobile Club of Missouri for the Joint Touring Bureau of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the Automobile Club. The four roads, all Federal routes, are highways No. 40, formerly State No. 2; No. 50, formerly State No. 12; No. 60, formerly State No. 14, and No. 61, formerly State No. 9.

A surprising amount of construction work has been completed on these highways the last 30 days. Ideal weather conditions and a desire of the Highway Department to speed State road construction this summer have worked together to increase the good roads mileage.

Condition of Road to Kansas City.

The condition of No. 40 at this time is as follows: Concrete is laid from St. Louis to a point west of High Hill, 73 miles west of St. Louis. From this point gravel is followed to the intersection of Highway No. 45, just west of Jonesburg. The main highway is closed beyond this intersection and a detour has been marked north on Highway No. 45 to Montgomery City and southwest on a county road to Danville on No. 40. The detour is a good gravel road. After again reaching the main line of No. 40, gravel is followed to the Callaway county line. From this point the motorist has nine miles of concrete. Thereafter another gravel stretch is followed to Fulton. From Fulton to Columbia the highway is gravel and macadam in fair to excellent condition. Gravel is followed west of Columbia for five miles. From this point the route into Kansas City is concrete except for a very short stretch of macadam at the north end of the Boonville bridge and six miles of the same surfacing just west of Boonville.

Conditions on No. 50.

Federal Highway No. 50, the St. Louis-Kansas City highway via Jefferson City and Sedalia, has numerous detours and rough stretches. Concrete is followed out of St. Louis via the old Manchester road for 35 miles to the Franklin County line. At this point the road is barricaded, a detour being marked south to Pacific and west to the main road, one mile the other side of Gray's Summit. This detour is of gravel construction and well marked. After reaching the main highway again, another detour is necessary. This runs from Gray's Summit north to

Tour to Wisconsin Almost Ideal for Vacation Motoring

Motorists desiring a few weeks outing or fishing amid charming and varied scenery, and over good roads will find a trip to Wisconsin, "Land of a Thousand Lakes," and 10,000 miles of highways, almost an ideal one. Boating, canoing and fishing can be found in every county. The nights are cool and invigorating, the days pleasantly warm. Well appointed tourist camps, both public and private, are everywhere, cottages may be rented by the day, week or month, while well appointed and luxurious hotels are ready to cater to the motorist desiring additional comfort.

The scenery ranges from prairie and rich, rolling farm lands to hilly grazing country, bleak cliffs domes and spires, to the timbered tracts of the "north woods," while anywhere and everywhere are lakes and rivers. Trout, black, white and rock bass, muskellunge, pike pickerel, with an open season from June 1 to March 1, except on black bass, (on these the season opens on June 20 and July 1, according to locality). Bull head and perch are taken all the year, while the legal length of fish and size of bag are generous enough to satisfy any reasonable angler.

Routes Into Wisconsin.

If the motorist from St. Louis and vicinity wishes to vary his vacation with a bit of sightseeing in cities as well as in the open, he can include both Chicago and Milwaukee on the trip, using the route along Lake Michigan between the two cities, Illinois State Highway No. 42 and Wisconsin State Highway No. 17, through Waukegan, Kenosha and Racine. If the more direct route, avoiding large cities is the direct route into Wisconsin is over Illinois Highway No. 4 to Bloomington, No. 2 to the Wisconsin line, a county road to Beloit, then No. 13 to Madison, capital of Wisconsin. From Madison, good roads lead in every direction.

An alternative route through Illinois, and one with more scenic appeal, goes over Highway No. 4 to Springfield, No. 24 to Peoria and No. 29 to La Salle, where one can take a worth-while short side trip to Starved Rock Park. From La Salle, No. 2 and the route given above to Madison may be followed.

The motorist taking the longer route through Chicago and Milwaukee and wishing to reach Madison on a route free of construction work should leave Milwaukee on Highway No. 19 to Watertown, Highway No. 29 to Columbus and Highway No. 31 to Madison.

Several days can be pleasantly spent there, if a rest is wished. The population is about 51,000, the altitude 845 feet. The city is amid a group of lovely lakes, the largest, Lake Mendota, being the location of the exceptionally well-appointed tourist camp.

The Dells and Devil's Lake.

Few visitors in Madison will fail to take the short trip to "The Dells," where the Wisconsin River for 10 miles has cut for itself a channel 100 feet deep through walls of sandstone rock, carving many strange formations. This is said by many to be one of the most beautiful and interesting scenic spots east of the Rocky Mountains. Entering the Dells are numerous side canyons, more interesting and lovely, if possible, than the main canyon. Best known of these are Gold Water Canyon, over a mile long, and Witches' Gulch, famed for its lovely waterfalls. Hotels, cottages and camps abound, and the walks and horseback trips are numerous. Three different routes, all about the same length, can be used from Madison to The Dells, one through Portage, and the other two through Baraboo.

One of the latter gives the traveler a chance to stop at Devil's Lake, a small but deep body of water, whose bed seems to have been gouged out of the rocks. The rock formations which surround it are so unusual that tourists and geologists visit it from every part of the country. Here hotels and cottages offer stopping places.

Those desiring longer trips from Madison have a variety to choose from. One of the most popular is about 215 miles northward through Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Appleton, Green Bay, Sturgeon Bay and northward to the extremity of Door County, sometimes known as "Cherry Land" because of its 4000 acres of cherry orchards, where more than a million cherry trees burst into bloom every May, and the foundation of more than a billion cherry pies are shipped out every July. About 2000 additional acres are devoted to apples and plums. This great fruit district is belted by two State trunk highways, No. 17 on the Bay Shore side, and No. 78, on the Lake Michigan side, so one can circle this whole cherry land in a few hours on splendid highways.

On this trip most motorists stop for a few days at Oshkosh, situated on the shores of Lake Winnebago, second largest lake within the borders of any state in the Union, 10 miles wide and 30 long.

On Lake Winnebago.

Oshkosh's public camp site is on the shores of the lake. Twelve-pound Northern pike have been repeatedly caught within a hundred yards of the camp site, and the lake abounds in wall-eyed pike, perch, bass and pickerel. In this section the tourist finds himself in really historic ground, where he can tramp and canoe and fish and hunt over the same waterways and trails traversed by French traders, trappers and explorers nearly 300 years ago.

Another popular scenic trip of around 200 miles from Madison is to La Crosse on the Mississippi River. A number of varying routes can be followed, though some of

STOPPING OF ALL PARKING AT CURBS URGED IN CHICAGO

Experience With Eucharistic Congress Jam Said to Indicate Solution of Traffic Problem.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1926.)

CHICAGO, July 3.—Cities with a serious downtown traffic problem can locate the crux of their trouble in the curb parking of automobiles.

That conclusion is reached both by experts who have completed a survey of the traffic problem in Chicago's loop and by the local Police Department, on the basis of its experience in handling the Eucharistic Congress crowds.

Complete elimination of parking in the congested area is seen by each of these agencies to amount to virtual doubling of the street widths.

Chief of Police Morgan Collins declares that by barring parked cars from the central section of the city the Police Department could handle the exceptionally heavy traffic load of the Eucharistic Congress more easily than it handles the normal run on an ordinary day.

On the basis of this advice, the Chicago City Council is about to consider a proposal to prohibit all downtown parking. If that prohibition is imposed, auto owners will call for some scheme to handle their cars when they are driven into the central section of the city.

Underground garages, parking areas set aside in the downtown district and large privately owned central parking garages are some of the relief schemes proposed.

Today's Chrysler "70"—changed in no way except new lower prices which save you $50 to $200—is more than ever the car of world-wide preference.

We knew that the Chrysler "70" would sweep its way to pre-eminence, but we did not anticipate the tide of public favor which makes possible these sensational values.

Long lived; characteristic Chrysler beauty; designed to meet today's traffic needs; roomy for comfort and luxury; easiest to handle; flashing pick-up; 70 miles plus; safe—

Little wonder that none of its more than a hundred thousand owners who have enjoyed uninterrupted satisfaction from their Chrysler "70's" for thousands upon thousands of miles, will ever willingly go back to the less modern type of cars.

We are eager to prove to you why the Chrysler "70"—with its savings of $50 to $200—the identical car whose performance and endurance have won such universal preference—is beyond all doubt the preferred motor car investment at these lower prices in its class.

WHIPPET REVEALED AS NEW OVERLAND MODEL

On First Day European-Type Car Is Shown 14,000 Persons Inspect It in St. Louis.

The light, European-type motor car which has been so widely heralded for months was revealed the past week as a wholly new Willys-Overland creation—the Whippet. So keen was public interest that on the announcement day a total of 14,721 persons inspected the Whippet in the various Willys-Overland showrooms in St. Louis. Of these 6338 looked the new car over in the Willys-Overland branch, Washington and Twenty-third street.

The Whippet was exhibited in sedan, coupe and touring car models. One of the sedans was featured in a comparative exhibit with an overland prairie schooner of the days of '49, which has been displayed by Anheuser-Busch at several world's fairs. The keynote of this exhibit was the development in transportation from the overland vehicle of gold-rush days to the Overland of today. The Whippet, incidentally, was shown standing on a $2000 Oriental rug.

"This new car," said W. A. Elliot, manager of the Willys-Overland branch, "is totally different from anything we have ever before seen in this country. It looks different, it acts different. It is an adaptation of the best Europe has to offer in the way of powerful, economical engines, with a wide speed range, more power for climbing than has characterized even the best of the European productions, and with a flexibility, silence and smoothness of running new to our light car production.

It is a quality product in every detail, from the trim smart extremely low-hung body with its brilliant finish and superb upholstery to the last detail of its mechanical construction.

The Overland Whippet has all the earmarks of being one of those developments which make history in the industry. It resembles nothing on the market in its size class. In its constructional features, in its lines, in its concessions to comfort and appearance, it is a car which ranks with the finest productions put out in the motor car world today.

"It differs from European models in that it has a standard 56-inch tread and is in every way a motor car of comfort.

"The lowness of the body is increasingly attractive as the car is studied, especially after the car has been ridden in over rough roads or through traffic. This traffic driving feature is one of great interest, for the Whippet threads through the traffic maze of the most congested streets with an ease that is surprising. It parks with astonishing ease, requiring very little room.

"It will be a new experience to the average light car owner to be able to drive at 60 miles an hour with a feeling of perfect security and to step away in traffic at the acceleration rate which has been demonstrated as a quality of the Whippet.

"If the claims of the engineers to 28 to 30 miles from a gallon of fuel in average driving are borne out in the hands of owners, this Whippet will reduce the gasoline consumption in the light car field from 40 per cent to 50 per cent."

NOTED BRITISH ENGINEER CHIEF AT OLDS FACTORY

Herbert C. M. Stevens has been appointed chief engineer of Olds Motor Works following the resignation of Robert K. Jack. Stevens has been with Oldsmobile for the past year as consulting engineer, coming from a long engineering career in Europe. His more outstanding achievements overseas include production of the Sunbeam, Talbot and Darracq group of automobiles. He also directed the building of the engines for the dirigible R-33, which made a trans-Atlantic flight from England to America and return in 1920

G. M. C. AND YELLOW-KNIGHT TRUCK BUILDING COMPLETED

The General Motors Truck Co. branch at 2640-44 Washington boulevard, St. Louis, at last has been completed. It fronts 95 feet on Washington, but passersby get from it no idea of the large space for service in rear of the salesroom and stockroom.

The service department is cared for in a room 80 feet by 275 feet without a post. In this room is a full equipped machine shop with all necessary tools to service all sizes of trucks and motor coaches. A large air compressor in the basement supplies air for washing, air hammer, tire inflation and other purposes. A complete stock of parts is carried for "GMC" trucks, Yellow coaches and Yellow-Knight trucks.

The main entrance to the service department is on Washington and there are two large exits in the rear. This service station is centrally located where it is easily accessible to all users of trucks and is laid out in a manner to give prompt service to General Motors Truck Co. customers.

them are not to be recommended in wet weather.

A still longer trip, but equally delightful, is the 300 miles to St. Paul and Minneapolis, through Kilbourn, and Black River Falls, with side trips to The Dells and to Camp Douglass. About 200 miles from Madison is Eau Claire, where the Chippewa River is crossed. The St. Croix is crossed at Hudson where Highway No. 12 continues 19 miles directly into St. Paul.

If the motorist wishes to see more of Wisconsin, instead of crossing the St. Croix River at Hudson, he can continue northward along Highway No. 35 through Osceola to St. Croix Falls. This section of St. Croix is known as "Friendly Valley," and be the tourist looking for beautiful scenery, fine fishing, restful resorts, or a friendly country side, he will find them all in fullest measure. At St. Croix River Highway 35 leaves the river and continues north to Superior and Duluth. By crossing to Taylors Falls on the other side of the St. Croix, the motorist can return south on the other side of the river, recrossing again at Hudson, or turning west at Stillwater to White Bear, and thence 20 mlies to Mineapolis.

Other Trips from Madison.

A number of short "circle trips" radiate from Madison. A popular one is through Sun Prairie, Waterloo and Lake Mills to Jefferson, returning via Ft. Atkinson, Lake Koshkonong and Stoughton. The entire trip is about 100 miles. Another of about 60 miles is to Mount Vernon, then on Highway No. 92, a beautiful valley road, eight miles to Mount Horeb, on the watershed between the Wisconsin River and the Illinois slope. An interesting side trip of six miles can be taken to Blue Mounds. Returning, Highway No. 81 can be taken to Black Earth. This is another lovely winding valley road, with springs and natural camp sites along the way. At Black Earth, Highway No. 41 is taken back to Madison. This trip is among what is known as "The Little Berkshire Hills of Wisconsin," forming the highest plateau in the Southern part of the State, and in clear weather wonderful views are had of the country for miles around.

The most favored route from St. Louis to the Northern Wisconsin lake region is to Madison, then north on Highway No. 10 to Minocqua. Motorists bound for Rhinelander turn off No. 10 on No. 14 some miles south of Minocqua. Those bound for Eagle River can turn off No. 10 just beyond Minocqua on No. 70, or can go northeast from Rhinelander on No. 63. It is around 860 miles to Rhinelander, so the journey can be made nicely in three days, stopping the first night at La Salle, Ill.

AUTO CLUB WILL BE OPEN TO MOTORISTS OVER HOLIDAY

Although most organizations of the city will be closed from July 3 to July 5, the service and touring departments of the Automobile Club of Missouri, 4228 Lindell boulevard, will be open as usual, to accommodate motorists.

More Dependable Than Ever

Dodge Brothers, Inc., achieved third place in world production this Spring because they have been able—WITHOUT SACRIFICING FUNDAMENTALS—steadily to improve the smartness, comfort and smoothness of their product.

Owners and engineers know well that mechanically the car is sturdier than ever—cost of upkeep lower—and performance more dependable.

Refinements and lower prices have been made possible by spectacular increases in sales. Not by violating the basic tenet of Dodge Brothers success: NEVER TO LOWER QUALITY IN A SINGLE DETAIL.

As part of the Automobile Club membership campaign, it was decided that a premium in the form of a made-to-order tire cover be given to any member obtaining one new paid membership.

Gerk remarked that "one can take a tried and true gentleman out of his home environment and place him in an automobile, and lo, he forgets that he is a gentleman, and likewise, forgets all of he laws of refinement and good breeding."

In Gerk's opinion, much headay is being made in traffic reguion through the medium of the aw. He asserted, however, that reat deal more progress could be made were education to be jointly pplied with law.

What's New in Motor Cars

Whippet Car Sets New Style For Light Autos

HERE is a full description of the whippet, the new European type light car just introduced by Willys-Overland, Inc., and now being shown at the Willys-Overland branch, Locust boulevard and Twenty-third street, and by all Overland dealers:

Speedy, Powerful, Roomy.

The sedan will travel 58 miles an hour, as easily and comfortably as the great majority of our present day 6s, yet it has a four-cylinder motor," says the announcement of the Whippet.

"It will accelerate from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 10 seconds, or in just half a second more time than some of our largest and most flexible 6s. It will cover 28 to 30 miles on a gallon of fuel.

"It will stop in a little over twice its own length from an average driving speed, for it has four-wheel brakes, with a drum diameter of 11 inches, which is larger than on many large cars.

"The motor develops 23 per cent more power per cubic inch of piston displacement than any other light four-cylinder motor built in America. This is one of the results of utilizing the European type of high speed motor design. It develops more brake horsepower than any other light four-cylinder car in this country, yet weighs just a little over 2000 pounds ready for the road. The engine turns up to 2800 revolutions a minute and gives 30.5 h.-p. The piston displacement is 134.2 cubic inches, somewhat larger than that of the average European light car, but less than that of any other American built four-cylinder car.

Low Body Is Large Inside.

"The roof of this new type car is only 5 feet 8 inches from the ground, yet the room inside the body is greater than in any other light car now on the market.

"Its first appearance is striking in the extreme. A man of average height can stand alongside it at the curb and rest his arms on the top and look over it. But a six-footer can sit in it with all the room he wants. In this respect it is thoroughly American and bears no relationship to its diminutively dimensioned European cousins."

Inside, the body is 45 inches from floor to roof and there are 36 inches between the top of the seats and the roof. The seats are approximately 12 inches from floor to top of cushions. There are 35 inches of space from the front of the front seat cushion to the clutch and brake pedals. In the rear seating compartment, there are 36⅝ inches, affording more room for occupants of the rear seat than is found in any other light car built.

To give room for stretching out in the front seat the metal dash is curved forward several inches and there is as much leg room in this compartment as there is in the rear.

The front seat is 40½ inches wide and the rear seat is 45½ inches wide, the conventional widths for these two seats.

The doors are wide and hung on four hinges so that it is extremely easy to get in or out.

The body lines are attractive in every way. A conspicuous feature is the construction of the sunvisor, which is formed by continuing the roof forward in a graceful, downswinging curve. This is a tailored effect for even the best of cars and is a hallmark of quality in this Overland Whippet.

The radiator is conspicuously high and narrow and is housed in a deep, nickeled shell. The body lines sweep gracefully back without any break at the cowl. The bullet headlamps have nickeled shells and are strongly supported with a tie-rod at the front.

Tires Are of New Size.

Tires are of a new size, being 27 inches in diameter and with a 4.40-inch cross section, and are of the balloon type. These are the smallest tires ever used as stock equipment, but tire makers have anticipated a demand for this Overland Whippet and dealers are stocking the new size.

Willys-Overland engineers say that this size tire on the Whippet will give exceptionally long tire service, and forecasts of as high as 20,000 miles to the set have been made.

The interior appointments of this car are in very good taste. The instrument board is of metal with a Circassian walnut finish on a gracefully designed panel. The board carries starting and lighting switch, oil gauge, ammeter, speedometer and dash lamp.

There is a frosted glass dome light in the rear compartment. Upholstery is of a fine ribbed velour. The levers for lifting or dropping the windows are nickeled.

The windows are unusually wide and the windshield is of the one-piece type.

As has been prophesied during the last few months, this, the first of the European type light cars to be built in this country, is designed along advanced modern engineering lines to get a wide range of power and performance from a small and therefore economical motor.

Details of the Engine.

The bore is 3⅛ inches and the stroke is 4⅜ inches giving a piston displacement of 134.2 inches. This is somewhat larger than the average for the European type motors, but is smaller than any other American built motor of stock production. The increase over the English and French dimensions was made to give the car performance in high gear not required in Europe.

It is said that this Whippet will climb any hill in high that any of the best light sixes will climb in high.

The pistons are of cast iron but are extremely light in weight, as are the connecting rods. The crankshaft is short, weighs 27 pounds, and is said to be heavier than that in any other four-cylinder car of equivalent dimensions. It is balanced statically and dynamically and is said to eliminate whip and vibration to a degree never before achieved in a four-cylinder motor.

Oiling is by full pressure system. A drilled crankshaft is offered for the first time in light car construction in this motor.

Cooling is by pump circulatory system with over 8000 square inches of cooling area.

Has 4-Wheel Brakes.

An innovation in light car construction is found in the four-wheel brakes which are of the type of design on more than 90 per cent of the finest European cars. Overland engineers say that the type of brakes used on the Whippet grow better and more efficient with use.

Motor, clutch and transmission are in one unit, the clutch being of the single plate type, transmission being the modern three forward speed, selective sliding construction with an extra long change gear lever.

Plenty of Room in the Whippet

New Auburn Sedan Seats Nine Persons

A SEVEN-PASSENGER sedan on a full 146-inch chassis has just been added to the Auburn eight line, and is being displayed at the Mound City Automobile Co. This sedan, which delivers in St. Louis for $2750 fully equipped, will seat nine persons comfortably. Except for a longer chassis, it is the same in design as other Auburn eight models. The upholstery is in tan broadcloth with fine blue lines. Wheels are of steel and painted cream. All seats have Marshall springs. A mirror and walnut cabinet in the rear compartment are included in the equipment.

Stutz 7-Passenger Sedan Coming Soon

THE new Stutz eight seven-passenger sedan, which the Benjamin Motor Co. expects to be able to show about the middle of July, is to have a longer wheelbase of 145 inches. Otherwise it is to be typically Stutz eight, with worm rear drive, safety chassis, 92 horsepower engine, and elaborate equipment.

WILLS-STE. CLAIRE MODELS SHOWN BY NEW DISTRIBUTER

Wills-Ste. Claire models are now being displayed at the Wills-Ste. Claire Co. of Missouri, 2835 Washington boulevard, where sales and service headquarters for this territory have been formally opened. Wills-Ste. Claire models include the "Gray Goose Traveler," a lithe-appearing phaeton; five-passenger sedan, roadster, cabriolet roadster, seven-passenger sedan and town car.

A gray goose, with wings outspread in flight, has been adopted as radiator ornament for the Wills-Ste. Claire, and is standard factory equipment. This radiator ornament was designed from life by a sculptor who studied the birds in their haunts.

SALISBURY JOINS OLDS SIX DISTRIBUTER HERE

John T. Salisbury, who four times has served as chairman of the important committee in charge of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association's annual motor car show, has joined Philip H. Brockman's De Luxe Automobile Co., Olds Six distributer, as director of sales. Salisbury is one of the most widely known executives on St. Louis' Auto Row, having been for 17 years connected with sales of one make of car. He has played a prominent part in the dealers' association as well as in automobile merchandising.

Salisbury has just returned from the Olds factory at Lansing, Mich., where he investigated the processes of manufacture of the Olds Six and attended an elaborate series of sales conferences.

Salisbury said he was particularly impressed by the General Motors Corporation proving grounds at Milford, Mich., where Olds sixes and all other G. M. C.-built motor vehicles are tested under all sorts and conditions of service. "The average buyer of an automobile," he said, "can hardly conceive the magnitude of these grounds, the completeness of the equipment, and the integrity and thoroughness with which the cars are tested.

"They have speedways, gravel roads, dirt roads, brick roads, macadam and grades from 3 to 25 per cent, where Oldsmobiles are tested in a scientific manner to prove the merit of the car before it is offered to the buyer. When a car is undergoing these tests it is operated of course, by a driver. It is also attended by an observer. The observer in all cases is an engineer.

"I saw various makes of cars on the testing grounds which were being driven constantly. I found that these cars were being driven until they wore out, which taxes anywhere from three to six months. These cars are driven constantly, most of them night and day.

"Olds Motor Works gets from the proving ground a true picture of the quality of its cars and comparisons with other cars, which it could not get under two years of usage in buyers' hands. It knows absolutely in 90 days just how many miles each part of a car is good for, also its speed, its hill-climbing ability and so forth. This, of course, is used as a gauge in building Oldsmobiles."

FRANKLIN CAR RUNS 100 MILES IN LOW

Observers Report That Car Did Not Overheat at Any Time During Extraordinary Test.

A Franklin sedan, driven by W. M. Venner, secretary of the Franklin Motor Car Co. of St. ouis, on Thursday ran 100 miles in low gear in seven hours 17 minutes without the engine once stopping. The feat was performed as part of a country-wide demonstration of air-cooled Franklin cars, the occasion being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Franklin factory at Syracuse, N. Y.

The performance was extraordinary, as anyone who ever has driven even a mile or so in low gear with any car will realize. In fact, the Franklin during the run carried a banner, saying, "A test no other car dare attempt."

The Franklin was checked in and out and observed throughout the run by newspapermen, two of whom rode in the car.

The run started at 9:27 a. m. and ended at City Hall at 4:44 p. m.

The highest speed attained in low gear was 19 miles per hour. The average speed ranged from 12.1 miles per hour to 14.6.

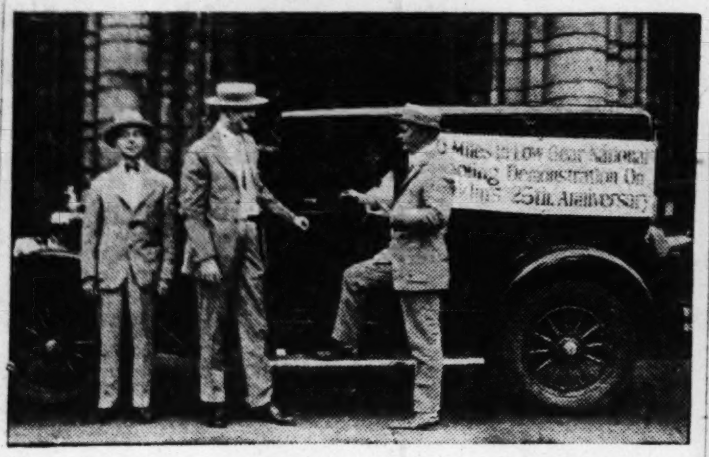
The observers reported that the car ran smoothly and quietly throughout the 100-mile test, that at no time did the engine overheat, and that operation was normal.

At the start six quarts of oil were put in the engine, and no more was added. At the end of the run, the engine was drained and five and one-half quarts of oil remained. So only a pint of oil was consumed.

Measurement of the gasoline showed that 16.8 gallons were consumed, which indicates, more than anything else, the nature of the test undergone so triumphantly by the Franklin for 100 miles.

Most of the time the engine was turning over at a speed that would have meant around 55 miles an hour in high gear.

Undergoes Hard Test in Low Gear



The Franklin car which made a low-gear run of 100 miles on its arrival at City Hall. The driver is W. M. Venner, secretary of the Franklin Motor Car Co. of St. Louis. At the left is District Sales Representative H. N. De Witt. Mayor Miller and Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association are felicitating Venner on the success of the test.

REPORT ON MAIN MISSOURI ROADS OUT OF ST. LOUIS

Labadie, thence west over State highway No. 47 and again south to Federal No. 50. This detour, while mostly gravel, is rather narrow in places and often has high clay sidewalls, so caution should be used in traversing it, especially at night. It would possibly be better to use the State road and State highway No. 30 out of St. Louis to St. Clair and then go north to Union, rather than use the main road with its two detours. But No. 30 is dirt for 20-odd miles and mean after a rain.

From the end of the last detour on Federal 50 to Union, the old rock road is followed. While rough in spots, this is an all-weather road. The first six miles west of Union is under construction in places, travel going over the construction work. This stretch is rather tedious in inclement weather. From this point the road becomes better, thereafter it is a State-constructed gravel road, to Leslie, and gravel and dirt to Gerald. From Gerald to Rosebud, four miles, more construction is encountered. Travel here also goes over the construction work. This stretch is practically impassable in wet weather.

From Rosebud to Mt. Sterling via Drake, No. 50 goes over semi-gravel road. Ten miles of this road is under construction and one of the roughest stretches one would care to encounter, even in pleasant weather.

From Mount Sterling to Jefferson City the highway is of dirt, gravel and macadam. Hardly any construction work is encountered here. From Jefferson City to California one travels over an excellent gravel road. From California to Tipton there is a well-graded gravel and dirt road. From Tipton to Smithton gravel is encountered.

A fine macadam stretch is encountered from Smithton through Sedalia to Lamonte. From the latter town to Warrensburg, another graded dirt stretch is traversed. From Warrensburg to Kansas City one has good macadam and concrete. Generally speaking, Federal No. 50 is treacherous from St. Louis to Kansas City, and should not be traveled, except in pleasant weather.

Route to Springfield.

Federal No. 60 (State No. 14) is the highway from St. Louis to Joplin via Rolla and Springfield. It is advisable to use Highway No. 30 out of St. Louis to St. Clair as the first leg of this trip. Such routing is advisable, due to construction work on Nos. 50 and 60. West of St. Clair, the road is semigravel to Morrellton, a distance of seven miles. There concrete begins and extends for 16 miles to and through Bourbon. From the end of the concrete, three miles south of Bourbon, the road is mostly dirt, with some gravel to eight miles west of Cuba. This road is very good in pleasant weather, but slippery when wet.

From the Phelps - Crawford counties line to Lebanon, the road is dirt and gravel, most of the dirt being encountered on the detour from Lebanon to Phillipsburg. After reaching the Webster County line, concrete is again followed through this county. Then, for a distance of approximately 15 miles into Springfield, gravel is traversed. From Springfield to Joplin Federal No. 60 is partly under construction and it is advisable to use routes No. 16 and 38.

Status of Federal No. 61.

U. S. No. 61 is concreted south of St. Louis for 70 miles to Flat River. Then gravel is traversed to Fredericktown. From this point one again encounters concrete to Jackson, from which point gravel and concrete are traversed to the Arkansas line.

North of St. Louis, No. 61 runs westward with No. 40 to a point just west of Gilmore. Thus there is 35 miles of concrete out of St. Louis. From this point one travels on some gravel to Eolia, whence the highway is closed to Bowling Green, a detour on gravel being necessitated via Louisiana. There is gravel to Frankford on this detour, except for the last four miles, which is of dirt. The highway is under construction to New London. Gravel is traversed from New London to Hannibal, as also to Canton. From this point to four miles south of Wayland one follows a long detour. Gravel is traversed to Keokuk from the former point.

UTILITY DISPLACING ART IN BUILDING

T. P. Barnett Says Standards of Architecture in U. S. Have Fallen.

"In New York and many othe cities I was impressed by the lac of importance architects attach t design in the construction of so called up-to-date office building of the set-back type," said T. P Barnett, of the T. P. Barnett Co architects. "They seem satisfie with a motive of recess boxes a sufficient, without any artistic em bellishment and practically no de sign. The employment of the stan dard styles seems to have almos disappeared. One notable excep tion is the Tribune tower in Chi cago, which is a reproach to th average modern structure. Ou modern architect is perfectly sat isfied in catering only to th utilitarian.

"The apartment house problem e almost entirely covered by th speculator, who has eliminate the architect altogether, so th 'Saint Recklesses' all look as they were dragged out of the sam pot. There seems to be only on common meeting ground, and tha is to cover the building with chea terra cotta in order to make it ap pear that it cost a great deal mor than it did.

"The general standard of archi tural art in the United States ha fallen steadily since the death o the late Stanford White. Vulga money has covered the countr with abortions and aberrations o every character.

"There has been one notable im provement in art standards an that is in the construction of th small residence. Most of the ba and present-day art is the resul of wartime prosperity."

The reported consideration was $350,000. Frank Dubinsky handled the transaction, in connection with M. H. Rodemyer, representing the Krause Realty Co., of which Ernest E. Krause is president. Annual rentals aggregate $51,000.

The apartments range from three to eight rooms and have every modern appliance. The value of the building has been increased by the erection of many high-class apartment and hotel structures in the neighborhood, in addition to the advance with the increased cost of construction.

Building Centrally Located.

The site of the Federal Motor Truck Co. has a frontage on the south side of West Pine boulevard of 130 feet, with a depth of 200 feet, between Vandeventer avenue and Sarah street.

The building is to be erected by the George T. Burdeau Realty Co., owner of the ground, and occupied under a lease by the Federal company.

G. E. Bieil, manager of the St. Louis branch of the Federal company, said that the chief factor in the selection of this site was its accessibility from all parts of the city. The new building will provide larger sales and service quarters made necessary by increased business, according to Bieil.

Burdeau is now completing a building on the south side of Washington avenue, just west of the Coliseum, at Jefferson avenue, to be occupied by the General Motors Co., to be occupied under a long lease negotiated by Christy.

A large tract on West Pine boulevard, just east of the Federal company's new location, has been purchased by the International Harvester Co. for a building on which construction soon will be begun.

Activity in Neighborhood.

As was told recently in the Post-Dispatch the southeast corner of Vandeventer avenue and West Pine boulevard, has been purchased by the Leisner & Dunkner Realty Co., through the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, and the southeast corner of Vandeventer and West Pine boulevard, by M. J. Slorium.

Negotiations are progressing for other sites on West Pine boulevard for large apartment or hotel structures, as well as for business structures. The two blocks between Grand boulevard and Vandeventer avenue are especially attractive for apartment or hotel structures, being within walking distance of Grand boulevard. The street is wide and the lots have a range of more than 200 feet in depth.

Other Sites Offered Railroad.

Since plans were disclosed for a new building at Thirteenth and Pine streets for the Missouri Pacific, several other sites, as well as buildings, have been submitted as available for quarters for the railway company. Strenuous efforts are being put forth to interest the company in the old Southern Hotel block. Acquisition of this building is being urged on the ground that its location and construction make it highly available for the general offices of the road. The building is of fireproof construction and can be had at a relatively low valuation, it is understood.

As was told in the Post-Dispatch, the Missouri Pacific has obtained an option on the southeast corner of Thirteenth and Pine streets, with plans for a 15-story office building, to occupy the entire Thirteenth street side of this block, with additional ground, in connection with the 37-story hotel projected for the Twelfth boulevard site.

Options have been obtained on this entire block with the exception of two pieces on the Olive street side. One of these is owned by John F. Lee, attorney, who has been ill and who is not in condition to consider the sale of the parcel. As soon as the Olive street parcels have been clinched, the entire block will come under the control of a syndicate, which plans to erect the two buildings with the resources of the Missouri Pacific available on a proportionate scale.

A Building 'In the Air'—and Some Very Real Ones·

UTILITY DISPLACING ART IN BUILDING

T. P. Barnett Says Standards of Architecture in U. S. Have Fallen.

"In New York and many other cities I was impressed by the lack of importance architects attach to design in the construction of so-called up-to-date office buildings of the set-back type," said T. P. Barnett, of the T. P. Barnett Co., architects. "They seem satisfied with a motive of recess boxes as sufficient, without any artistic embellishment and practically no design. The employment of the standard styles seems to have almost disappeared. One notable exception is the Tribune tower in Chicago, which is a reproach to the average modern structure. Our modern architect is perfectly satisfied in catering only to the utilitarian.

"The apartment house problems are almost entirely covered by the speculator, who has eliminated the architect altogether, so the 'Saint Recklesses' all look as if they were dragged out of the same mold. There seems to be only one common meeting ground, and that is to cover the building with cheap terra cotta in order to make it appear that it cost a great deal more than it did.

"The general standard of architectural art in the United States has [illegible] steadily since the death of the late Stanford White. Vulgar fancy has covered the country with abortions and aberrations of every character.

"There has been one notable improvement in art standards and that is in the construction of the small residence. Most of the bad present-day art is the result of wartime prosperity."

Gerhart-Braun Sells Apartment.

The Gerhart-Braun Realty Co. reports the sale of the six-family apartment building, 808 Eastgate avenue, University City, in North Fairview, on a lot 60 by 140 feet, for Annie M. Riefling to Benjamin [illegible]. The reported consideration was $35,000. Annual rental is [illegible]. The purhcasers will occupy the second floor apartment about Aug. 1. The Ghertner Realty Co. represented the purchasers and the apartment will continue under the management of the Gerhart-Braun Realty Co.

DARSTDALE PRESENTS BUILDERS' EXPOSITION

A builders' exhibition installed at Darstdale under the auspices of the Joseph Darst Realty Co., will be formally opened to the public today. An organization has been perfected with plans for keeping the exposition in session for not less than six months, it was stated.

There is a total of 30 exhibits with everything entering into the construction of the most modern house and replete with the latest ideas in house building. A building facing Olive Street road along which Darstdale has an extensive frontage has been especially constructed for the exhibits.

Bus service connecting with the Delmar street car line has been arranged by the Joseph Darst Co., which is marketing Darstdale. Sunday and Monday will be given over entirely to the exposition.

LAVINIA TERRACE ACREAGE IS SOLD TO HUGO WURDACK

Sale of approximately 38 acres in Lavinia Terrace to Hugo Wurdack for the heirs of the Gay estate is announced by the real estate department of the Mercantile Trust Co.

The land is bordered on the north by Red Bud avenue, on the west by the North and South road, and on the south by Eager avenue. Consideration was not disclosed.

A plan started some time ago and fairly under way provides for a boulevard through this tract on the east side of the Kirkwood-Ferguson electric line to connect up with Wydown boulevard, which reaches Skinker road in St. Louis.

The Mercantile Trust Co. acted for both parties in the transaction.

A tract of 20 acres lying on the south side of Clayton road in the vicinity of the North and South road was recently sold by the Mercantile Trust Co. for Mrs. Sophia M. Crow, one of the Gay heirs.

Gay Villa, comprising approximately 80 acres on the south side of Clayton road, just west of Hampton Park, and in the locality of Davis place, constitutes one of the most attractive situations adjacent to the city. This tract, which is owned by Mrs. Crow, individually, has withstood some very attractive offers recently. It is regarded as eligible for a residential development on an ultra scale and is one of the few remaining large tracts within close proximity to the city available.

The Vernon Laux Realty Co. has closed a deal on the San Remo apartments at 904-08 North Euclid avenue for George Wladislaw to a client. The following sales also are reported: 3119 Magazine street, two stores and 12 five-room flats, for Florence Spiegel to a client of Oliver R. Kraehe.

REAL ESTATE BODY IN OLIVE STREET FIGHT

At a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange Friday afternoon, attended by 15 active members representing owners of property on Olive street between Twelfth boulevard and Channing avenue, a resolution was adopted instructing the board's counsel, Henry S. Caulfield, to take the steps necessary to enjoin the city from executing the proposed Olive street trolley parkway plan as approved by the Board of Public Service June 25.

This action by the Exchange directors was based on their contention that at the time the commissioners for the condemnation proceedings for the widening of Olive street made assessments for benefits and damages, no consideration was ever given to the construction of a private right-of-way for the United Railways for its exclusive use, but to the contrary the commissioners expressed themselves as having in mind that Olive street would be a 100-foot boulevard from building line to building line.

It is the further contention of the real estate men that hte plan proposed by the United Railways and approved by the Board of Public Service would retard the movement of traffic on Olive street and cause a depreciation in land values of from $200 to $500 a front foot.

Carbon Brush Co. Closes Lease.

The Carbon Brush Manufacturing Co. has taken a lease of the building at 110 South Ninth street. The building is undergoing extensive alterations. The lease was made for George Harless and T. C. Mann and others by the Mercantile Trust Co.

BUTLER BROTHERS TO REMAIN IN THEIR PRESENT QUARTERS AT 18TH AND OLIVE STREETS

Signing of Preliminary Contracts for Continued Occupancy Thought to Have Been Influenced by Widened Olive Plan.

According to an announcement yesterday preliminary contracts have been signed under which Butler Bros., will continue to occupy the eight-story building encompassing the block from Olive to Locust and from Seventeenth to Eighteenth streets. The term of occupancy and rental provided for in the agreement was not disclosed.

The announcement verifies predictions made in realty and business circles that an agreement ultimately would be reached by which Butler Bros. would continue as tenants of the building.

The Supreme Court's approval of the Olive street widening program doubtless fas a factor. Developments in this connection are regarded as a triumph for Olive street.

The building is owned by the Joliet Realty Co., of which J. Lionberger Davis is president. Butler Bros. have occupied it since its completion in November, 1907.

H. J. Littledale, director and manager of Butler Bros., yesterday stated that although the entire block between Lucas avenue, Morgan, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, was acquired a few months ago as the site for a new building for Butler Bros. use, recent negotiation with the Joliet Realty Co., had culminated in a manner that made necessary a change in the plans for the housing of Butler Bros. business in St. Louis.

Butler Bros. occupies large buildings in Chicago, New York, St. Louis, Minneapolis and Dallas—St. Louis being one of the largest branches—and the growing and expanding business requires occasional changes in the type and size of buildings necessary for the respective branches.

Littledale said that with the cooperation and assistance of Tom W. Bennett, president of Bennett Mortgage Co., through whom were conducted all the negotiations in connection with the acquisition of the property for the new building, and plans and specifications which were prepared by Aegerter & Bailey, architects, and the negotiation with the Joliet Realty Co., respecting the building at Eighteenth and Olive streets, final arrangements had resulted happily for all parties in interest.

MIDWEST BUILDING SOLD TO W. J. MOSLANK FOR $50,000

The Midwest Office Building at McPherson and Euclid avenues has been purchased by W. J. Moslank for $50,000. The Grace Realty Co. represented both buyer and seller in the transaction.

The Midwest Building is availabe for architects and contractors.

Mitchell to Ray R. Rosemond Co.; for Ray R. Rosemond Co., apartment building at 115 Eichelberger street to Jacob B. KENT JARVIS SELLS 120-ACRE TRACT ON EATHERTON ROAD

Kent Jarvis reports having closed the sale of 120 acres in St. Louis County on the Eatherton road, three miles north of Manchester road. This property was sold for the account of Albert Hoeltge, who owned it for 50 years, and it was bought by Miss Jose Schmidt for an investment.

For the account of William T. Snider and Wilke Diesselhorst, a lot fronting 100 feet on the west line of Lilac avenue by a depth of 270 feet, Webster Groves, to Seneca C. Taylor.

Is proving much more interesting than was expected. The various "built-in" exhibitions are much more elaborate.

Everyone at all interested in home building should make it their business to thoroughly inspect and have explained to them the material and equipment as well as their use.

This Exhibition is unique in being the first of its kind and offers to you a very clear understanding of the latest ideas in home building.

The materials displayed are the newest and most improved products of the country's foremost manufacturers, and attendants will very courteously discuss with you your home building problems.

There will be a time limit to this display so we urge you to make your investigations without delay.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

FANNIE. — There has been a protracted agitation to change the name of Mount Ranier to Mount Tacoma but apparently the project has not been carried out.

RADIO. — Your proximity to KFWF radio station might explain why you do not get station KSD. Try putting a 50-turn honey-comb coil in series with the aerial.

M. J. B.—With no instructions to the contrary from the Police Department, fireworks probably will be set off on Sunday, the Fourth of July, but more properly on Monday, the day on which the occasion is to be celebrated.

INQUIRER.—The Liberty Bell, which proclaimed freedom throughout the land on the nation's first Fourth of July, is appearing for the first time on United States postage stamps, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. The bell appears on a 2-cent issue of the stamp. The Liberty Bell issue is to be followed by a 5-cent stamp commemorating the unveiling at Washington, D. C., of a memorial to John Ericson, inventor of the Monitor, which fought in the world's first battle between ironclads in its historic engagement with the Merrimac.

DUMB.—Garlic is a species of onion, long in cultivation. The leaves are grass-like, and differ from those of the common onion in not being fistulous. The stem is about two feet high, terminated by a head composed principally of bulbs instead of flowers; the flowers are white, the root is a compound bulb, consisting of several smaller bulbs, commonly denominated cloves, enveloped by a common membrane. Garlic has a strong, penetrating odor and a pungent, acrid taste. It differs from the onion only by being more powerful in its effects. In warm climates, where garlic is considerably less acrid than in cold ones, it is much used both as a seasoning and as food. In the south of Europe, particularly in Spain and among Italians in the United States, it enters into the composition of almost every dish, not only among the common people but among the higher classes of society. At all times, however, while it has been prized by some nations it has been detested by others, as by the ancient Greeks. Its cultivation is easy, and it is reproduced by planting the radical or floral bulbs. Its medicinal virtues are celebrated.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

MRS. M. E.—The landlady can sue her for the rent in a Justice of the Peace Court.

J. M. B.—You may be able to obtain a divorce, and to sue your brother for damages. Consult a lawyer.

MARIE.—Consult a lawyer or the Legal Aid Bureau in the Municipal Courts Building, Fourteenth and Market streets.

ROBERT.—There is no law whereby this debt would be canceled in one year's time. Suit on an account is barred after five years, but even after that time the debt is not canceled or extinguished.

J. J. E.—You can transfer at the Board of Election Commissioners' office at the City Hall, up to 10 days before the election. If you move in the 10 days preceding the election you will lose your vote.

INTERESTED.—City Ordinance No. 28639 prohibits the sale of fire works at retail, except to persons having a permit from the Board of Police Service and except during the period from July 1 to 4, inclusive, when no permit is required.

AN OLD READER.—Your husband can sue the party in question for damages for his breach of the contract to purchase the goods. (2) Your husband can sue him on the check. He can also apply to the Warrant Office, in the Municipal Courts Building, for a warrant for his arrest.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

GEORGE.—Your question is not clear. Write again, being more specific.

N. M. H.—Most physicians give thyroid gland treatment when they deem such advisable in any given case with such other treatment as may be necessary.

IN MISERY. — You should be under the care of a competent physician and if you will send self-addressed, stamped envelope we will gladly recommend a list of physicians from which to choose.

ANXIOUS—After using the kerosine to remove the nits or the eggs, saturate the hair with warm lard, letting it remain on all night and in the morning wipe off with a towel, stripping small sections of hair when the nits will be mechanically removed.

B. S. — The operation on the nose is sometimes successfully performed. Such operations are not painful under anaesthetics, general or local. As to the advisability of such an operation, you must judge for yourself. If you so desire we will send you to a specialist whom we can recommend for such work.

WORRIED MOTHER.—Repeat your question, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

MC.—Chewing gum is a habit and by no means an edifying one in the presence of others. In the second place it is an undue tax on the salivary secretions generated in the mouth and very important in normal quantity in the process of digestion and hence is very capable of producing dyspepsia, which in time may upset other physical functions.

MRS. H. L.—The doctor was mistaken in stating that you were too young to have menopause, since it may, and frequently does, come on at a much earlier age, and from the description you give it is the cause of most if not all of your trouble. Since such is the case you should bear with all the patience and fortitude you can bring to bear in tiding over this period with its many and different symptoms and pains. You should derive some relief by dissolving a tablespoonful of lykosine in a quart of water and using as an injection night and morning when necessary. Also hot hip bath, remaining quiet and avoiding overwork and worry during this time.

LAST CALL Electric Refrigeration

The new industry needs salesman. Because the industry is expanding so rapidly, experienced men are not available.

For that reason, at a cost of several thousand dollars, we have engaged the services of Mr. J. A. Carson of Detroit.

Mr. Carson and his crew of men will conduct a sales school, beginning July 6th, for the instruction of inexperienced men in the sale of electric refrigerating service.

Whether you are an experienced salesman or not, if you have a good personality, a clean record and are willing to work, and work hard, you are invited to attend the opening session of this school. You will be told something of the future awaiting good men in this newest and fastest-growing industry. There will be no obligation.

School opens at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday, July 6th. Be prompt, if possible, but drop in at any time.

In the meantime, if you wish, call for a personal interview. Ask for Mr. Harker.

A Woman Now Manages "Man o' War"

Elizabeth Daingerfield, One of the Top-Notch Race Horse Breeding Experts of America, Manages Three Breeding Farms in the Blue Grass District of Kentucky. Man o' War and Morvich Are Only Two of the Horses in Her Stables. Crusader and American Flag Are Her Proteges.

By JULIUS KLEIMANN

LEXINGTON, Kentucky.

DOWN here in this Blue Grass country is a woman named Elizabeth Daingerfield, who tells me she doesn't know anything about horses. She is the only one who tells me that. Ask anybody else what Elizabeth Daingerfield knows of thoroughbreds, and he'll very likely tell you she knows all about them.

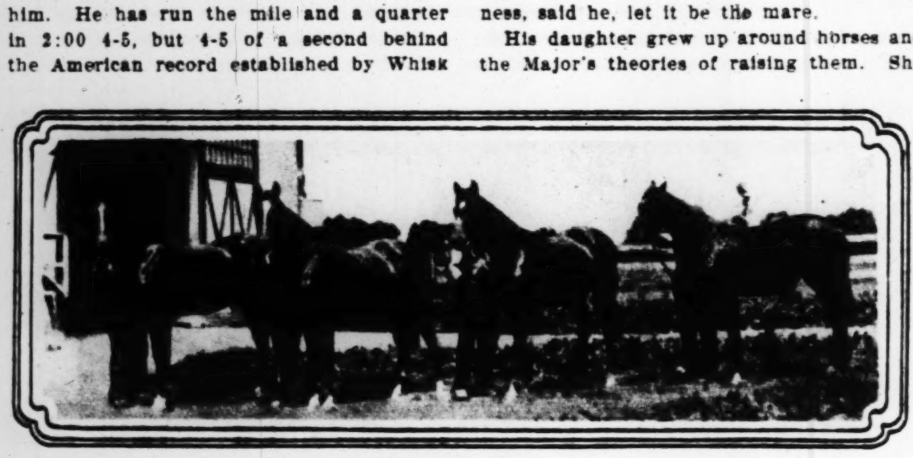
For here is a woman in the unusual position of manager of three different stock farms, one of them easily among the most important in Kentucky. She's considered an authority on breeding, and she is. One of her charges is the great Man o' War, probably greatest of American race horses. Another is Morvich, winner of the Kentucky Derby in 1922. Crusader, son of Man o' War, bred and raised under Miss Daingerfield's direction, has been cleaning up the tracks this year. He promises to be one of the best three-year-olds of the season. His brother, American Flag, was last year's champion three-year-old, and American Flag is a protege of Elizabeth Daingerfield.

Three farms totaling 630 acres, three farms with 150 fine horses on them to take care of, and she says she doesn't know anything about horses. What is more, what is more unusual, she actually believes it. It is no new experience to meet an expert in his line who bashfully tells you he really doesn't know anything about his subject. But that statement is only a polite gesture to ward off any possible tinge of egotism. But to meet someone who is an expert, have her tell you she doesn't know anything about her profession, and to have her really mean it—that is an experience.

"THE only reason anyone has ever heard of me," Miss Daingerfield said to me, scoffing, "is because of Man o' War. No one would ever have heard anything about me otherwise. All I do is watch these horses. If you love horses and want to see them grow and get along physically, that's all there is to it. Anybody could be—anybody who cared about horses—could get along just as well with them and be just as successful as I've been."

But could they? They couldn't. It takes someone who knows horses, who has a feeling for them, someone with an indefinable instinct for what is best in horses, to have been responsible for a Sarazen.

It may almost be assumed that just about anyone who gives the most fleeting glance to the sport pages has heard of this brilliant gelding, Sarazen. Today Sarazen, five years old, is the same menace he has always been to the horses competing with him. He has run the mile and a quarter in 2:00 4-5, but 4-5 of a second behind the American record established by Whisk Broom in 1913. Noteworthy time and a noteworthy feat for any horse. But who is this Sarazen and where did he come from?



Four of Man o' War's fillies.

His sire was High Time. A horse of the best blood lines, a horse of conventional breed, an aristocratic thoroughbred. Well enough. But Sarazen's dam? Rush Box. And very little is known of Rush Box. But we do know that she wasn't a very fine lady, there was nothing regal about her, a good many curled their lips at her as a "plow horse."

It would then seem that High Time's mating with this Rush Box would be nothing if it wasn't a misalliance. But casting social distinction and lineage to the winds, Miss Daingerfield hit upon Rush Box as a fitting mate for High Time. Sarazen was the result. And his records speak for themselves.

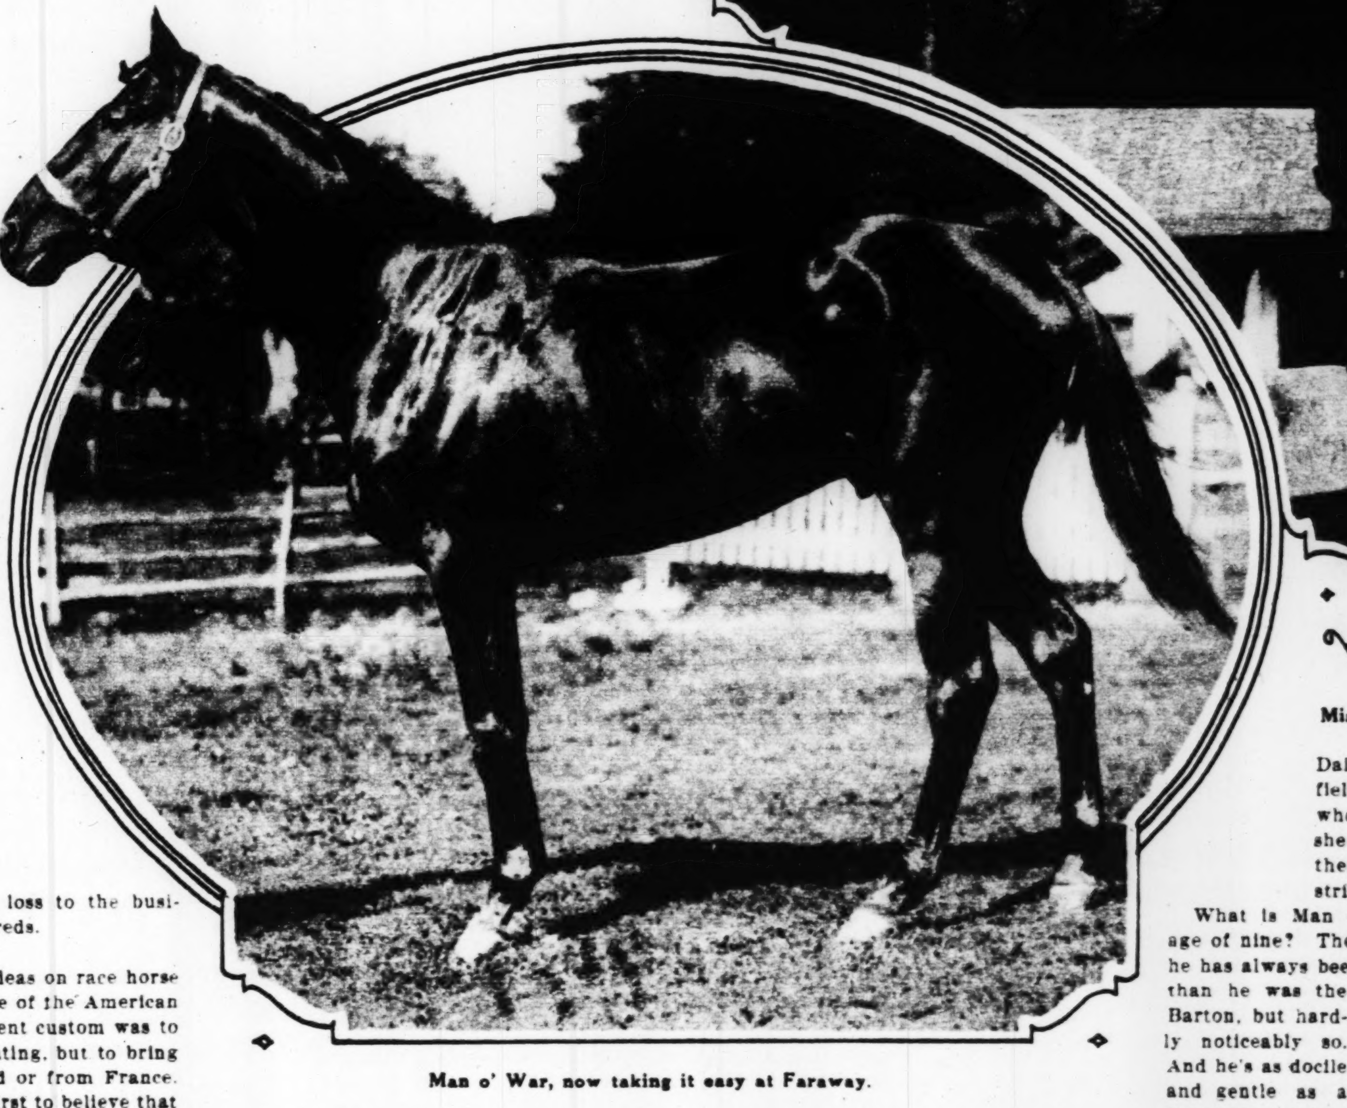
Now just what caused Miss Daingerfield to choose Rush Box for High Time is something which is not entirely known. She can't quite explain these things herself. All we know is that she looked at this High Time, regarded poor almost ostracised Rush Box, and something told her, perhaps some fleeting inspiration prompted her, to mate them. And in decisions and inspirations like this lie some of the genius required to make a great breeder of race horses. Such work as a Sarasen is a bit mystic, perhaps, but you won't find a Hindu faker responsible for a feat like this. It takes a man or woman who knows horses.

And Elizabeth Daingerfield knows them. She's grown up with them. She's been around them all her life, and, having been around them and knowing them so intimately, she has learned to love them. Miss Daingerfield's father was the famous breeder, Major Foxhall Daingerfield. The Major was originally from Virginia. Later he moved to Kentucky.

Horses were always his hobby, and he knew them as did very few others. Now, his brother-in-law was James R. Keene, who owned the great breeding farm at Castleton, Kentucky. And Major Daingerfield was the manager of it.

Daingerfield had his own theories about breeding. At the time of his death he was engaged in writing a book on it, and its never being finished was a great loss to the business of raising thoroughbreds.

Miss Daingerfield feeding three of Man o' War's yearlings at Faraway Farm.



Man o' War, now taking it easy at Faraway.

ONE of the Major's ideas on race horse breeding was the use of the American stallion. The prevalent custom was to use American mares in mating, but to bring the stallions from England or from France. Daingerfield was not the first to believe that American stallions were the animals to use in breeding. But he was really the first to strongly advocate this theory and put it plentifully into practice.

So instead of importing horses to father the yearlings on the Castleton farm, Major Daingerfield used American horses. If a foreign horse was to be used in this business, said he, let it be the mare.

His daughter grew up around horses and the Major's theories of raising them. She showed an aptitude for the work and was pretty constantly by the Major's side. She listened to what he said, and drank in his theories. By the time she was a young woman, she had become his assistant.

About thirteen years ago Major Daingerfield's health began to fail. For a year h was quite ill, unable to attend fully to his duties. But someone had to take charge of them, and he knew of no one who could do the job better than his daughter. For a year Elizabeth Daingerfield was the acting boss of the great Castleton farm. After a year's illness the Major died. The next day his brother-in-law and lifelong friend, James R. Keene, followed him. That was twelve years ago.

AFTER Keene's death the Castleton stock and farm were sold. But Miss Daingerfield had made a reputation for herself; the breeding experts of the Blue Grass country had discovered what she was worth. She was at once offered the managership of a farm, and she took it. Off she started on her career.

That was twelve years ago. In these past dozen years she has made a reputation for herself as one of the most expert breeders in America, and if in America, then in the world.

It is no mean assignment to have Man o' War, the greatest of horses, put in your care. And she has had his management since he was retired to the stud. Man o' War, whose owner was offered $260,000 for him.

Samuel D. Riddle, the millionaire sportsman, after putting Man o' War in Miss Daingerfield's charge, decided he wanted a breeding farm in the Blue Grass country. Mr. Riddle knows the thoroughbred game and undoubtedly Mr. Riddle has just about enough money to get almost anyone he wants to manage his farms for him. And when Riddle decided to lay out a farm near Lexington, he chose Elizabeth Daingerfield for the job.

So Miss Daingerfield and Riddle looked over the country in the vicinity of Lexington and finally picked 430 acres about seven miles from this city. Then came the real job—the laying out of the property. There is nothing haphazard about the architecture of a breeding farm. First there are the stables to be thought of, some of them small for the horses, others of them larger for the numerous colts and fillies. Next to every stable is its paddock, and the paddocks are of different areas. For, quite naturally, one stallion doesn't need as large a place to romp around in as do ten or twelve mares and their yearlings.

AND as the Blue Grass country is a sloping rolling country, care must be taken that the stables are placed on properly high ground.

Now the stables themselves are not makeshift, thrown-together structures. It would hardly do to put a horse for which $260,000 had been offered in that kind of a place. The stables on the Faraway Farm, which is the name of the Riddle farm, are, I imagine, just about model stables.

The stable known as the Man o' War Stable is a beauty. Painted white, with a high "hip" roof, there is space for plenty of air, and this high roof is far enough away from the ground to ease the heat of the hot Kentucky sun. In this stable are four stalls or rather rooms, each twenty feet by twenty-two feet. Man o' War lives in one of these rooms, the other three are occupied by three other fine horses.

So are all the other stables. All high, roomy, clean and sweet-smelling. There are more than thirty colored men employed in keeping them and their occupants in the choicest condition.

These stables were designed by Miss Daingerfield; Miss Daingerfield it is who chooses the men who work around them; it is she who is responsible for their being always kept in this strict order.

What is Man o' War like today at the age of nine? The fine-looking brown horse he has always been. Perhaps a little heavier than he was the day he outdistanced Sir Barton, but hardly noticeably so. And he's as docile and gentle as a very great horse should be. His colored trainer, John Buckner, or "Buck," as everyone knows him, leads him out into the paddock and the big fellow gracefully comes along. "Buck" has been with Man o' War ever since Riddle bought him, and he was only a yearling then.

So Man o' War walks out into his paddock—there is a certain nobility in his carriage—and he poses for a picture just the way the photographer wants him to, and in the manner in which he's instructed to stand by "Buck."

American Flag, another of Man o' War's children. He is a favorite of Miss Daingerfield's.

Down at Haylands—Haylands is Miss Daingerfield's own farm of 50 acres, and it's much nearer Lexington than is Faraway—is Morvich. He is a "boarder," his owner having turned him over to Miss Daingerfield's care. He shares his stable with Last Coin, a stallion owned by Miss Daingerfield. Morvich and Last Coin are both fine fellows. This Morvich, especially, is a hound for sugar.

When Miss Daingerfield walked into their stable, she promptly took from its shelf the box of loaf sugar that always stays there. Morvich got his piece and Last Coin was given his. Then Miss Daingerfield instructed one of her men to lead Last Coin out of his stable, for someone wanted to take his picture. Two pieces of sugar in her hand, she called to him, tempting him with the sugar to turn his head so the photographer might have the view he wanted.

But the spot on which she had chosen to stand was next the window of Morvich's stall. In fact, she was leaning against the stable side. And as she held up those two sugar lumps to tempt Last Coin, a head was pressed against the wire of the stable window, there was a nicker, and through the wire Miss Daingerfield had to pass one of those sugar lumps that were for the tempting of Last Coin. Morvich, winner of the Kentucky Derby, was lowering himself to the childish pursuit of begging for sugar.

LAST COIN is of the breed of the old Castleton stables, and his mistress is very fond of him. She took the writer over to another stable, nearby, and had some of her men lead out the yearlings who were the children of Morvich and Last Coin. There was one yearling among them who was about as close to a reproduction of Morvich as nature can make. The only difference being that he is a chestnut, while his sire is a black.

"That is the thing I like to do," said Miss Daingerfield, "breed them to type." She was very calm about it all, but it was not hard to see that she was exalted.

We walked from the stables to the fine old house in which she lives when the press of her business doesn't keep her in the home she has on Faraway Farm. And sitting in a great comfortable chair, near a fireplace filled with crackly thin twigs is

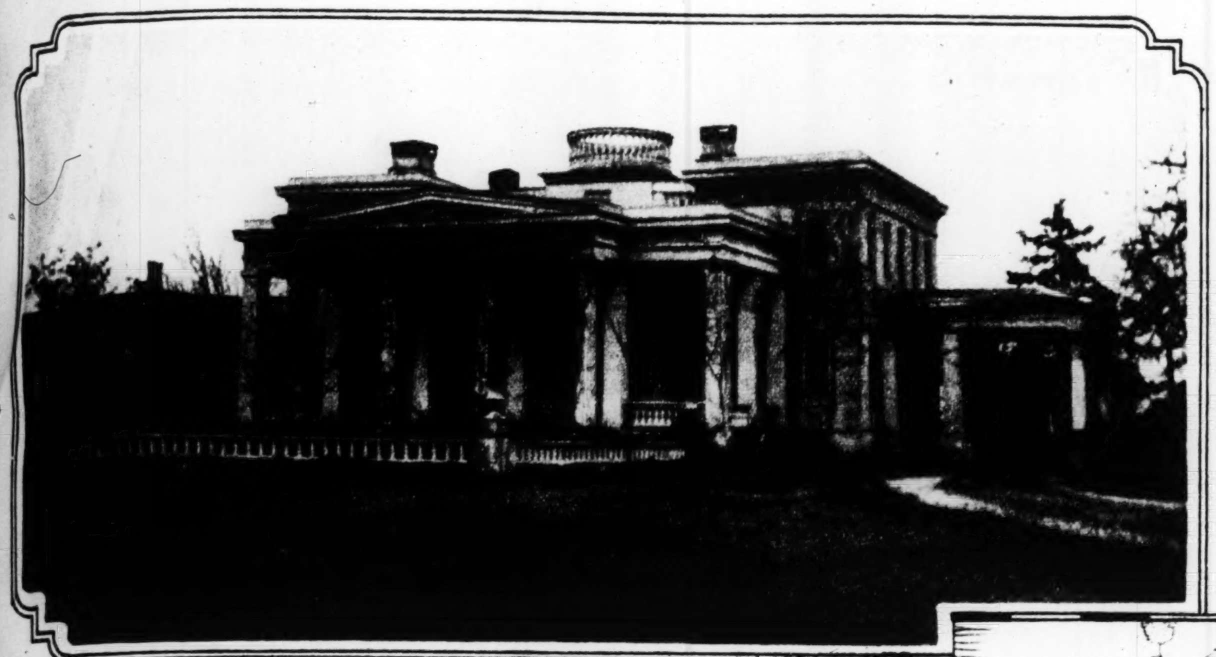
Another Flood of "Whitfield Dollars"

Hoard of $20 Gold Pieces Buried in Civil War Days Is Dug Out of the Ooze of the Great Shady Grove Swamp Near Demopolis, Alabama, After the Long-Lost Section of a Chart Supplies the Clew.



"Gaineswood," the old Whitfield mansion, built in 1850.

Where the road crosses the slough in Shady Grove Swamp—the key point.

By GUY FORSHEY

DEMOPOLIS, Alabama.

WHERE the old plantation road crosses the slough in the heart of Shady Grove Swamp, 27 miles southwest of here, you peer into the depths of an American "Heart of Darkness." Scarcely ever does a ray of sunshine penetrate the thicket overhead. It is a region of perpetual shadow, dismal and loathsome. The ground is always watersoaked and slimy. So are the matted fallen trees. Throughout most of the year the stagnant scum-covered pools are alive with polliwogs and aswarm with myriads of mosquitoes. Frogs croak wretchedly from the muddy banks of Double Creek meandering nearby in the general direction of the Tombigbee River, three miles below. It is semi-tropical wilderness at its worst, is the Shady Grove Swamp, broken only at intervals by patches of cotton and corn in the clearings.

Viewing what he can see of the landscape from the point where the old road crosses the slough, the traveler involuntarily muses that if the remedy be not worse than the disease a fugitive might conceal himself indefinitely in the morass without fear of molestation. Its adaptability as a natural hiding place is forced upon the attention. The number of white-tailed deer and other wild animals testify to its remoteness from the haunts of men. The roads over which the visitor must perforce have come to get there testify to its inaccessibility. Unless he is familiar with the history of the locality, however, it might not occur to him that Shady Grove Swamp offers a field as admirable for the concealment of treasure as for the concealment of man. But knowing the traditions of the place as most of the Southerners know them now, the visitor approaches the slough with ear alert for the thud of a pick in the muck and with eye sharpened to espy the dusky form of a Negro wielding the implement in frantic and mysterious quest. Visions arise of shining gold dollars protruding from the soggy soil. For the legends told about Shady Grove Swamp by the old plantation Negroes since Civil War times have at last been confirmed.

FIFTY paces west from the point where the old road crosses the slough the earth is torn up like a sector of French battlefront. Jagged pits yawn like shellholes half filled with water and trees are found literally dug out by the roots. Here it was, 50 paces from the crossing, that the Whitfields found the powder can of buried gold.

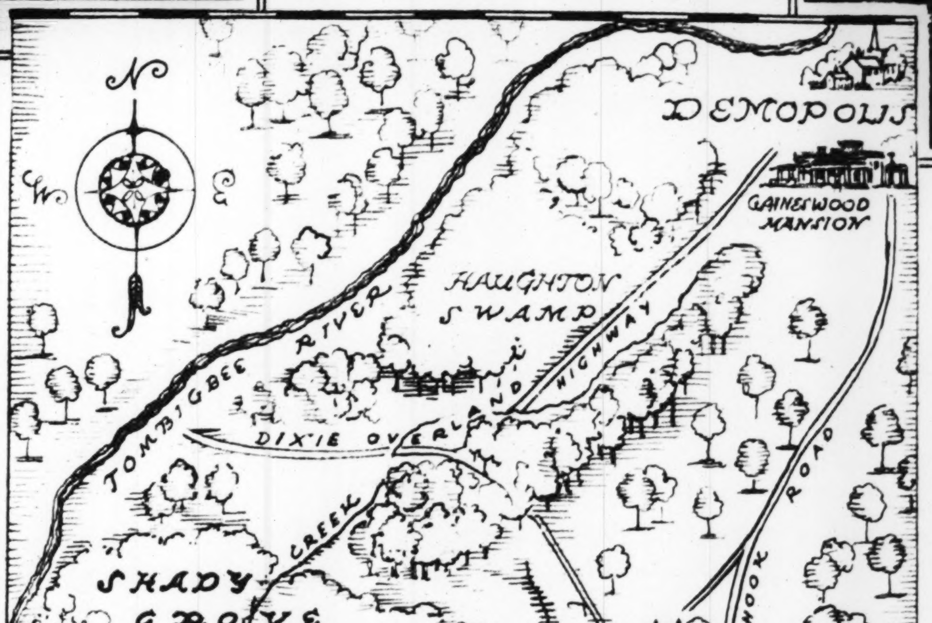
Almost like an up-to-date version of Poe's immortal tale of "The Gold Bug" is the chronicle of the Whitfield heirs' long search for hidden treasure and their ultimate success, which came as the result of finding the missing section of the key map lost for 61 years.

Since the Civil War days, members of the Whitfield family have known that somewhere hidden in the gloom of Shady Grove Swamp reposed a pot of $20 goldpieces. They didn't know how much there was, and now that they do know they won't tell precisely how much they found. They knew the gold had been buried there one dark night in 1865 by their grandfather, Colonel Gaius Whitfield, who resorted to the measure in an effort to save his hoard from the foragers of the invading Union Army. They even knew the approximate location of the cache, but repeated attempts to find the exact spot were unavailing for a reason traditional in treasure hunts of fiction. The key could not be solved. Not because it was written in indecipherable code, but because the most important part of it was missing.

When Colonel Gaius Whitfield had tamped down the mud on the old powder can of gold pieces back in 1865 he hit upon a clever, but, as it turned out, a too-thorough device of safety in recording its whereabouts. He charted the spot with reference to two different key points and then tore the sheet diagonally in two, concealing the pieces separately. Alone, neither section would reveal the exact resting place of the powder can, but fitted together they would supply a complete guide. What happened?

While the gold still slumbered in the ooze of Shady Grove and the secret of its whereabouts remained his own, Col. Whitfield died. That was soon after the Civil War, when foragers were still active and it was unsafe to have gold lying about a plantation home. The heirs apparently made no effort to recover the money for some years, and when they did they were able to find only one section of the chart. It proved to be useless without the other. Years of search went unrewarded. Then, a few weeks ago, there came to light the missing section. With its discovery there developed the most spectacular treasure hunt witnessed in the South since the quest for the Spanish doubloons of the pirate Lafitte on Pecan Island, off the Louisiana coast.

With the long-lost map section in their possession, Gaius and Henry Whitfield, grandsons of the Colonel and present owners of the Shady Grove plantation, bought 25 new picks and journeyed into the swamp. After locating the spot and blasting for a few days with dynamite in an attempt to locate the hoard without assistance, they called in the Negro hands from the plantation's cotton fields. Thirty-five stalwart blacks were set to work with the new picks and battery of shovels assembled on the farm. For nearly a whole day the Negroes labored and sweltered in the uninspiring belief that they were searching for old line markers. Then, late in the afternoon, the mystery was solved when Will Grant, digging 18 inches below the surface in the bed of the slough at the foot of a maple tree, drove his pick into a pocket of gold. Shiny twenty-dollar pieces literally splashed up into his face. The 60-year search at last was over and Shady Grove Swamp had yielded up its secret. The powder can had rusted away so that only the rims remained.



The Shady Grove Swamp region in which the treasure was found.

Where the powder can of gold pieces was discovered.

Will Grant, the plantation hand whose pick struck the hidden gold.

And here is the reason the second half of the map did the work after the first had failed.

A short distance beyond the point where the old road crosses the slough it swings to the left and follows down the course of the draw, roughly paralleling the slough at a distance varying from 50 to 100 yards. When the elderly planter devised his chart he devoted the first part to directions based on two great trees which stood at the roadside. Fifty paces south of the trees, the key indicated, the gold lay buried in the bottom of the slough. When the searchers tried to follow instructions, however, they found themselves facing an insurmountable obstacle. The trees had disappeared or couldn't be identified among the other trees. The only known quantity was that the cache lay in the slough at some point 50 yards from the road. To excavate on all ground answering this description would have constituted an appalling task, for the road and the slough run almost parallel for a considerable distance, and besides, the course of either might have been changed during a period of 60 years. Such excavations as were attempted from time to time were given up as hopeless.

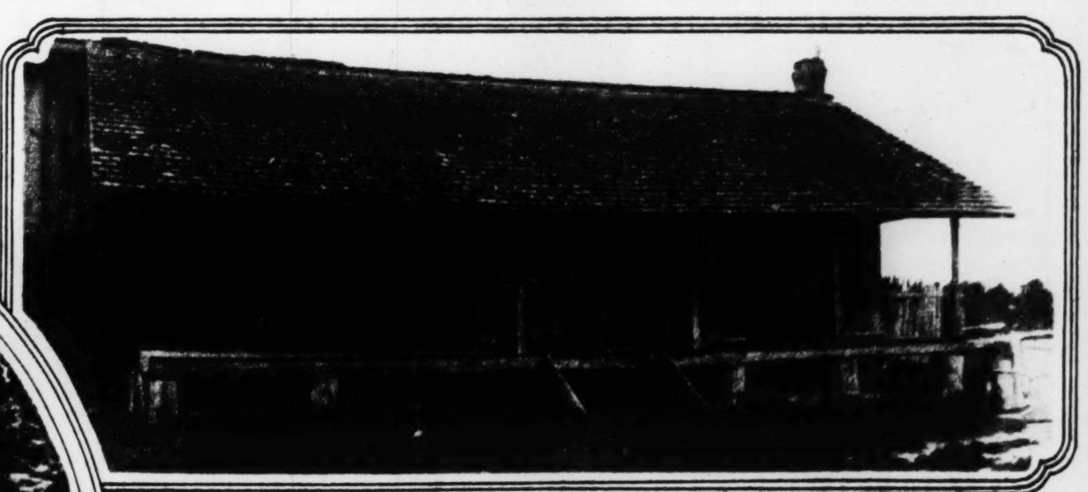
But another light was shed on the mystery when Gaius the younger, while moving old household furnishings from one of the family plantations at Artesia, Mississippi, recently came upon the rest of the chart.

"FROM the point where the road crosses the slough," it directed, "step 50 paces westward." There, it promised, at the intersection of the 50-yard line drawn from the previously mentioned trees, the gold would be found. This supplied a definite quantity, even though the trees had disappeared. Old Negroes who had lived on the Shady Grove plantation from slave times declared the course of the road had not been changed and that the crossing had always been at the same spot. It was easy, then, to locate approximately the desired point by pacing off 50 steps down the slough. They promptly set to work, digging straight across.

The Whitfields, members of an old and aristocratic family of the South, have never been noted for taking outsiders into their confidence, so it was consistent with their traditions that Gaius, now a resident of Middlesboro, Ky., where he operates a banking business, and Henry, vice president of the Robertson Banking Company of Demopolis, should make no public mention of the missing chart's discovery. Everybody suspected the nature of their expedition when they bought their digging equipment and set off for the swamp, but so far as known they discussed their business with nobody but Lee Patterson, their overseer, who manages the 4700-acre Shady Grove plantation and looks after the 500 Negro tenants on the place. With Patterson's assistance they had the stage set before they called in the Negro workmen and immediately after the find had been made the Negroes were sent back to the fields with scarcely a look at the gold. Not until late in the day were the laborers even told what they were digging for. Then one of the Whitfields announced that money was hidden in the swamp and $10 would be given to the man who found it. Great was the commotion when Will Grant's pick struck the pay dirt.

The plantation hands who took part in the search were found to be very reluctant to talk about their experience when the writer of this narrative visited the scene recently. They had been instructed by the Whitfields to keep still, as also had Patterson. However, one dusky giant couldn't resist the temptation to express himself.

"Boss white man," he declared, "I was standin' in foah feet of Will when he hit that money and I doan never want to see so much money again. It scared me. Will had a plumb fit. He threw his pick down and yelled and all the other niggahs come runnin' and crowdin' up till Mistah Gaius chased 'em all away. I never did see any money so new and shiny, but they tells me it's been there fifty yeahs. I wants to ax you, boss, does you reckon that money's any good now?"



The overseer's house on Shady Grove plantation.

As to how much gold was actually unearthed there is some difference of opinion in Demopolis. Rumors that the figure exceeded $200,000 were denied by the Whitfields, but their statements as to the exact amount have been indefinite and evasive. The theory most generally accepted is that the old powder can held between $12,000 and $15,000, all in $20 pieces and dating from 1850 to 1863. Most of it was of 1850 mintage. Several thousand dollars was placed on deposit in the Robertson Bank here and is in general circulation at face value. Besides Henry and Gaius, two sisters, Nellie and Winifred, all children of the late Dr. Charles Boaz Whitfield, share in the find.

WHETHER the amount to be divided is $15,000 or twice that amount makes little difference in the family's financial rating. The Whitfields, for several generations, have been regarded as independently wealthy. In the days before the Civil War, it is said, Col. Gaius Whitfield was rated as a millionaire and the richest man in Alabama. His land holdings were enormous, comprising at least 60,000 acres in the area between Demopolis and Linden and the Tombigbee River. There was a statement widely heard in those days that one could drive for 26 miles straight south from Demopolis without getting off of Whitfield land. "Gaineswood," the Whitfield mansion, built in 1850, half a mile from Demopolis on what is now the Dixie Overland Highway, was a showplace that visitors traveled far to see. It is still a landmark of outstanding beauty. In its heyday it was the home of General Nathan Whitfield, a cousin of the elder Gaius, but it served as the social headquarters for the entire Whitfield line and many were the brilliant festivities which held forth under its portals. Negro slaves numbered by the score were there to wait upon the whims of belles and gallants. More than 1500, it is declared, were owned by the General, and Gaius had at least 500 slaves scattered about on his vast domain.

In recent years much of the original tract, which included the great Haughton Swamp southwest of Demopolis, has been sold, but the land holdings still comprise two other plantations—the Cox and Norwood places—each of which is fully as large as the present Shady Grove farm. Their fields are fertile and their crops luxuriant.

It was on the Shady Grove place, however, that the elder Gaius operated most extensively as a cotton planter in Civil War days. The old plantation home, a one-story frame structure now sadly dilapidated, still stands there on a knoll overlooking a row of Negro cabins stretching along a lane between two great cotton fields. One reaches the place by debouching from the Pin Hook road at Six Mile Creek, some four miles east, and threading a devious course through swamp country almost as dense as that in which the gold was buried. Passing the old house with its surrounding cluster of tenant quarters, the visitor proceeds across other fertile fields and through other dense forests for some four miles ere he comes to the main Shady Grove swamp and the scene of the treasure hunt. Negroes, old and young, are seen loitering about the cabins or plying their hoes in the cotton fields. Some of them were there when Col. Whitfield used to farm on a big scale.

THERE was "Uncle" Henry Banks, for instance, who lives down below the "Burn" (an area once burned off) on the banks of the Tombigbee. "Uncle" Henry remembers when Colonel Whitfield used to ship three or four thousand bales of cotton down the Tombigbee to Mobile every year and sell it for prices ranging as high as $1 a pound during the war. He would bring the gold back in sacks and toss them around like bags of grain. Once when he was a boy, declares Uncle Henry, they left the sacks on the porch while they went in to dinner and he went up and felt of those great bags of money. He says they were full of "natchel dollars."

With so much gold on hand and banks so few and far between, the practice of burying money was bound to become common, not only with the Whitfields, but with other Southern planters. Old timers declare the South is still full of buried gold and that the $15,000 unearthed on the Shady Grove place represents only a handful of that probably hidden at one time or another on that plantation alone. Indeed, there is reason for local belief that the cache was not the first discovered by the Whitfields. About 25 years ago, old residents recall, the country was suddenly flooded with old gold coins which came to be known as "Whitfield dollars." Although little was said about the matter by the Whitfields themselves, it was generally understood that the gold had been found somewhere in the fastnesses of Shady Grove.

While the lack of banks, the war and the planter's weakness for keeping his money where he could readily lay hands upon it all contributed to the habit of hiding gold in the swamp, it appears to have been specifically a foraging expedition of Union forces, known in history as Wilson's raid, which sent Colonel Whitfield scurrying to the woods with the $15,000 recently unearthed. The raiders were then in the vicinity of Selma, 50 miles east of Demopolis, and planters throughout the section were burying not only their money, but also their table silver and even the hams from their smokehouses. When it was reported that they were on the march toward Demopolis, the Colonel became nervous and hid everything of value that was above ground. He is said to have taken two Negroes with him to do the digging when he carried the gold to the swamp, but upon arrival reconsidered and sent them away.

Then, with only the frogs and the owls as witnesses, he covered the old powder can from sight and left it to its 61-year slumber in the ooze, fifty paces from the point where the old road splashes across the Shady Grove Slough.

Warwick Priory Moved Bodily to America

TEN minutes by automobile from the famous old church where Patrick Henry spoke his immortal "Give me liberty or give me death" is arising on American soil a bit of old England. Virginia society folk have already bodily transported Warwick Priory from England to an exclusive residential section of Richmond. Agecroft Hall, from Manchester, is on the way. Ultimately the limousines of Virginia's wealthy ones will wend their course over even paving stones that have been brought from England that was the target for Patrick Henry's rhetoric.

Once Queen Elizabeth visited the Earl of Leicester at Warwick Priory. Sir Walter Scott told all about that visit in "Kenilworth" and the story shall not be repeated here. The priory was built by a fishmonger's son back in the days when Bluff King Hal was adventuring in tempestuous seas of matrimony. It has its medieval secret passage. Probably it has its ghost. Romantic tales cluster around it. But none of them is more romantic than the twentieth century happening which has brought it across the seas to the Old Dominion.

Where Queen Elizabeth once visited soon there will reign as mistress the widow of a former St. Louis millionaire who is now the wife of the son of a former rector of Patrick Henry's church.

She is Mrs. Alexander W. Weddell now, and was until her marriage with Mr. Weddell, Consul-General of the United States in Mexico, Mrs. Virginia Steedman, widow of James Harrison Steedman, who amassed a fortune in making air compressors and sawmill machinery and who died in 1921, as the result, it was said, of a breakdown following strenuous efforts, as an officer of the Navy, in supervising repairs on ships during the World War.

AROUND Warwick Priory, which they have brought from England to be their home, other wealthy Virginians will re-erect other antique English homes, the first of them to be Agecroft Hall, which has been purchased by T. C. Williams, another rich Richmonder. Here in Richmond the collecting of antique furniture has given way before the passion for collecting antique homes.

T. C. Williams is the owner of Windsor Farms. It is a subdivision sloping northward from the James River. The English Village is to be located in Windsor Farms.

Allen Saville, former Director of Public Works in Richmond, took Mr. and Mrs. Weddell out to Windsor Farms. "If you will erect Warwick Priory here on the river," he said, "I will build around it a characteristic English village—even a reproduction of Warwick, if you wish." And so it was decided. Mr. Williams followed the Weddell lead with the purchase of Agecroft Hall.

Ultimately, Warwick Priory will be the permanent home of the Virginia Historical Society. Only through their own lives will Mr. and Mrs. Weddell enjoy the historic structure as a home. And ultimately Virginia House, which is the name they have chosen, will consist of three parts, the Warwick Priory, a reproduction of Sulgrave Manor, which was the ancestral home of the Washington family, and a reproduction of Wormleighton, the castle of Lord Spencer, in England.

If Virginia House has reference to the Virginia Historical Society, it also is her husband's compliment to Mrs. Weddell. She was Virginia Chase, the daughter of the late Col. and Mrs. Edwin E. Chase of Fort Worth, Texas, and a descendant of an old Virginia family. Out of their love for their old home State, Colonel and Mrs. Chase named their daughter.

AND it was through the Virginia tradition that Mrs. Weddell, then a handsome widow, chanced to meet her present husband. She was traveling in India in company with Mr. and Mrs. William H. Cocke of St. Louis, who in Virginia had known Mr. Weddell. He at that time was American Consul-General at Calcutta. His term at the Indian post had expired and he accompanied the St. Louis travelers back to the United States. Friendship advanced in the journeying and on May 31, 1923, Mrs. Steedman and Mr. Weddell were married in Huntington Chapel, Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York. Later he was transferred as American Consul-General to Mexico City, his present post.

Mr. Weddell's father was rector of St. John's Church, the famous Patrick Henry church, when he was born. He had a clerkship in the Library of Congress in his early manhood and in 1908 entered the consular service and served in East Africa; Denmark; at Catania, Italy; Athens, Greece; Beirut, Syria; Cairo, Egypt; and Calcutta. For services during the war he was decorated by Greece, Italy and Panama.

Last November the Weddells went to England. They thought they might "pick up a few things" of antiquarian interest for Virginia House, which they had already planned to build for the Virginia Historical Society. It was to be a replica of Sulgrave Manor—where Lawrence Washington, ancestor of George Washington, had lived in England. With them went Henry G. Morse, New York architect, a special student of and an authority on English architecture.

They saw Sulgrave Manor and were enamored of it. They traveled across England visiting delightful old towns and villages and homes. At Warwick Mr. Weddell got hungry. He did the very American thing. He bought a sandwich.

It was wrapped up for him in a piece of old newspaper. On the scrap of paper was printed an advertisement: "Historic Warwick Priory for Sale," it said.

"We'd better take a look at it, Virginia," her husband said. "Perhaps there will be something suitable for use in Virginia House."

They saw and were convinced it all would be of use. They bought the priory. Piece by piece as the old structure was torn down it was boxed and crated and brought across the seas to America.

ENGLAND didn't like the idea of this historic treasure going to new soil. Newspaper critics voiced their horror. The Daily Mail thought the Government should take some measures to prevent such removals. Mr. Weddell's answer was to the point. Before his purchase, other materials from the structure had been auctioned off to a contractor who had intended to use the brick and stone in a factory in the neighborhood.

"It would be more appropriate to use those materials, we thought," he said, "to build a structure to house the Virginia Historical Society, which for many years has been the guardian of Virginia's treasures, and whose work, incidentally, has been a powerful factor in the promotion of understanding between the two great countries."

And having thus said his say, Mr. Weddell moved on across England and at one place picked up the frame of a lily pond, and over in South Wales a mantel that dates back to the twelfth century.

Virginia House will be ready for occupancy this year. And its erection marks a new development, a removal of the social center of the city. Out along Old Shuffletown road Richmond is moving. When Lady Astor used to drive her goats about the old town, Franklin street was the avenue of the high world. Patriots put up a statue of General "Jeb" Stuart in a steel circle at the top of the street, and it became Monument avenue. Today it is the show street of Richmond. But only today. Pioneer souls with heavy pocketbooks have begun to go westward for spacious estates just out of the city. And now comes Virginia House and the English village, at Windsor Farms.

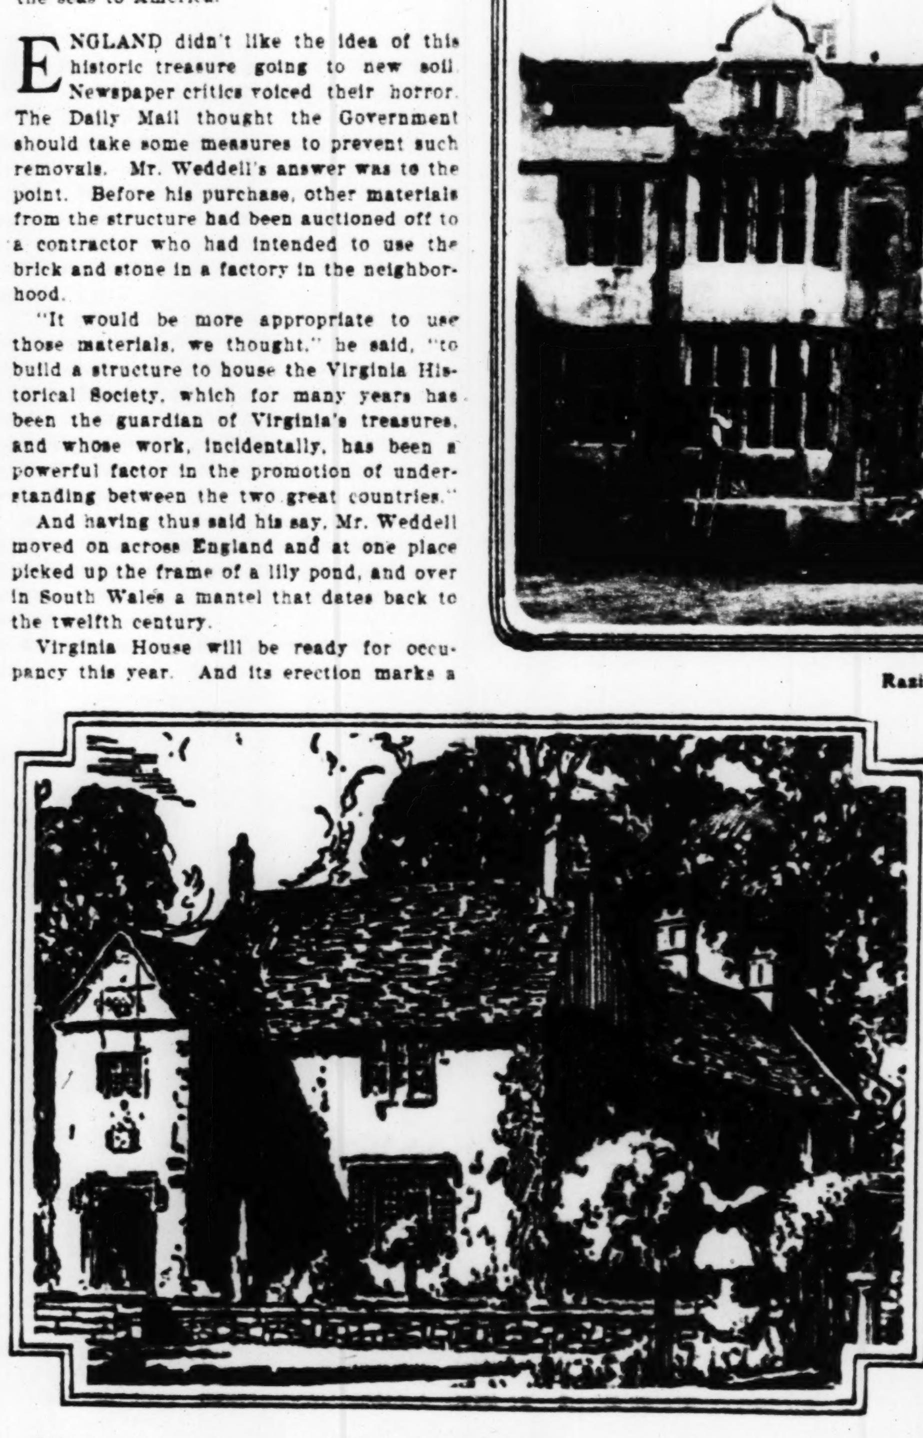
Alexander W. Weddell. He ate a sandwich and Warwick Priory comes to America.



Sulgrave Manor, the home of Washington's ancestors, to be reproduced by the Weddells as part of Virginia House.

Virginia House will be erected in three connected sections: Warwick Priory, re-erected from the original materials, which is to be occupied by the Weddells as a home; Sulgrave Manor, which the Virginia Historical Society will occupy as soon as it is finished, and Wormleighton, which is to be the servants' quarters.

The original Warwick Priory was founded by Henry de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick, in 1124. Thomas Hawkins, son of a fishmonger, bought it 400 years later and razed a part to erect thereon a Tudor structure. In the eighteenth century a Georgian wing was added.

And now twelfth and fifteenth and eighteenth century treasures, all stoutly crated, rest upon a foreign soil.

There is an old red barn at Windsor Farms the stalls of which bear the deep imprints of horse shoes long since rusted away. On the outside it resembles a hundred thousand old barns in the country. Whoever pushes into the interior sees immediately that it is unlike any other upon the earth. It is the quaintest studio in the world.

For in this barn does the architect assemble his precious material for placement in or on Virginia House. For instance, carpenters have just rebuilt therein the handsome staircase of Warwick Priory, with hand-carved newel post—a newel post that is covered with clusters of grapes cut in the wood by Saxon craftsmen centuries ago. The Welsh mantel is there, and so are rare old panels. American antique hunters have been known to drool their delight upon seeing it all and weep in the realization that it was not for sale.

THE architect has insisted that Virginia House is not to be cramped. It will cover much ground. The visitor must be able to glimpse it afar down the wide avenue as he drives through the main street of the village. He must see the frayed roof, the stained stone, the discolored sixteenth century glass over a real English hedge, the very first to be grown in America, according to Mr. Morse. Alongside the Sulgrave Manor section must be Madam's Close, the garden where Washington's English ancestors used to walk when all the New World was young. And sloping down toward the river, with the hillock called King Arthur's Seat on the left, must be a wide park, adorned with hedges, boxwood and the ancient lily pond.

In the Weddell quarters the son of the Richmond rector will establish the finest collection of first editions by Virginia authors in the world. In every country there are men today seeking those first editions for him. He wants books by Father Tabb and James Branch Cabell and Thomas Nelson Page as well as writers of Colonial Virginia. This library will become the property of the Historical Society when Mr. and Mrs. Weddell die.

In the Sulgrave wing the Historical Society will exhibit its precious portraits, papers, relics. In a waterproof, fireproof basement newspapers that date back to Colonial Williamsburg—the American Court of St. James—will be deposited. Dr. William G. Stanard, the secretary for many years, will have an office in a small room over the entrance hall.

"This is the only historical society in the United States," said Mr. Morse in a recent interview, "which truly represents a connecting link between the history of England and the history of America."

A great quantity of relics of the Washington family are owned by the society. They will have places of honor in Virginia House.

The student of English architecture will be sure he is looking at Sulgrave when he sees Virginia House. There will be that porch of fine Tudor detail; and spindles that bear the three stars and two stripes, said to have been the foundation of the United States flag. A fireplace inside will be exactly like Sulgrave Manor's, six feet wide, with closets on the side where rushes were dried. The panels will be made in England and will be identical with those in Sulgrave, even to the tiny knotholes.

Lastly, in a gable over the entrance, will be the coat of arms of Queen Elizabeth. It will not be faked. The Queen once visited Sulgrave, and therefore the owner was enabled under the law to place her coat of arms in the wall. The same Queen visited the fishmonger's son, Thomas Hawkins, a new-rich with splendid ideas of art. Hawkins put her coat of arms over a window of his home. That self-same coat of arms will adorn Virginia's replica of Sulgrave.

"We wanted to give Virginia something lasting," said Mrs. Weddell to the writer. "We wanted to give Virginia something appropriate, something beautiful. I believe we have."

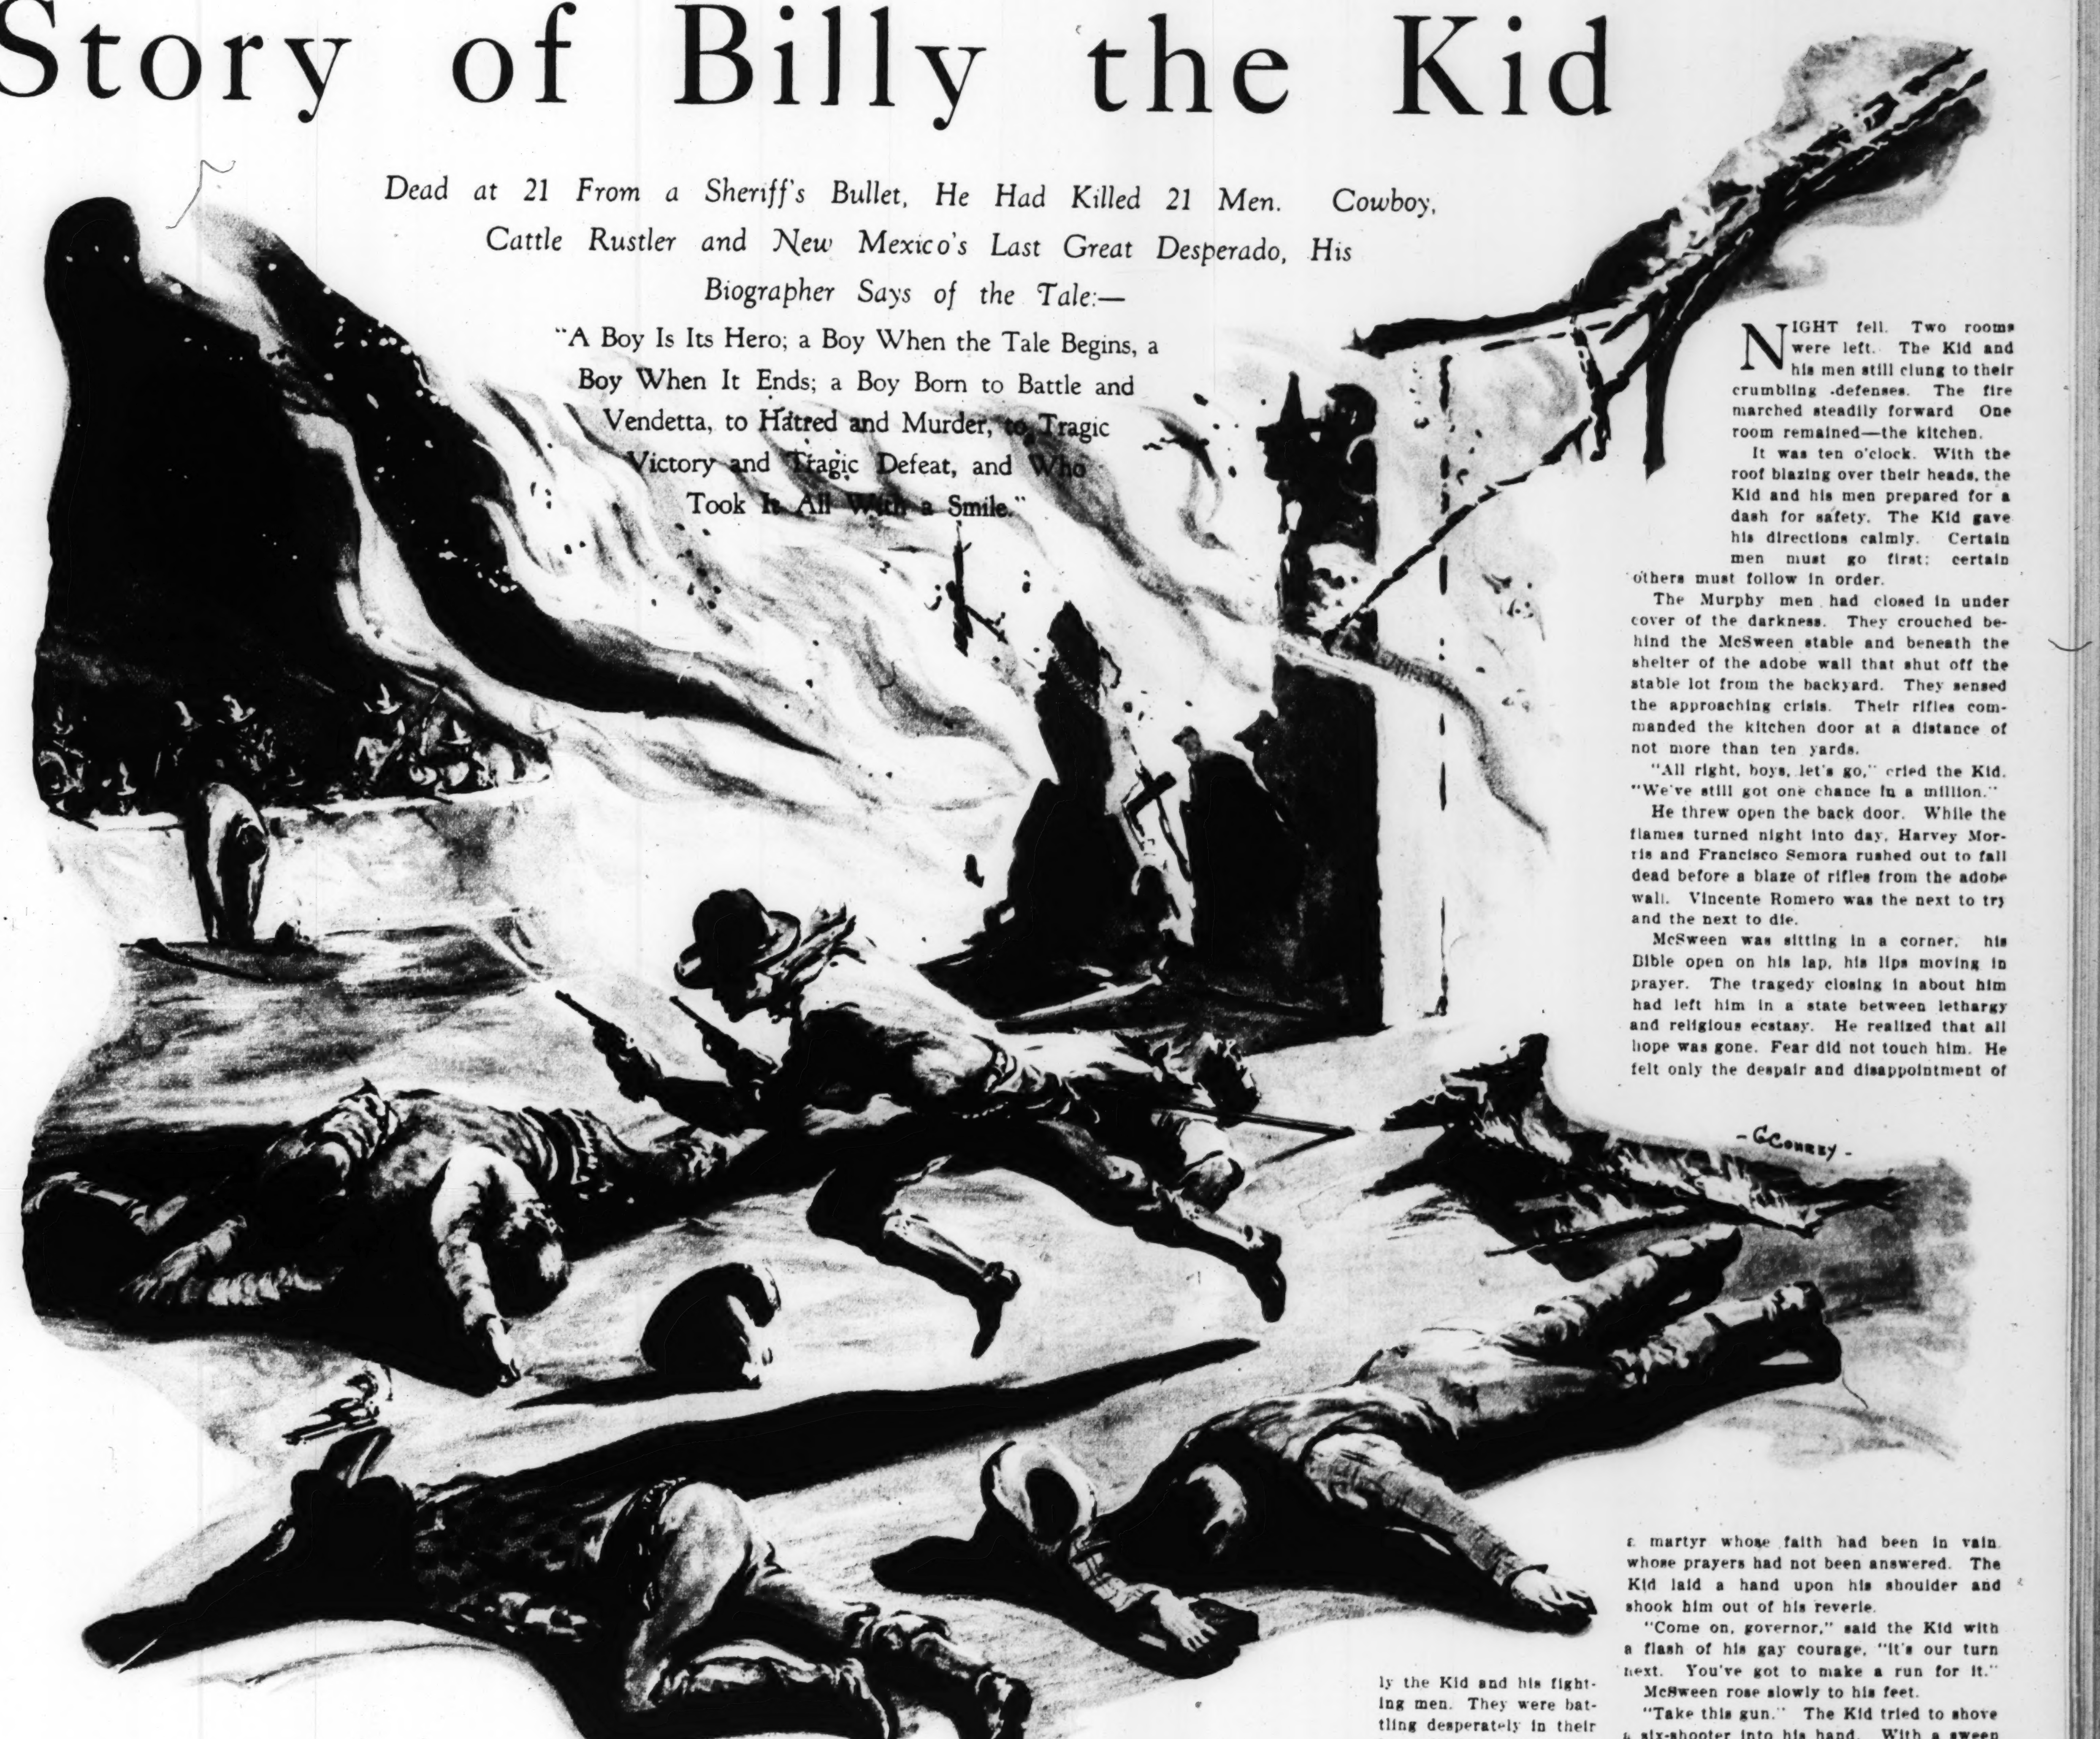
The Story of Billy the Kid



Dead at 21 From a Sheriff's Bullet, He Had Killed 21 Men. Cowboy, Cattle Rustler and New Mexico's Last Great Desperado, His Biographer Says of the Tale:—

"A Boy Is Its Hero; a Boy When the Tale Begins, a Boy When It Ends; a Boy Born to Battle and Vendetta, to Hatred and Murder, to Tragic Victory and Tragic Defeat, and Who Took It All With a Smile."

The escape from the burning McSween home.

THIS account of the life and death of William H. Bonney, known as Billy the Kid, is taken by permission from Walter Noble Burns' book, "The Saga of Billy the Kid." It will be printed in three parts in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine. The book is published by Doubleday, Page & Co.

The author, a distinguished journalist and brilliant writer, spent a year in the Billy the Kid country seeking out the facts which had largely been covered by the dust of traditon. This book is the first authentic history of the most notorious and murderous of New Mexico's bad men.

PART ONE.

By WALTER NOBLE BURNS

BILLY the Kid's legend in New Mexico seems destined to a mellow and genial immortality like that which gilds the misdeeds and exaggerates the virtues of such ancient rogues as Robin Hood, Claude Duval, Dick Turpin and Fra Diavolo. From the tales you hear of him everywhere, you might be tempted to fancy him the best-loved hero in the State's history. His crimes are forgotten or condoned, while his loyalty, his gay courage, his superman adventures are treasured in affectionate memory.

Men speak of him with admiration, women extol his gallantry and lament his fate. A rude balladry in Spanish and English has grown up about him, and in every placeta in New Mexico, Mexican girls sing to their guitars songs of Billy the Kid. A halo has been clapped upon his scapegrace brow. The boy who never grew old has become a sort of symbol of frontier knight-errantry, a figure of eternal youth riding forever through a purple glamour of romance.

William H. Bonney was born in New York City, November 23, 1859. He was killed when he was 21 years of age, and in the meantime had killed 21 men, "not including Mexicans and Indians." When he was three years old his parents moved to Coffeyville, Kan., where Billy's father died. His mother moved to Silver City, N. M. By the time Billy was 17, he was an acceptable cowhand and remarkably accurate with his revolvers. The "Lincoln County war" came on, a notable conflict between two factions of cattle people headed by Alexander A. McSween and Major L. G. Murphy, formerly of the United States Army. The basis of the "war" was the continued stealing of cattle from John Chisum, a famed cattle baron of South Spring Ranch. Billy the Kid allied himself with an Englishman named Tunstall. Tunstall was killed by men of the Murphy faction, and Billy the Kid, in revenge, killed two of Murphy's adherents. This brought about what might be considered a general state of war in the cattle country and brings the story to the point where, in the early autumn of 1878, McSween's men are besieged in McSween's house in Lincoln, a ring of Murphy riflemen around them.

THE hush of a July night lay upon Lincoln. The dark, silent town seemed asleep under the peaceful stars

But behind the bastion-like walls of the Murphy store warlike preparations were toward. Within the deep seclusion of Murphy's old office Sheriff Peppin held council with Jimmy Dolan, Marion Turner, John Kinney, Andy Boyle, Old Man Pearce, and other leaders of the Murphy faction.

"We've got the Kid at last," declared Peppin. "There ain't no way for him to get away. We'll get him this time, dead or alive."

The Kid, with half-a-dozen other McSween partisans, fresh from the fight at Chisum's South Spring Ranch, had ridden in a few hours before and taken refuge in the McSween residence.

"There's enough of us to rush the McSween house," advised Dolan.

"No use in that," cautioned Kinney. "We got the Kid dead to rights without takin' no chances."

With Dolan and Kinney, Turner slipped into the bottom land along the Bonito River and crept up behind the McSween barn. There, standing sheltered from possible shots, he set up a lusty hailing cry. To this halloo, the Kid responded through a crack in the kitchen door.

"We've got you surrounded, Kid," shouted Turner. "If you make a fight, we'll kill you all to the last man. If you'll surrender, we'll promise you won't be hurt."

Something that sounded suspiciously like laughter came from the crack in the kitchen door.

"It's no joke Kid. You better surrender."

"Surrender to a bunch of hounds like you? What six kinds of a fool do you think I am?"

"We'll guarantee you protection."

"I'll stay where I am and protect myself. If you want me, come and get me."

Out of the east end of town came a rumble of horses' hoofs, a chorus of zipping yells, scattered shots. Faction Leader McSween had ridden into town from his camp on the Ruidosa with a tail of thirty-five Mexican fighting men at his back.

Under cover of the night, McSween and several of his Mexican allies slipped into the McSween home without drawing enemy fire and joined the Kid, who welcomed them with no little enthusiasm.

The Murphy forces held the Murphy store and hotel. The buildings were in the west end of town within fifty yards of the McSween house, the hotel on the same side of the street, the store on the other. High on the hillsides on the south side of the canon, Murphy sharpshooters commanded the entire village.

The McSween men under Chavez garrisoned the Montana and Patron houses in the east end of Lincoln. Charlie Bowdre, George Coe and Hendry Brown were posted in the McSween store, a little to the west of the McSween house. With McSween in his home were Billy the Kid, Tom O'Folliard, Jim French, Doc Skurlock, Harvey Morris, Francisco Semora, Ignacio Gonzales, Vincente Romero, Jose Chavez y Chavez, and Ighenio Salazar. Three women also were in the house—Mrs. McSween, Mrs. Elizabeth Shield, her sister, and Mrs. Ealy, wife of the Presbyterian minister whom McSween had brought out to Lincoln from the East and who held services every Sunday in the McSween store.

WITH the long vendetta about to break in murderous battle climax, McSween still leaned upon the Lord for divine intervention that would avert the tragedy that was now inevitable. He spent the night in prayer. On his knees in his room, he talked with God as if face to face and pleaded for the miracle. "Touch, O Lord, the hearts of our enemies with Thy goodness and mercy. . Guide them in the better way Send down Thy blessing of peace."

Came a crash of rifles from the Murphy clan shooting from the windows of the Murphy store and hotel. The balls thudded against the adobe walls of the McSween house and tore ragged holes through the window shutters, bursting the panes and scattering fragments of glass over the floor.

A look of pained surprise for an instant swept McSween's face. He had prayed for peace. Bullets were his answer.

"All right, governor," said Billy the Kid, good-naturedly. "Go ahead and trust in the Lord. The rest of us'll trust in our six-shooters."

The battle developed quickly all along the line. While the Murphy forces hidden in store and hotel concentrated their fusillades on the McSween home, their sharpshooters, ranging along the hills at the south side of the canon, poured an incessant fire upon Chavez's men in the Montana and Patron houses.

"Kind of a tame fight," remarked the Kid as the day of random firing drew toward a close.

IN VIEW of McSween's attitude, the Kid had apprehensions that the battle might lengthen into a siege. After darkness had fallen, he brought indoors two barrels of rain water standing in the sheltered court. These would provide the little garrison with enough water for drinking and cooking purposes for a number of days.

Among the rocks on the steep hill that rose above the Montana and Patron houses crawled Lucio Montoya and Charlie Crawford, crack riflemen of the Murphy faction. They settled into position side by side behind two huge boulders. Below them in the early morning sunlight lay the silent town, its long, winding street blocked and striped with the shadows of houses, trees and fence posts.

They began to fire steadily. For hours they kept it up. Through the windows and doors of the two houses that sheltered Chavez's men crashed the bullets of the concealed marksmen.

Fernando Herrera of Chavez's command was famed among his people for his skill with a rifle. For a long time he scrutinized the hillside through a pair of field glasses. At every shot, Crawford and Montoya for an instant showed head and shoulders at exactly the same spot from behind their boulders.

Through a crack in the back door of the Montana house Herrera drew a bead with his long-range buffalo rifle upon the spot at which Crawford would appear. He waited for a moment with his finger on the trigger. Crawford's rifle worked into position from behind the rock. His right shoulder appeared. His head came into view as he sighted along the barrel. Whang! Herrera's bullet went singing upward across the intervening space of nine hundred yards—afterward measured. It struck the hammer of Crawford's gun, veered at a slight angle, and ploughed through his body, breaking his back. Crawford's yell echoed up and down the canon. He catapulted into the air, tumbled off a ledge, and came rolling and plunging down to the bottom of the hill. He fetched up on a level space at the edge of a field of standing corn which shielded him from sight of his enemies. There, wounded to the death, he lay in the broiling sun all day. He was dead when a searching party found him at night.

Montoya was Herrera's next problem and he solved it in the same way.

EARLY the third day of the fighting, Mrs. Juanita Mills stole across the hills nine miles to Col. N. A. M. Dudley at Fort Stanton, urging him to stop the bloodshed. At the head of Negro troops he rode to Lincoln and greeted his friend Sheriff Peppin. Then he summoned McSween to his side and ordered the McSween faction to cease firing. Jimmy Dolan took advantage of the few minutes' truce to set fire to McSween's home. The soldiers rode some distance away—and as fire burned out the McSween refuge the Murphy forces resumed their shooting

Mrs. McSween dared death, walked through a hail of bullets to appeal to the soldiers for aid—and failed. Twice she failed, and returned to her home where with the help of Billy the Kid she tried to save her cherished piano—the only one in New Mexico.

She threw herself upon the stool at the keyboard. She still had hope—hope in Billy the Kid and his fighting men. They were battling desperately in their last ditch. A war-song might inspire them to still more heroic courage. It might turn defeat into victory. With one last brave swan-song before the ultimate silence, the piano might yet save the day. At once she plunged into the stirring bars of "The Star-Spangled Banner." Facing death, the men felt the lift and thrill of the old battle hymn. "O say, can you see. . . what so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming . . . broad stripes and bright stars through the perilous fight . . . so gallantly streaming. . ." The Kid whistled the tune. Tom O'Folliard beat time with his six-shooter. Far through the noise of battle and the swish of flames, the music sounded in half the homes in Lincoln. It rang against the canon walls like a challenge. It carried its message of courage and defiance to the enemy whose bullets thumped like an obligato against the tottering walls and plunged with sibilant uproar among the smoking embers 'does the Star-Spangled Banner still wave o'er the land" . . . The music died in the crash of a flaming fragment of the roof

"YOU'D better hunt safety now Mrs. McSween," said Billy the Kid "Go to the house of some friend while there's still time. We'll do the best we can. We may get out of this yet After dark, we'll make a break for it."

"Yes," agreed McSween. "While there is still time. Escape for the others will be less difficult if there is no woman here."

"I will not go," the brave woman proclaimed stoutly

"It is best, my dear," answered McSween

He folded her in his arms and kissed her good-by

"Let me stay and die with you," she pleaded.

McSween shook his head solemnly "No, you must go."

Mrs. McSween turned away Her husband drew her back for one last embrace

"God watch over and protect you," he breathed

Broken-hearted and blinded by tears, Mrs. McSween stumbled out of the blazing ruins of her home, through the dense smoke into the road flaming with the sunset, to find safety and shelter at last with her sister and Mrs. Ealy

NIGHT fell. Two rooms were left. The Kid and his men still clung to their crumbling defenses. The fire marched steadily forward One room remained—the kitchen.

It was ten o'clock. With the roof blazing over their heads, the Kid and his men prepared for a dash for safety. The Kid gave his directions calmly. Certain men must go first: certain others must follow in order.

The Murphy men had closed in under cover of the darkness. They crouched behind the McSween stable and beneath the shelter of the adobe wall that shut off the stable lot from the backyard. They sensed the approaching crisis. Their rifles commanded the kitchen door at a distance of not more than ten yards.

"All right, boys, let's go," cried the Kid. "We've still got one chance in a million."

He threw open the back door. While the flames turned night into day, Harvey Morris and Francisco Semora rushed out to fall dead before a blaze of rifles from the adobe wall. Vincente Romero was the next to try and the next to die.

McSween was sitting in a corner, his Bible open on his lap, his lips moving in prayer. The tragedy closing in about him had left him in a state between lethargy and religious ecstasy. He realized that all hope was gone. Fear did not touch him. He felt only the despair and disappointment of a martyr whose faith had been in vain whose prayers had not been answered. The Kid laid a hand upon his shoulder and shook him out of his reverie.

"Come on, governor," said the Kid with a flash of his gay courage, "it's our turn next. You've got to make a run for it."

McSween rose slowly to his feet.

"Take this gun." The Kid tried to shove a six-shooter into his hand. With a sweep of his long arm, McSween brushed the weapon aside. He had remained unarmed throughout the fighting. He would die as he had lived, with no stain upon his soul.

"HIT the trail, old man," shouted the Kid. "Go through that door like a streak of greased lightning. Head for the back fence. Roll over it in the dark. Keep going for the Bonito. And you'll see Mrs. McSween in the morning Good luck."

As if unhearing, McSween drew himself to the full of his imposing height and, with his glazed eyes, swept the broken, flaming walls of what had been his home.

"My home, my wife!" he muttered. "God of my fathers, hast Thou forsaken me?"

Before him was the open door. He strode toward it. For an instant he paused upon the threshold, his Bible clutched to his breast as he gazed upon his ruined dooryard and the three corpses sprawled about it Quietly, head up, he walked out into the red glare of the flames.

"Here I am," he called in a hollow voice. "I am McSween."

A streak of fire leaped from the blackness beyond the adobe wall. A dozen rifles blazed almost simultaneously. Tiny puffs of dust leaped out from McSween's coat. He half-turned, stumbled forward, and fell dead upon his Bible, true to his faith to the last, his hands innocent of man's blood.

"I got him," shouted Bob Beckwith, waving his smoking rifle high above his head. "I got McSween."

A demoniac chorus of yells went up to the sky. The men behind the adobe wall went wild with boisterous joy. They fired a half-dozen wanton shots at McSween's body. Several bullets thudded into the corpse, causing it to jerk as with a spasm. Others splattered earth over the dead face. Then there was silence. The ambushed watchers waited for fresh victims.

Out of the door, one after the other, plunged Tom O'Folliard, Jim French, Doc Skurlock, Jose Chavez y Chavez, Ignacio Gonzales and Ishenio Salazar. Salazar was cut down, dangerously wounded; he lay limp and motionless, feigning death. Gonzales' arm was shattered by a bullet, but he continued his flight. As by a miracle, all but Salazar ran the gauntlet of bullets,

The Bald Hair-Tonic King Weds His Head Bottler

The Fitch Line of March Starts in a Country-Town Barber Shop, Passes Through a Factory in a Barn, the Reno Divorce Court, a Missouri Gretna Green, and Over the Automobile Highways Into the East.

HAIR DRESSING

DES MOINES, Iowa.

ROMANCE, like the hair on his head, disappeared for Fred Fitch as the returns from his hair tonic raised him from the role of a small-town Iowa barber to that of a millionaire manufacturer. The romance blossomed again when Fitch, divorced six months ago by his first wife after a six-year separation, married, at Bethany, Mo., his foster daughter, Miss Gertrude Westberg, former chief bottle filler in his hair-tonic factory. But his hair, alas, is gone for good.

It is a rocky road to matrimonial happiness that Fitch has followed. It begins in the country-town barber shop where his first wife, Mrs. Lettie Fitch, says she passed out bottles of tonic to customers with one hand and held the babies' bottles with the other. There is the story of a third woman in Arkansas. Then to the great Fitch factory, where the latest Mrs. Fitch once presided over the bottles. Then Reno, where Fitch took up residence after his wife began her divorce suit, and where he filed a countersuit. Now the new bride and bridegroom have left for the wild and wicked East. While the clang of the wedding bells issues from Bethany the clank of shampoo bottles issues steadily from the Des Moines factory.

While the domestic life of Fred W. Fitch was not as smooth as those egglike domes his invention is said to turn to a semblance of a mossy bank, the wedding in Bethany, Mo., not long ago, is indication that a warm heart beats a few degrees south of his brow, whose baldness has defied the restoring qualities of his tonic.

Back in 1892 Freddie Fitch, local barber of Liscomb, Iowa, acquired a wife, and at intervals thereafter he acquired four children. Also, he acquired an ambition to make a million dollars or so, and started experimenting with tonics.

Then the family moved to Boone, Iowa where Freddie Fitch again became the town barber and started a "hair-tonic factory," in an old barn. As to just what this factory was like people do not agree, but it certainly was not much.

"I remember when I sold hair tonic from house to house," Mrs. Fitch later told the jury.

"It's all rubbish that my wife sold our tonic by peddling it in a baby carriage," Mr. Fitch retorted, speaking through the press from Reno, Nevada. "She always obstructed the business and I even had to do the housework."

"It was my idea to begin with," countered the wife, "and I have always taken an interest in the business."

"I was compelled to build the business with my own hands," came back from Reno.

BUT this is getting ahead of the story, which has not yet taken the bald-headed hair-grower out to Reno.

Back in the sleepy little Iowa town Freddie Fitch cut hair and somebody—either his wife or he himself or their maid, Gertrude Westberg—took care of the four children, did the housework, made the tonic in the old barn and sold it. Then Fitch took to the road, selling the tonic in nearby towns.

This description of Fitch and his factory comes from Boone:

"Fitch was a barber, and opinions differ as to whether he was a good one, or just average. He operated a small shop. He didn't hide his light under a bushel. As he shaved he talked, barberlike, of his ambitions. And he was not unique—his ambition was to make a million or so.

"At times he was modest in the measure of his dreams—he'd be willing to forego the million to make enough to pay immediate bills. That was in the barbering-manufacturing days.

"The factory was on old barn, a rickety old barn. The rent on it was not large enough to break a bank, but, if reports are true, it was enough to puzzle the dandruff-cure maker now and then.

"For the history of the Fitch fortune is that of most industrial fortunes. It takes time to convince people that any preparation will save the hair, but Fitch was a shrewd one and knew that if folks could be induced to massage the scalp and clean it with alcohol and such, it would tend to stave off the signs of old age creeping into the crown.

"He knew also that they wouldn't massage unless they were cajoled into doing it.

"Fitch himself went about trying to sell the preparation to barbers, and old settlers recall that Mrs. Fitch went about selling the preparation to householders in addition to taking care of her four babies and the home, which was of a modest nature.

"After awhile Dame Fortune began to smile on the Fitch barn and when the business was moved away from Boone it was a big one, with traveling salesmen and everything."

THAT is the naive story that the Boone people tell of how Fred W. Fitch and his demure wife came to Boone, produced more hair tonic from the Iowa corn soil than the local bootlegger could get whisky, and took Gertrude Westberg to Des Moines with them.

Gertrude's hair no longer hung down her back. She had stopped washing dishes, was looked upon as an unadopted foster daughter, and she became head bottler in the new factory erected at Des Moines.

But in the meantime all was not well in the private affairs of Mr. Fitch, whose hair-tonic route to youth was supposed to do so much toward bringing harmony in other homes.

In fact, Mrs. Fitch hinted that he raised more trouble than he did heads of hair. She claimed that in 1909 she barely dragged him away from a woman, not named, in Arkansas, and some six years ago the couple separated, he opening what is believed to be the most sumptuous bachelor apartment in the State.

This apartment came in for many unsavory charges when Mrs. Lettie Fitch brought suit in 1922 and in lieu of a divorce was given a trust guarantee of $600 a month.

Fitch declared that his wife had suddenly become high-toned, wanted to be known as a woman of affairs, and that she contended making hair tonic was a filthy business and lost her the esteem of her friends.

He apparently did not think that hair tonic was filthy at all, and she declared that his discontent with her was due "to his own excesses and indiscretions," and, furthermore, she did not knock a wine glass out of his hand at a banquet in Niagara.

The tonic king, however, painted a picture of the way in which his wife wasted their slim earnings on the W. C. T. U.—an expenditure that her husband apparently did not approve.

"The business was developed in spite of the opposition of Mrs. Fitch," he said, "and then she maintained that it just grew as a matter of course and would go on indefinitely.

"She was demanding, exacting, suspicious, unreasonable. She demanded that her relatives be given employment in the factory."

Things went along for another three years, when, in April, 1925, Mrs. Fitch declared that her husband had gone to Reno, Nevada, to establish a residence there, that he had transferred the bulk of the Fitch stock to their former maid, head bottler and foster daughter, Miss Westberg, and that the whole thing was a conspiracy to deprive her of the antidandruff, pro-hair-growing business that she helped to build up.

It was charged that 1810 shares of the Fitch factory stock had been transferred to Miss Westberg, and that since Mr. Fitch then owned only 372 shares, it was pretty evident that Miss Westberg was boss of the factory—providing the allegations were true.

Fitch said they were not. The transfer was never actually made, he declared, and was in any event but a protection for the children while he was in the West.

But in spite of his assurance, officials were hunting Miss Westberg all over the Middle West. They were trying to serve a writ of attachment on those shares.

"The last I heard of her she was in Kansas City," said the hair tonic king from the Nevada desert. "She was stopping with relatives there and trying to avoid being prosecuted by my wife. Mrs. Fitch has caused her arrest in the past on trivial matters."

But he who made heads luxuriant was not suffering much in Reno.

"Reno is a great country," he is quoted as saying. "The climate is dry, but the throat—well, you know what I mean.

"It is easy to get it out there. All you have to do is drive 'over the hump' into California and put your foot on the bar rail."

NEITHER did he object to the headlines that were given to remarks his wife made about his mode of living, and every retort he made about the way she dragged down the business.

When his wife sued him for $175,000 permanent alimony he declared that he did not have it, and that to take it from the factory would cripple the business.

He declared that he might live in Reno forever—and soon after he had lived there six months and claimed to have established a residence, a counter suit was filed, denying the right to bring action in Polk County, Iowa, where he claimed to be no longer a resident.

The petition was denied, however, and after the case had dragged through the fall it came to a sudden close in December with a decision in favor of Mrs. Fitch. A 13-page document sworn to by Fitch the previous July, in which he accused his wife of having nagged when he was late to meals and failing to appreciate his doing the family wash, did not avert the separation and Judge Lester L. Thompson approved a settlement out of court.

And a few days later things looked rosy.

The Board of Trustees met again, with all three stockholders—that is, all three once belligerent stockholders — apparently amicable.

Fred W. Fitch was re-elected president of the company. He declared that the divorce was a thing of the past, and January 8 the house of Fitch was officially no longer divided against itself.

But that was not all.

Down across the Missouri line, where the Jefferson highway breaks into the land of more lax marriage laws, stands Bethany, with a savor of Dixie about its quiet old buildings and a savor of matrimony about its clerk's crowded office.

DES MOINES couples dash down there for sudden splicings. On the morning of June 2, when the marry month was but under way, Mr. Fitch, Miss Westberg, the Rev J. W. Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Muehle came sweeping down on the sleepy village in a giant green motor car.

By noon another house of Fitch was started on its way back to Des Moines.

Arrived here, the couple stopped at that sumptuous apartment in the same building where Miss Westberg had been head bottler, in that same apartment that has caused Mrs. Fitch so much worry, and on June 4 they started out, first for the Fitch cottage at Clear Lake and thence to New York.

As they swung north across the State they passed through Boone, Iowa, where the millionaire boon to the bald had been a humble barber, and where his pretty wife had been maid-of-all-work, foster daughter and first assistant in the barn-size Fitch factory. A brief call was made on Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Westberg, parents of the bride.

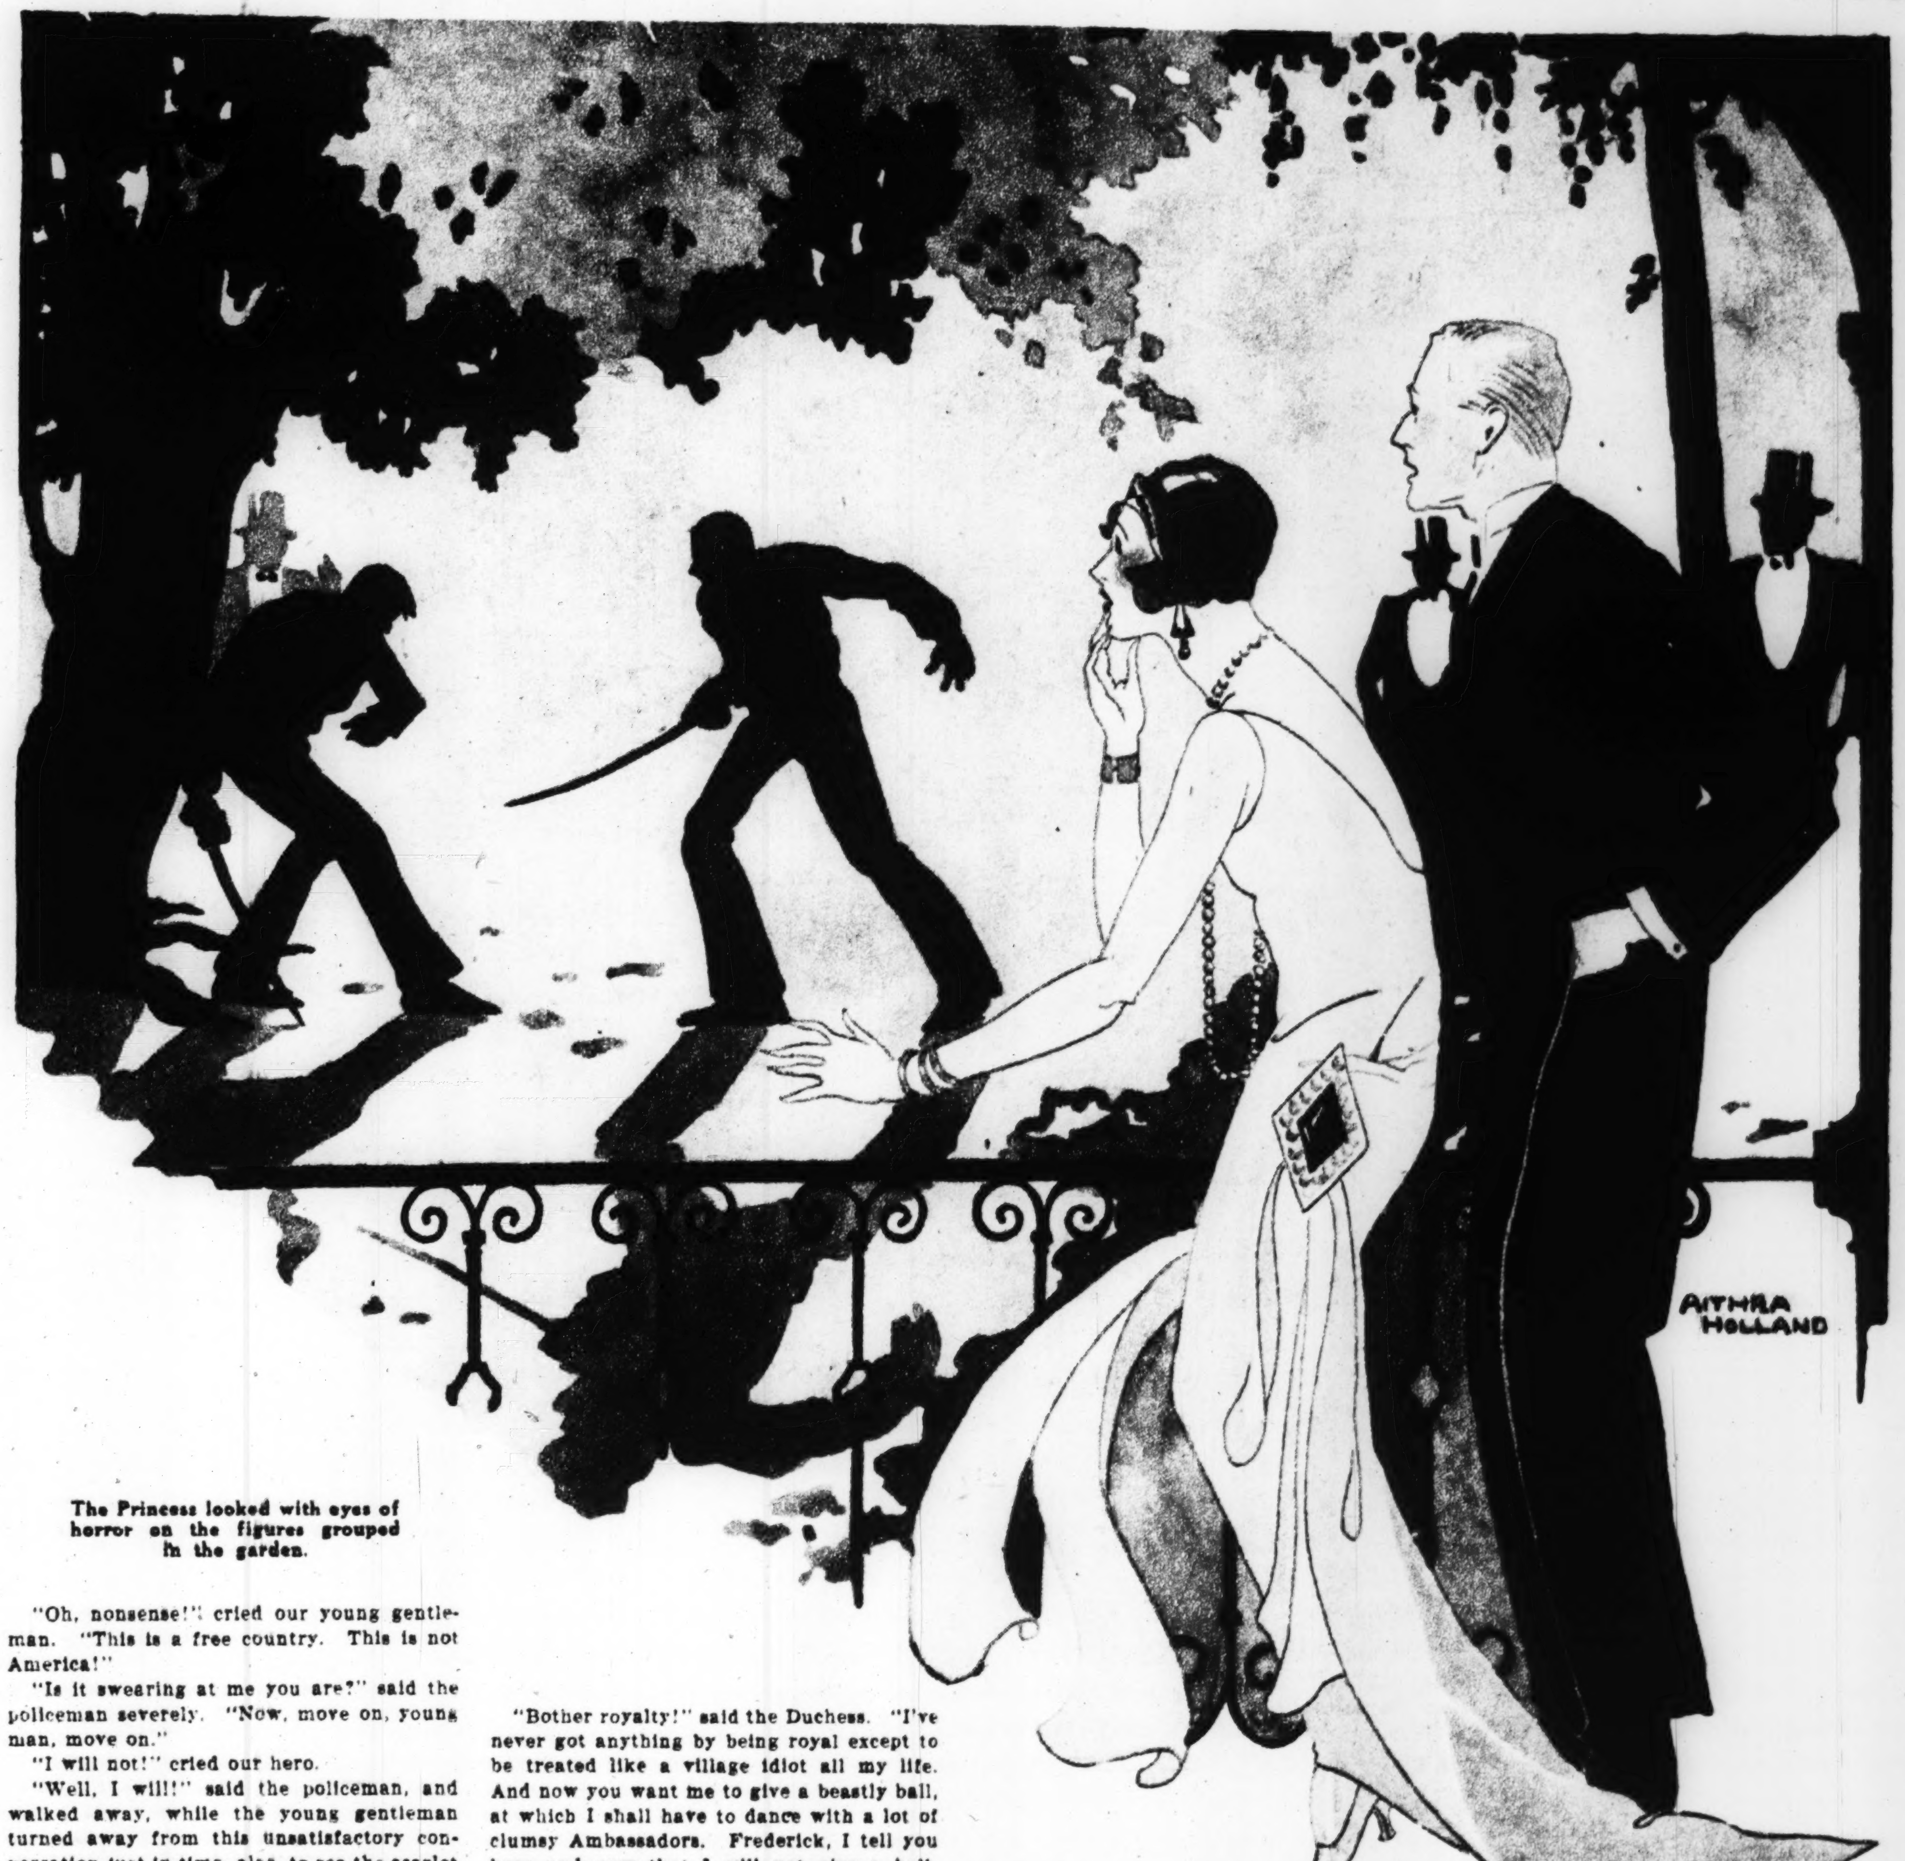
THE DUEL IN THE DARK

—By—

MICHAEL ARLEN

How a Ball Was Given in London for the Beautiful Princess Baba of Valeria, and the Sinister Purpose Thereof. With the Strange Demeanor of the Grand Duke Toward Two of His Guests.

Rival Suitors Battled in the Garden, the Noise of Their Combat Muffled by the Dance Music, While Adventure and Moonlight and High Romance Befell the Gay Young Princess Babá.



The Princess looked with eyes of horror on the figures grouped in the garden.

ONCE upon a time in London there was a young gentleman who had nothing better to do one afternoon, so what should he do but take a walk? Now, he did not set out as one on pleasure bent, but with an air of determination that would have surprised his friends, saying between his teeth: "I have always heard that walking is good exercise. I will try a bit." However, he had not walked far before circumstances compelled him to abate his ardor, for it was an afternoon in July and quite warm for the time of the year.

Eastward our young gentleman strode, by Sloane street, through Knightsbridge, across Hyde Park corner; he strode even from Chelsea to Mayfair; for he was by way of being a writer and lived in Chelsea, whereas his people lived in 'Mayfair and understood nothing.

Now, while we are about it, we may as well add that the young writer's father was a Baronet who had for some years been a perfect martyr to bankruptcy, and had called his son to him on this afternoon to impress upon him the fact that in future he, the young writer's father, could not and would not be a victim to his, the young writer's, extravagances. So much, then, for the young writer's father; but with himself we must continue yet a while, although what this tale is really about is a hand and a flower.

FOR that is what he chanced to see the afternoon we tell of, a hand and a flower; and since it was inconceivable that the hand could belong to a man, so white and delicate it was, he put two and two together and decided that it could only belong to a lady.

Now, the sun was so high and bright over London that day that the voices of Americans were distinctly heard rising above the polished tumult of the Berkeley Hotel, crying plaintively for ice; and when at last our young writer came into Mayfair he was grateful for the cool quiet streets, but being still in some discomfort from the effects of the heat on his person, he thought to turn into Mount Street Gardens and rest awhile beneath the trees.

This, however, he was not to do that afternoon; for it chanced that he had not walked far toward that pleasaunce when, at that point of the pretty quarter of Mayfair where South street becomes North street and Grosvenor square is but a step in the right direction, he was drawn to admire a great house that stood in a walled garden. Quite a country house this looked like, and right in the heart of the town, so that our young gentleman thought: "Now, I wonder whose house that is? Ah, to be rich! Or, at least, to be so attractive that rich people would take one to their hearts on sight!"

In this wise, relishing the deplorable charms of money, he had stared long over the wall at the house in the garden had not something happened which instantly gave his fancies a prettier turn; for what should he suddenly espy through the curtain of leaves but a hand drooping from one of the upper windows, and what should he espy in the hand but a scarlet flower?

Now, that made a delightful picture of innocence, of dreaming youth and fond imagining, and not at all the sort of thing you see every day, especially in Mayfair, where motor cars grow from the cracks in the pavements and ladies recline in slenderness on divans, eating scented macaroons.

PRESENTLY a policeman happened by, and the young gentleman thought to turn from the wall and greet him in a friendly way, with a view to further conversation.

"And what," he asked, "is the name of the lady who lives in the house with the garden?"

"Young sir," said the policeman severely, "that will do from you."

"I beg your pardon!" said the young writer with spirit.

"Granted," said the policeman severely.

"But this is absurd! I am an honest man and I have asked you an honest question."

The policeman unbent his expression so far as to say, with a significant look at the great house in the walled garden: "Young sir," said he, "there danger lies for the likes of you. For the likes of her is not for the likes of you."

"Oh, nonsense!" cried our young gentleman. "This is a free country. This is not America!"

"Is it swearing at me you are?" said the policeman severely. "Now, move on, young man, move on."

"I will not!" cried our hero.

"Well, I will!" said the policeman, and walked away, while the young gentleman turned away from this unsatisfactory conversation just in time, alas, to see the scarlet flower drop from the white fingers; and the hand was withdrawn.

Now, such was the effect of the hand and the flower on the young writer's susceptible mind that he quite forgot to go and see his father, who thereupon cut him off with a shilling, which he sent to the young writer in the form of postage stamps. But the occasion was not without some profit, albeit of the spiritual sort, to the young man; for that very night he dreamed he was kissing that very hand, and who shall say that that was all he dreamed, for surely he is a sorry young man who cannot kiss more than a lady's hand in a dream.

THE court chronicles of the Grand Duchy of Valeria report the following conversation as having taken place between the reigning Duke and his consort. That the conversation took place in London is undoubtedly due to the fact that the royal Duke and his Duchess were at the time on a state visit to that capital, with a view to taking a turn around the Wembley Exhibition:

"We will give a ball," said His Highness, the Hereditary Grand Duke of Valeria. "In fact, we must give a ball. And everyone in London will come to it."

"Why should they?" said Her Highness.

"Now, try not to be disagreeable, my dear. I have no idea why they should, but I am positive they will. They always do."

"But, Frederick, what is the matter with you tonight? Why do you want to give a ball, since you cannot dance? Upon my word, if I danced like you I should be ill at the very idea of a ball! So be sensible, my love, and go to sleep again."

"Now, try not to be unpleasant, Ethelberta. You do not seem to understand that people in our position must every now and then give a ball. That is undoubtedly what balls are for, that people in our position should give them. I have worked out the matter very carefully."

"Then you are quite wrong, my love. Balls are for something quite different. I assure you that I have also worked out the matter very carefully. Balls are for English people to give, Americans to pay for and Argentines to dance at."

"Now, try not to be tiresome, my dear. It will seem extremely peculiar in us not to give at least one ball while we are in London. The diplomatic corps will not fail to remark our ill-timed economy. Do you forget that we are royalty?"

"Fiddlededee!" said the Duchess.

"Now," said the Duke, "try not to be"—

"Bother royalty!" said the Duchess. "I've never got anything by being royal except to be treated like a village idiot all my life. And now you want me to give a beastly ball, at which I shall have to dance with a lot of clumsy Ambassadors. Frederick, I tell you here and now that I will not give a ball. And if you want to know my reasons for not giving a ball, they are, briefly, as follows."

They followed.

"Whereas," said His Highness, "my reasons for wishing to give this confounded ball are not entirely social. Our daughter"——

"You are not going to pretend, my love, that the happiness of our only daughter is influencing you in the least! You will dare to pretend that, Frederick, considering that ever since we have been in London you have kept the poor child locked in her room."

"You know very well," said the Duke hotly, "that we both decided that in the circumstances"——

"Well, I think it's a shame," said the Duchess, "keeping the poor child locked in her room day in and day out! And all that will happen will be that no one will marry her at all and then where are we?"

"Ethelberta!" cried His Highness, leaping from the bed and looking sternly down at her. "I did not think you could carry levity so far. Woman, would you compromise with our honor and the honor of Valeria? Understand this: We are in England, at considerable expense—to avenge a mortal insult to our honor. Woman, would you have our innocent daughter be spurned by the villain who compromised her?"

"These are strong words!" said the Duchess.

"I feel strongly about it," said the Duke. "Ethelberta, this English Lord must die!"

"ALL English Lords must die, my love, in due course. It is a law of nature. Now, come back to bed."

"I have worked the matter out very carefully, and that is why I am giving this ball. We cannot kill this coward out-of-hand by hiring some low assassin, for he is, after all, a gentleman. And, besides, in this confounded country," His Highness continued warmly, "you cannot fire a revolver without every policeman in the neighborhood wanting to know why you did it. Therefore, the ball."

"What! Are you going to fire revolvers off at our ball? My love, are you sure that will be quite safe?"

"My idea is that the noise of the ball will screen the rattle of musketry. For that purpose I shall engage the most violent saxophone player in the country. I have already taken advice on that point. The firing party will, of course, be in the garden. So now, Ethelberta, you understand why we must give this"——

"Oh, give your rotten ball!" said Her Highness sleepily.

THE red carpet stretched from the doors of the great house in the walled garden to the broad pavement where South street meets North street and Grosvenor square is but a step in the right direction; and up the red carpet walked the flower of England's quality and fashion and the loftiest dignitaries of the church and press. Came, too, all the circumstance of diplomacy and the first among the burgesses.

Not among the last to arrive was my Lord Viscount Quorn, a young nobleman whose handsome looks and plausible address were fated to be as a snare and a delusion to those who were not immediately informed as to his disordered temperament and irregular habits.

Yet, although many a pretty young lady had lived to regret with burning tears the confidence she had been persuaded to misplace in that young gallant's code of chivalry, not a man in England could be found to impugn My Lord's honor; for was he not renowned from Ranleigh to Meadowbrook for his incomparable agility, did not Australian cricketers wince at the mere mention of the name of Quorn, and did any soldier present on the high occasion we tell of wear pinned across his breast braver emblems of gallantry in war?

With him to the Duke's ball came his boon companion, Mr. Woodhouse Adams, a gentleman whose claim to the regard of his familiars was based solidly on the fact that he knew a horse when he saw one; yet so great was his reserve that what he knew when he did not see a horse was a secret which Mr. Woodhouse Adams jealously guarded from even his most intimate friends. On this occasion, however, as they walked up the red carpet to the open doors of the house in the walled garden, Mr. Woodhouse Adams appeared to be unable to control a particular indignation, and presently spoke to the following effect:

"If you ask my opinion, Condor, I think you are putting your jaws into the lion's head."

"I gather," said Lord Quorn, whose nickname took the peculiar form of Condor for reasons which are quite foreign to this story, "that you mean I am putting my head into the lion's jaws. It may be so. But I tell you, Charles, that I am in love with this girl. At last, I am in love. And I am not going to miss the most slender chance of seeing her again—not to speak of my desire to take this unrivaled opportunity of paying my respects to her father with a view to a matrimonial entanglement."

"You're not going to do that!" incredulously cried his friend.

"Almost at once," said Lord Quorn.

"Gentlemen's cloakroom on the left!" said a hussar of Death or Honor.

"Am I speaking to Milord Quorn?" asked a page bearing a salver of gold.

"You are, boy."

"Then I have the honor, Milord, to be the bearer of a note to Milord from my mistress, Her Select Highness the Princess Baba."

"Well, don't shout the glad news all over the cloakroom," said Mr. Woodhouse Adams.

"Go tell Her Highness," said My Lord to the boy, "that I shall beg the honor of the first dance with her."

"Milord, I go!" said the page, and went.

"I don't like that boy," said Mr. Woodhouse Adams.

"THIS note," said Lord Quorn, "touches me very nearly. For in this one line the Princess Baba tells me that she loves me."

"No girl," gallantly admitted his friend, "can say fairer than that."

"It is certainly very encouraging," said My Lord.

"Gentlemen's cloakroom to the right!" said a hussar of Death or Honor.

"Thank you, we've been," said Mr. Woodhouse Adams.

"This way, messieurs!" said Baron Hugo von Musselsaroffsir. "His Highness, the Hereditary Grand Duke of Valeria, will receive you at the head of the stairs."

At the head of the stairs, indeed, His Highness was receiving his guests with all the circumstance of royalty. He said:

"How do you do, Lord Quorn?"

"Thank you, sir, I am very well," returned My Lord.

"And you, Mr. Woodhouse Eves?"

"Adams to you, sir," said that gentleman. "But otherwise I am well, thank you."

"Lord Quorn," His Highness cordially continued, "I am really most pleased that you could accept my invitation."

"You do me too much honor, sir. And may I take it that your courtesy in selecting me for an invitation for your probably enjoyable ball is a sign of your gracious forgiveness?"

"You may, Lord Quorn."

"Then I have the honor, sir, to declare myself, without any reserve whatsoever, to be Your Highness' most obedient servant."

"And I, sir," said Mr. Woodhouse Adams.

"Gentlemen," said His Highness, "you are very kind."

"Your condescension, sir, but points our crudity," protested My Lord. "May I, however, further trespass on your indulgence by asking to be allowed to enroll myself as the humblest among your daughter's suitors?"

"We can talk this matter out more comfortably," said His Highness agreeably, "in my study. Ho, there! Ho, page!"

"Altesse!"

"Conduct Milord Quorn and Mr. Woodhouse Eves to my study, and see to it that they have suitable refreshment. Lord Quorn, I will join you not a moment after I have received my guests."

"I'm not sure I like this study business," said Mr. Woodhouse Adams, as they followed the page through many halls and corridors to a distant part of the house in the walled garden, until at last they were conducted to a quiet-seeming door, and were no sooner within than what appeared to be a regiment of Hussars of Death or Honor had pinioned their arms to their sides.

"This is outrage!" cried My Lord, with very cold eyes.

"GENTLEMEN, you are under arrest," said an officer with moustachios, whose name the chronicler has unfortunately overlooked.

"We're under what?" cried Mr. Woodhouse Adams.

"And you will await His Highness' pleasure in this room," said the officer with the moustachios, but he had no sooner spoken than the Duke entered, followed by a lean young officer with pitiless eyes.

"Altesse!" saluted the Hussars of Death or Honor.

Not so Lord Quorn. "Sir," he cried, "this is outrage and assault on the persons of King George's subjects. Do you forget that you are in London, sir?"

"Silence!" thundered the officer with the moustachios.

"Silence be damned!" cried Mr. Woodhouse Adams. "Your Highness, what can this piracy mean? I wish to lodge a formal complaint."

"Sir, take it as lodged," said His Highness graciously, but it was with lowered brows that he turned to address My Lord.

"Lord Quorn," said he, "it was my first intention to have you shot like a dog. But I have suffered myself to be dissuaded from consigning you to that ignominious fate at the intercession of this gentleman here. I present Captain Count Rupprecht Saxemunden von Maxe-Middengraften."

"Oh, have a heart!" gasped Mr. Woodhouse Adams.

But Lord Quorn, being a much-traveled gentleman, whose ears were hardened against the most surprising sounds, merely said: "How do you do?"

"Your difference will soon be arranged," sternly continued His Highness. "Count Rupprecht has very properly put before me certain reasons which give him an undoubted right to be the agent of your destruction. The course of this night, Lord Quorn, shall see you as a duelist. And I can only hope you have some knowledge of swordsmanship, for Count Rupprecht Saxemunden von Maxe-Middengraften is the first swordsman of Valeria.

"I may add, Lord Quorn, that his engagement to the Princess Baba will be formally announced immediately after your interment, which will take place in a corner of the garden. That is already arranged. Also, your death will be accounted for to the authorities in a satisfactory way.

"MR. WOODHOUSE EVES will, no doubt, act as your second. I will now leave you until such time as the ball is at its height, when there will be little chance of any of my guests being distracted by the ring of steel in the garden. Au revoir, Milord. Count Rupprecht, your arm to the ballroom!"

"Altesse!" saluted the Hussars of Death or Honor.

"And what a mess!" sighed Mr. Woodhouse Adams.

"I'll have to kill that boy," said Lord Quorn thoughtfully.

The dance was not yet at its most furious when the following events happened:

Mrs. Dumbly

By Carol Brown

On the Bathing Beach.

"NOW we can go swimming, Artie," I announced. "All the stores have signs in their windows, 'Bathing Suits One Half Off.' "

"Anyone who goes to the beach knows that without looking in a store window!" he replied. "But I'm glad they admit it."

"How vulgar and horrid of you, Artie," I said. "After you've been trying all summer to get me to go in swimming—telling me it's the cheapest sport we could find—only 50 cents to go to the beach—and after I've spent days and days getting myself ready, going into all the stores and spending so much money and wearing myself completely out! I should think you'd be glad after the way you've raved about beautiful waves and sandy beaches and summer sails!"

"You've seen enough of summer sales," he grumbled. "And anyway, why can't you wear the suit you bought last year?"

"Because it's faded," I explained. "The colors run. I can't swim in my suit when it runs, can I?"

I thought when he saw my suit at the beach he'd forget all his objections—which of course were useless anyway—for it really is a beautiful thing, very simple, just scalloped edges and a belt with a place for a powder puff and rouge in it. But when I joined him on the sand all dressed up he gave me a regular dressing down, for he'd discovered the bill for the swimming outfit in my beach bag.

Looking at me as if I were something horrid he'd caught his foot on when he stepped in the water, he greeted me with "What an awful figure!"

"WHY, Artie Dumbly," I protested, "what a rude remark! You shouldn't think about figures, anyway. It isn't proper! And anyway, Mrs. Tellum says her husband's always raving about my shape and Peg Woodhead says her brother thinks I have a beautiful figure—not that it makes any difference to me—but"—

"I'm not talking about your figure," he interrupted, "I'm talking about the figure at the bottom of this bill. It's awful! Twenty dollars for a thing that's nothing but a skein of yarn!"

"A skein of yarn is valuable according to the shape it's in!" I suggested. But he paid no attention, frowning at the bill with his eyebrows drawn down like two bent fish hooks.

"What's this about silk stockings for two dollars! I thought you said the other day that you had so many silk stockings you didn't know what to do with them!"

"But they were all the wrong color. I can't swim in off color stockings, can I? I wanted some red ones to match my suit and I saw by the ads that stockings are coming down."

"I'll admit they are," he commented foolishly. "Last winter you had them above your knees. Now you look like a Western movie—all great open spaces."

"Artie, you simply shock me," I told him. "As I told you a while ago, I wish you wouldn't notice such things! You shouldn't even think about people's knees!"

"If you think your knees are unworthy of notice why do you leave them uncovered?" he demanded.

"I thought you came out here to swim," I reminded him sharply. "I don't think you have any understanding of women anyway."

And then, to distract his mind from the bill, I called his attention to a picturesque group of people near us. "Look at them," I said. "They're having a jolly time. They don't spend their time arguing."

"That's so," he agreed. "And look at that blonde. Isn't that a stunning get up! Isn't that green suit a peach? Isn't that a picture?"

"I'M simply ashamed of you, Artie," I said, justly angry. "Not that I care how many people you stare at or anything about your taste, but you shouldn't notice people's bathing suits! Of course, that girl is pretty, but isn't it a shame that such a sweet-looking girl has to wear such an awful-looking bathing outfit? I had a suit like that two years ago and threw it away. It's too bad, too, that it's cut so that it makes her look a little thin. She does look like a good girl, though. I wonder what can factory she works in? But anyway, why do you keep staring at those people? I thought you came here to swim!"

"All right," he said, jumping to his feet, "let's go in."

"Good," I answered brightly, "get me my new beach parasol and my beach cape—they're both on the stones over there—and the little beach doll I bought and I'll sit here and watch you."

"I thought you came here to swim," he began.

"Don't be stupid," I said, "look at all those men staring over here. Of course they can't be looking at me and yet there isn't anything here but me—except you."

At that he grabbed my beach cape and actually ran toward me as though he were going to smother me in it.

"Don't put that thing on me," I commanded. But he did and he insisted on my going right in the water with all my new things and all the way home he grumbled about the high price of swimming.

As I said in the beginning, Artie has no understanding of women.

Ring Lardner

His Autobiography.

BY THE employment of methods amounting almost to the so-called third degree, my friends has finally got me to write my autobiography, a task which I shrink from it like Pola from a camera, yet which the doing of which I feel I owe it to my public.

This then is the first installment, but will precede same with a brief acct. of the comical scene in the syndicate offices which culminated in me undertaking to do the work under certain conditions. In the first place I was decoyed into the offices by a letter from the boss saying there was a package waiting there for me from a admirer in Yuma that looked like salt water taffy. This was a hoax and I hadn't no sooner than entered the door when I was bashed in the stomach by some blunt instrument, probably a wardrobe trunk. When I regained conscious I was laying on my back in the gun room while the head of a midiron had been shoved into my mouth with the heel resting vs. the roof of same and the toe on the tongue, and a Mr. Snevily the manager had began to pull my teeth with some blunt instrument. When this had got past the amusing stage I told them I would do what they wanted provided the work was not published prior to my death.

"That suits us," said the boss, "if you'll promise to die by the Fourth of July."

The others took up the refrain:

"If you'll promise to die
By the Fourth of July."

Agreements were then signed and I hurried home to exhume diaries and notes containing the material necessary for a accurate autobiography and will now begin writing it with a determination to stick to facts and to not let the truth be interfered with by a personal modesty never excelled and perhaps only equaled in this generation by, well, maybe Oscar Wilde and Belasco.

Chapter I.

The Birth of a Wonder Man.

THE first week in March,. 1885, was a gala week throughout the civilized world, the United States in general and the latter's great Middle West in particular. In this one week there was an unfounded rumor of a royal betrothal between Queen Victoria and King Gillette; a young Washington dentist, Dr. Ghoul, watched a mixed fivesome tee off at Chevy Chase and predicted that four of them would have pyorrhea; the Lardners of Niles, Mich., announced the birth of a fourteen-pound man child, and almost on the same date twenty-nine years later, or maybe it was 28th. of June, the Archduke Ferdinand was shot down at Sarajevo.

These events occurred before there were telephones or telegraphs and the news of the Lardner boy's birth had to be flashed to the world by runners. Sparing no expense, the parents hired Paavo Nurmi to notify distant relatives and engaged Charlie Paddock for the sprints. In less than two weeks the Niles post office began to be flooded with letters of all kinds, most of them being circulars from strangers advocating the installation of an oil heater. "They pay for themselves in what you save on coal," was the general gist. But there were also more personal letters of which I will take the liberty of printing one from Clarence Mackay:

And one from a travel service company:

"I UNDERSTAND that your little boy is contemplating a trip to Egypt and I am writing to ask if you will not help me to secure his bookings and plan an independent trip for him, if that is what he wants. I supply you with steamship tickets, issue travelers' checks, letters of credit and baggage insurance, etc."

And one from a hotel training school in Washington, saying:

"There is a nation-wide demand for trained men and women in hotels, clubs, restaurants, cafeterias."

Also came a request from Edward Bok for the baby's autograph and a letter from Ray Long, asking for first chance at any short stories the newcomer might write. Excitement ran high and even to this day the first week in March is set aside in Niles as "Have a Baby Week."

As a result of careful living and a strict adherence to the doctor's orders, the child was able to take his first meal at table early in June. Both the haute and demimonde of Niles were asked in and when the dishes had been cleared away, a bath tub was set in the middle of the room and little Ring, au naturel, was bathed in pure alcohol, the guests afterwards dipping pipes into the tub and blowing soap bubbles. This was in the days before they had horses and boats and when you wanted to go from one town to another, you had to take a train.

Anyone penetrating to a secluded conservatory leading from a corner of the ballroom might have espied a young lady sitting at her ease on a bench of cedarwood beneath the dusty and unbalanced looking growth which is sold in civilized countries as a palm tree. The languid young lady's air was that of one who is forlorn, of one who is sad, of one who is so bored, yet decidedly that of one who would not for worlds have her dolor interrupted by the general run of humanity.

Secure in her solitude behind a screen of plants and flowers, our young lady had quite evaded the eye of even the most relentless dancer but for the whisper of her white dress through the leaves. Her throat was unadorned but for a double rope of pearls, while two captive emeralds wept from the tips of her ears. Her hair was tawny, and it glittered like a swarm of bees.

BUT no sudden intruder could have been more surprised to see the Princess Baba sitting alone—for it was she—than was the Princess Baba herself to see, by the merest hazard glance over her shoulder, the curious phenomena of the hands, the feet and the person of a young gentleman forcing himself into the premises through one of the conservatory windows.

She said, sighed, cried: "Oh!"

The intruder said something denoting astonishment, confusion and grief.

"Well!" said the Princess Baba. "To come in by the roof!"

"Sorry," said the young gentleman. "Sorry."

"Sir, what can this mean! It is not by saying sorry that one is excused for housebreaking!"

"Madam," begged the youth, "won't you please allow me to explain?"

"And he calls me madam!" sighed the Princess Baba, with vexation. "Now, I ask you, young man, do I look like a madam?"

He said: "You look divine. You are beautiful. May I sit down?"

"But this is most unusual!" cried the young Princess. "To come to a ball through a window! May I ask, are you a burglar? You certainly do not look like a burglar. Explain yourself, sir!"

"I am a poor writer," quoth our young friend. We, of course, knew that. But the Princess Baba was surprised, protesting: "Oh, come, that must be nonsense! For, firstly, you are rather a dear, and so you can't be poor; and, secondly, you are quite well-dressed, and so you can't be a writer."

"Your nonsense suits my nonsense," said the young gentleman. "Thank you."

"Know, sir author, that I am the Princess Baba of Valeria."

He rose and knelt and said: "Princess! What have I done!"

"Rise, my friend. Men no longer kneel to royalty."

"Princess, what shall I say! Oh, what have I done! How can I apologize for this intrusion!"

The young Princess cried: "Why, here is an idea! You might begin by kissing my hand. I assure you that is quite usual. But, oh, my friend, you must please not kiss my hand while you are kneeling!"

"Princess, this is not the first time I have kissed your hand."

"Oh!" sighed the Princess Baba, and the young writer did his part like a man and a cavalier. She said:

"Not the first time you have kissed my hand? Why, you had never so much as set eyes on me until a moment ago!"

"I have kissed your hand in a dream," said the young writer gravely. And then he told how, one afternoon, he had seen her hand and in her hand a flower, and how he had woven such a web of romance about that hand and flower that he had never a wink of sleep from night to night,

And she made him sit beside her on the bench of cedarwood, telling him of her father and mother and the gay court of Valeria.

And she told how it was to this court that one fine day there came an English Lord with the very best introductions and such very excellent white waistcoats for evening wear as were the envy of every cavalier in Valeria.

"Like this one of mine?" asked the young gentleman, for is he a proper man who will not belittle another by claiming an equal degree of eminence in the sartorial abyss?

"That is not the point," said the Princess Baba, "but the point is that my Lord Quorn, for such was my lover's name, was the handsomest man I ever saw, and I loved him and he loved me and I lost him and he lost me. That may seem a very reasonable combination of events to you, who are young and cynical, but to me it was a matter of the utmost wretchedness. My friend, know that this English Lord had to fly for his life, for a jealous lady of the court had gone to my parents saying he had compromised me."

"Oh, it was quite true!" sighed the Princess Baba.

"The cad!" cried our hero.

"I can't agree with you," said the Princess Baba. "I adore him. I adore him. I adore him. And, oh, I am so very unhappy!"

He rose and knelt and said: "Princess, mayn't I be of some use? Can't I help you? Please command me, for I would die for you."

"At this very moment," she sobbed, "he is very probably either dead or dying, for how can he hope to survive a duel with the best swordsman of Valeria, Captain Count Rupprecht Saxemunden von Maxe-Middengrafen?"

"It certainly does sound rather improbable," said the youth dismally.

"And when it is all over and my lover lies dead—ah, how can I even say it!—my betrothal to his murderer will be formally announced."

"PRINCESS," said he firmly, after a long wait, "I do but owe it to myself to ask you to make a note of the fact that I love you. And it is because I love you that I will do all in my power to save Lord Quorn."

"But, my friend," said she with wide eyes, "however will you manage that?"

"I am just thinking, Princess. But shall we, while I am thinking, dance?"

"What! You would have me dance while my love lies bleeding? I had thought my confidence was placed in a more understanding mind. Ah, listen! Oh, look!"

And with a cry the Princess tore aside the flowers that screened the conservatory windows and both looked down with eyes of horror on the figures grouped in the garden below. Within, the rout was at its height and the saxophone ever raised its frightful cry to the glory of the gods of Africa. Without was silence and the ring of steel.

"Oh, but I can't bear it, I can't bear it!" sobbed the young Princess, holding a cry to her lips with a handkerchief plaintive with scent. The antagonists in the dark garden were plain to see, the whiteness of their vests moving dimly in the darkness; and the tall figure of Lord Quorn was seen to be forced back against a tree-trunk, so that there could be no doubt but that he must presently be run through.

"Oh, have I to watch him die!" cried the young Princess, and was suddenly made to stare incredulously at the youth beside her, for he had whispered in accents of triumph:

"THE Fruit Merchant," by Fred G. Carpenter, which is reproduced by color rotogravure on the cover of this issue of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, was awarded first prize in the first Post-Dispatch St. Louis-in-Color Competition, held last April at the Artists' Guild, and which was open to all St. Louis painters. A corner of the old St. Louis—the St. Louis seldom seen except by those who live there—provides the subject of the picture. Before a little blue-gray building, with an arched window, the Italian fruiterer has set up his stand. A green awning is above, and though the stand itself is in the shade, it casts deeper shadows upon the rich color of the fruits. At the left a Negro woman, her market basket at her feet, eyes the juicy slice of watermelon she has purchased. Children eagerly eye the fruits, and at the right of his little street shop stands the care-free son of Italy. The extreme right affords a glimpse of the sunny street around the corner, the color of the summer gowns of passersby, and a bit of sky, blue and flecked with cloud, above the neighboring attics. The painting is one of the most virile that Mr. Carpenter, an instructor at Washington University School of Fine Arts and a frequent exhibitor here, has done.

"By heaven, I've got an idea, a marvelous idea! You want to be happy, Princess? Then come with me! Come, we will dance through the crowd to the door and then we will see about my plan."

"But what is it, what is it? Why do you keep me in such suspense? Ah, you are cruel!" sighed the Princess Baba. "But you certainly do dance very well. Oh, how I love dancing! But are you sure this is the nearest way to the door? It is so very crowded that I can't see it, but how well you guide. Almost as well as you kiss a lady's hand! But quick, quick, to the door!"

"I am doing my best, Princess, guiding you through this crowd. It is amazing how generously middle-aged people dance these days, denying their elbows and feet to no one who comes near them."

"But my lover dies—the door, the door!" cried the Princess Baba.

"And, by heaven, through it!"

"And now your plan?"

"Ah, you may well ask!" laughed our hero.

THE tall figure of Lord Quorn lay crumpled and inert where he had fallen against the tree-trunk. Only his eyes retained the magic gift of life, and they looked upon the scene with sardonic resignation. Who shall describe what thoughts then passed through the dying gallant's mind? He was mortally wounded.

Count Rupprecht lay stretched on his back a few yards away, the grass about him soaked with the blood that flowed from his pierced lung. He was dead. Above him stood the Duke, silently. Mr. Woodhouse Adams was on his knees beside his dying friend.

"You got him, anyhow," said he. "He'll never know Christmas from Easter again."

"Fluke," sighed Lord Quorn. "I always had the luck."

"Luck, do you call it," cried his friend, "to be killed!"

"It is better to be killed than to die," said Lord Quorn faintly.

His Highness called grimly: "Ho, there! Ho, page!"

"Altesse!"

"Boy, go tell the Princess Baba the issue of the duel. Do not spare the truth. Count Rupprecht lies dead in defense of her honor and the honor of Valeria; and Lord Quorn will shortly be answering to God for his sins. And, further, tell the Princess that she is permitted to say farewell to her lover. Begone!"

"Thank you very much," sighed Lord Quorn.

But the page was not gone above a moment before he was returned, saying breathlessly:

"Altesse, I bear this message from the Platinum-Stick-in-Waiting: The Princess Baba was seen leaving the house a few minutes ago in a hired vehicle, and with her was a young gentlemap with an unknown face and utterly devoid of decorations. Her Highness left word behind her with the attendant of the gentlemen's cloakroom to the effect that she could so little bear to await the issue of a duel in which her heart was so deeply engaged that she had eloped with one who would understand her grief."

"Good!" sighed Lord Quorn into the livid silence.

"What's that you say?" snapped the Duke.

"I was merely thanking my God, sir, that I die at last convinced of the truth of what I have always suspected—that nothing in this world means anything at all."

"Except, of course, dogs and horses," said Mr. Woodhouse Adams. And that will do well enough for the end of the tale of the hand and the flower.

AS FOR our hero and his darling, there are, naturally, no words to describe the happiness they had in each other. It was not long, however, before the young writer ceased to be a writer, for there was no money in it; but with what his young wife made by selling the story of her elopement for to make a musical-comedy they opened a night club in Golden Square called Delight Is My Middle Name and lived happily ever after, the whilom Princess Baba making a great name for herself as a dancer, for she was all legs and no hips and her step was as light as her laughter and her laughter was as light as the breath of Eros.

In conclusion, may he who is still young enough and silly enough to have told this tale be some day found worthy to be vouchsafed that which will make him, too, live happily ever after in peace and good will with his heart, his lady and his fellows; and may the like good fortune also befall such youths and maidens as, turning aside for a moment from the realities of life, shall have read this story.

I call mine Harpo because he never speaks, and in half a day he has been more distracting than a dozen puppies. The trouble is that Harpo doesn't seem to know whether he's a land or a water turtle. And how can I tell?

Quite obviously his is a split personality. When I first found him down by the barn it was my notion that here was a restful companion. Upon this broad back I thought to rest a spirit battered by the stern gay life of the great city. Philosophy and turtles—that was to be my life from this time onward.

Now it turns out that Harpo is a complete bust as a sedative. Since there is no peace in his soul, I can't find contentment by watching him. The trouble with Harpo and his split personality lies in the fact that just as long as he happens to be on land he feels sure he's a water turtle. But put him in water and on that very instant he'll put for the shore.

His distress when out of his proper element is so great that I feel obliged to stand by and help him out. He lives in a large tub, and in the middle of it I have planted a rock, one edge of which slopes down gently to the water. Here, by every theory, Harpo should be content and find it easy to live his dual life of land and water. But this turtle is not smart like Bozo, the one I had last week. Always he tries to approach the rock wrong end to. And this steep palisade he can't quite make. A complete failure would be less pitiful, but I'm not sufficiently hard-hearted to sit by idly and watch the poor turtle stuck half way up the Matterhorn. At this altitude Harpo invariably gets into a position upon the rock, from which he can go neither higher nor lower. His feet flap in the air most piteously, and if it were possible for him to growl, or meow, or whimper, he would cut loose in protest.

IT isn't fair that he should be penalized for pantomime. His dumb show is most effective and might well be copied by other members of the animal kingdom. Why can't hens indicate that they've laid an egg by gestures rather than that ugly cackling? And a cow might summon the milkers not with moos but through coy glances. And so when Harpo gets in a jam, and shows me that by violent muscular effort, I always go to the rescue and pick him up.

I don't like to do that very much, because he might be a snapping turtle, and so I take him up stealthily and as far as possible from the end with which he bites. If he is a snapping turtle he could nip off a finger and take it under the shelter of his shell, whence you could never get it back. Of course, there's no justice in branding him as a snapping turtle until he actually snaps. There is a law, isn't there, that every dog is allowed one bite? This works out well enough, because he usually takes it on a stranger—one of the tradesmen as likely as not. But this turtle comes into such slight contact with the passing throng that if he bites anyone it will be me. Under such circumstances I feel that one bite is by far too liberal an allowance.

At any rate, the vicious circle still continues, for once in the water he finds that he does not like it and swims rapidly for the one wholly inaccessible landing

Harpo just doesn't seem to be adjusted to life, and that's a peculiarly tragic condition for amphibians. After all, a rebel mammal has only one environment with which to be dissatisfied, but if the life force designed you for land and water, and you happen to hate them both, why then, young fellow, my lad, you're certainly out of luck.

The Good Book speaks of a time when "the voice of the turtle was heard in the land." Harpo may have done his share of talking back in that time. His present silence could be self-imposed. He holds his peace because there is nothing more to talk about. He has said it all.

THE fact that he's so unhappy is disappointing to me, because I've always felt that the turtle was potentially nature's most ingenious device for combining home life and adventure. A turtle in a poker game, for instance, does not have to say: "I'm done with George's deal." And he does not have to sit and listen to a lot of silly talk about how hard it's raining and the difficulties which he'll find in getting transportation at that hour. He merely says, "Good night," and pulls in his head.

Moreover, after spending a reasonable time at home, in order to hold the franchise, he can stick his head out again and rejoin the game for the last 10 hours.

I knew a man once who lived somewhat after the manner of turtles. He was adventurous and moved constantly from one country to another all over the world. And yet he loved home life. Accordingly, it was his system, wherever he went, to start a little home for himself. And he was an excellent husband and father and brought happiness with him wherever he went until the authorities in one of the civilized countries arrested him and sent him to jail for bigamy.

LITTLE MEXICAN GIRLS WIN BIBLE CONTEST IN OKLAHOMA

ENID, Oklahoma.

TWO pretty bobbed-haired Mexican flappers, witty, quick and alert to all that is going on, retained a championship at the Oklahoma Christian Endeavor union convention which they have held since it was created in Mexico two years ago — a Bible verse-finding contest championship.

These two Mexican high school pupils, radiant in the flower of girlhood, spent 10 days traveling from Toluca, 50 miles southwest of Mexico City, to Enid. The delay was occasioned by shopping tours for Paris creations and other gowns in Texas metropolises.

Gracia Samano and Rita Garcia, 15-year-old senoritas, came to Enid under the supervision of James H. Wray, social service worker connected with the Presbyterian Church of Toluca, where he has been stationed since 1921.

These two visitors from the south immediately fell in love with Oklahoma. They undoubtedly would have fallen in love with any state or community in the United States which they had the opportunity to visit. All was new to them save bobbed hair, pretty gowns with abbreviated skirts, and rolled hose. At these styles the senoritas appeared as proficient as their sisters to the north.

"You have your hair bobbed," Wray, acting as interpreter, was asked to say to the girls.

"Oh, yes; why not? We are nearer Paris than New York, you see," they replied in Spanish.

The Bible verse-finding contest was won at a national church meeting in their native land of Mexico by Gracia and Rita. Then Oklahoma challenged the girls to defend the title. They did, and won the contest with ease, Wray reading the title and verse number in Spanish to them as another read in English to the Oklahoma contestants.

The Mexican senoritas easily were the sensation of the convention. Gracia, with a mass of jet black hair rolling in a natural marcel that one hair dresser declared any American woman would give a fortune to own, was the smaller of the two—her black eyes fairly snapped. Rita, too, with coal-black hair and olive complexion, much resembles the Indian maidens of Oklahoma.

Girls from throughout Oklahoma met the little visitors and all the girls endeavored to entertain them so royally that the senoritas were joyously promising to go home and tell their friends what fine people the Americans are.

The girls are just average girls, Wray said. Their parents are average citizens of Toluca. They are in high school there, equivalent to the ninth grade in this country.

For the first time in their lives they saw cherries and ate them from trees. "Pretty, bright and red, and, oh, so delicious," they chimed in Spanish.

The hot weather was the only thing that bothered the girls in Oklahoma. They came from an altitude of 9000 feet and visited Oklahoma when the mercury was registering from 90 to 100 degrees daily.

"I'm not any better at raising horses than anyone else," she insisted. This was two days after Crusader had won the Belmont Stakes for $48,500 at Belmont Park.

"The real reason I'm heard of at all is Man o' War. Anything that I do know about horses I learned from my father, Major Daingerfield, who was a fine breeder. The big thought about taking care of horses is to love them, to care about them. You've got to like to see them grow and grow up well and get along fine.

"I think there is something in the soil and climate of Kentucky that makes fine horses. There's lime in the soil and in the things they eat. It's good for their bones. And a horse growing up in Kentucky, going through the winters we have, grows up into a hardy filly or colt.

"Then your horses must be watched. Very carefully. Every horse is an individual and every horse has got to be treated as an individual. Some are greedy. They want to eat too much, and they can't be allowed to do that. And some of them haven't appetite enough. They've got to be made to eat more than they want. Some have this thing the matter with them, and some have that thing wrong with them. Each horse is a separate study in himself.

"Now, one of the easiest ways to ruin a good race horse is to treat it cruelly. You must be gentle with them, never frighten them or scare them when they're young, or they'll never get over it. They've got to be handled kindly.

"I wouldn't have a white man on any of my farms. I don't have anything but Negroes. I don't know, but the colored men just seem to take to horses and know what's best for them. And the horses like colored men and seem to know they like horses. Now, take Morvich. He doesn't want anyone but a colored man around him. He won't have anything to do with a white man. The other day a white man came out to photograph him and, trying to get him to pose the way he wanted him to, walked up to him and tried to get him to turn his way. And Morvich stuck his head under the arm of the colored man who takes care of him. He just didn't want to see that white man at all.

"I don't have anything to do with horses after they leave for the tracks. Not unless they come back again. But I'm going to race two of my horses this year; they're in training now. I think the greatest asset for a race horse is courage. Of course, he's got to have speed, and he's got to have endurance. But courage is the main thing.

"But breeding horses. Well, you just can't tell anyone how to breed horses. It's just about impossible to tell how to do it. There are blood lines, conventional breeding theories—mating horses of good blood and good ancestry together—all those things. And then sometimes the older brothers and sisters of two horses will be disappointments and the next one will be a winner. You've just got to feel that certain horses will breed good horses.

"Talking about Kentucky being a good place to raise them: A little while ago I read where they've discovered a race track here that they think was built by some people who came here before the Indians. I guess we were always a sporting people."

tumbled over the back wall and escaped. They were joined in their stampede for the hills by Charlie Bowdre, George Coe and Hendry Brown, who ran from the McSween store at the same time.

The Kid was the last to leave. He hitched his belt a little tighter, pulled his hat down more firmly on his head. He looked with sharp scrutiny at his two six-shooters, one in either hand. He cocked them. He shot a glance through the open door into the ruddy splendor. His quick eye calculated the positions of the five men lying motionless, all dead except Salazar, shamming death. He determined his course among them; he must be careful not to trip over a corpse. Between him and the back wall of the yard was a space of 30 feet. Across it, death would be snapping at his heels at every step. But if he had to die, he would die fighting.

There was ominous silence off at the side along the adobe wall. His lurking unseen foes were waiting for him, their rifles ready, their fingers on the trigger. All about him was the devouring sibilance of the fire. Flames were bursting through the walls and ceiling of the room, darting, twisting, crawling like brilliant serpents greedily alive. He braced himself for the start. Half the roof crashed in behind him. Smoke and a myriad fiery sparks leaped after him as he darted out the door, his guns blazing.

A yell of triumph went up from his enemies. This was the man they wanted. "Here comes the Kid!" They rose behind the wall. They threw their rifles to a level on the flying figure. "Get him, boys!" "Kill him!" A salvo of 20 guns welcomed him into that crimson square of death.

The Kid's trigger fingers worked with machine-gun rapidity. Fire poured from the muzzles of his forty-fours in continuous streaks. Bob Beckwith, slayer of McSween, fell dead across the wall, his rifle clattering on the ground, head and arms dangling downward limply. John McKinney of Las Cruces was struck in the mouth, the bullet carrying away half the gallantly up-turned moustache of the handsome youth. Another ball cut a deep notch in Old Man Pierce's ear, whispering the nearness of death. One man killed, two branded for life—this was the Kid's score as he hurtled toward the sheltering darkness, never for an instant hesitating, never slackening his pellmell speed.

Pumping their Winchesters, churning shots from their double-action revolvers, his foes fired more than 50 shots at him as he rushed across the space of 30 feet. Bullets sang about his ears, ripped shreds from his blue flannel shirt, bored holes through his white steeple sombrero, enveloped him in an invisible frame of hissing lead. Every bullet was aimed at his heart and every one was winged with deadly hatred. But not a bullet touched his body. On he ran like a darting elusive shadow, as if under mystic protection. He cleared the back wall at a leap. He bounded out of the flare of the conflagration. Darkness swallowed him at a gulp. Splashing across the Bonito, he gained the safety of the hills.

The Outline of the Arts — By H. G. WELL

XI.—Modern Painting, Sculpture and Architecture.

The Nineteenth Century Opened in a Phase of Architectural Dullness. The Romantic Movement in Literature Brought With It a Shifting of Attention to the Middle Ages. France and Germany, However, Showed Some Initiative. Domestic Architecture Degenerated More Than Public.

WE HAVE been writing of the nineteenth century because that is a convenient existing term to use, but it will be plain to the reader by this time that the period of this chapter is not really from 1800 to 1900, but from 1815 to 1914. Between these dates there was no great catastrophe, no great breaking point. The changes that went on were very considerable indeed, but they were not sudden, nor were they in any sense reversals of the general process.

The story of European painting in the opening half of the nineteenth century reflected the social changes of the time. It was a time in which the middle class, the serious commercial type, was increasing very rapidly in wealth and importance; it was a time of enriched manufacturers and new financial successes.

Presently came the railways, steamships, overseas trade in staples, and the large speculative fortunes that arose directly and indirectly out of these things. The restored European courts were tinged by a disposition to propitiate and associate with this new wealth. The typical patron of painting and architecture became the successful manufacturer. He was trying to assimilate himself to the gentlefolk. He desired rather pictures made for gentlemen than disturbing power of disconcerting beauty. He desired pictures before which he could eat his dinner in comfort and satisfaction, and he was prepared to pay liberally for them.

THE versatile and wonderful Spaniard, Goya (1746-1826), the great English landscape painters, Constable (1776-1837) and Turner (1775-1851), David and Ingres, of whom we have spoken as expressing the spirit of the French Empire, passed and left no equals. But the painting of pictures became a very considerable profession. The British Royal Academy, the French Salon, held annual exhibitions of pictures painted to please, and artists bought large distinguished houses and lived lives of respectable luxury. In England many were even knighted. Sculpture followed in the same direction. The appreciation of pictures, if it ceased to be very intense, became very wide. For large sections of the English public an annual pilgrimage to London "to see the Academy" became almost obligatory.

But as the century passed on beyond its middle years, the same tendency to unrest that had disturbed the religious and social routines of Europe appeared in the world of art. In England Ruskin (1819-1900) and William Morris (1834-1896) criticised the academic inanities of art and contemporary decoration with a disturbing effectiveness.

There were schisms in the profession of painting; there appeared new schools, and notably the pre-Raphaelites, who sought for precedents and methods in the work of those earlier days before painting became elegant. Under the approval of Ruskin and Morris they turned their eyes back to the Middle Ages and painted Arthurian heroes and blessed damosels. Others, still more rebellious spirits, turned their eyes toward the world about them. Corot (1798-1875) had maintained his vigor of vision throughout this period of dullness, and after the disaster of 1870-71 France saw a great resumption of the precedents of Rembrandt and Velasquez in the work of the masters—Degas, Manet and Renoir.

WITH them must be named the great American, Whistler (1834-1903). People tired, almost unconsciously, of the polite picture and a style of domestic architecture came into vogue which tolerated no surrender of wall space to the framed oil painting. As the period closed the output of easel pictures was undergoing a sensible decline and the unstanchable supply of art students was being directed with increasing success to the more modest and desirable pursuit of decorative arts.

In the closing years of the nineteenth century there were many signs to show that a maximum of exact representativeness in art had passed. Representation of flowers and figures vanished from carpet and curtain and dress materials; representation became a secondary and subdued quality in painting and sculpture.

We have already noted a previous period of realistic rendering in the time of Aknaton in Egypt and another during the Greco-Roman period, and we have remarked how rapidly this latter phase passed into the stiffness, flatness and symbolism of Byzantine and Gothic work and the formal and geometrical methods of Moslem decoration. Still earlier the vivid impressionism of the later Paleolithic period had been followed by the formalism of the early Neolithic art.

Now again in the first and second decades of the twentieth century we find art turning away, as if glutted, from reality, disregarding outer form for the traces of motion, becoming once more analytical and symbolical. This drift seems likely to continue. It is also helped now by the increasing efficiency of photography for merely circumstantial precision. The world wearies of undigested fact.

THE century opened in a phase of architectural dullness. The classical tradition, aided by the rule of classical pedants in the schools, had gradually dominated and checked the free development of the Renaissance style and most new buildings betrayed their regret for an age gone by 2000 years before. Colonnades were numerous.

Then, with the Romantic revival in literature, upon which we will presently enlarge, and with the collapse of Napoleon's attempt to revive Imperial Rome, came a shifting of the attention of this most imitative period to the Middle Ages. There was a Gothic revival, which was particularly powerful in Britain, and produced among many other remarkable exploits the present houses of Parliament: Then the period of Queen Anne, which had been distinguished by a special development of the still living Renaissance modes, was invoked.

Architects in Britain would build you a hall or a house in the classic, Gothic, Scotch, baronial or Queen Anne style; the one style that did not appear anywhere was the nineteenth century style.

THE Englishmen went about in trousers and top-hats and dingy colored clothes, severely modern and sober, but their houses and public buildings were dressed in the dispirited fashions of the past, as if for some cheerless and unpopular fancy dress ball.

In France and Germany there was much more architectural initiative; the Renaissance style still lived and developed in France. Such interesting problems in architecture, however, as were afforded by railway stations, railway bridges, warehouses, factories, and so forth, were never seriously attempted anywhere—with the possible exception of Germany. An inefficient ugliness was the rule for such buildings.

Portrait of the Artist, by the Flemish master, Rembrandt.

It was as if the rush of new needs, new materials and new opportunities had overwhelmed the architectural courage of the age.

ONE of the oldest, most typical products of this phase of dismay is the London Tower Bridge, in which a light and powerful fabric of steelwork is plastered over with suggestions of Flemish stonemasonry and memories of a medieval drawbridge. But all the public buildings of nineteenth

It took the death of a beautiful dancer to prove this beauty secre

Only Clear Soap Cleanses Pores to Their Very Roots and Brings Clear Skin

A great stage—a receptive audience—a daring young dancer, her body painted brilliantly in many colors—and then her sudden collapse at the height of her performance.

This is the dramatic case stage history reveals—and every woman can profit by its lesson.

For the dancer died simply because her pores were so completely clogged by paint that functions of the entire body were impaired.

Certainly beauty, and health itself depend largely on keeping pores cleansed.

Yet very few toilet soaps do this. They are too coarse, too grainy. They merely clog pores, enlarge them, and blemishes follow.

But Jap Rose cleanses pores to their very roots!

You know that merely to look at it; so pure you can see through it. And, of course, since the ingredients are so pure they dissolve perfectly in water. No wonder they can enter the tiniest pores, cleanse them and pass on without clogging.

Jap Rose is truly the clear soap for a clear skin. And women who know the truth about pore cleanliness use it constantly. Why not you?

She painted her body to attain fame—and paid a dreadful price for it. For clogged pores speedily caused her death

Be Thankful If Your Skin Tingles

After you first use Jap Rose you will probably experience a tingling sensation of your skin. That is evidence that pores that were never really clean before are at last clean, that your skin is on the way to improvement, that you have said good-bye to blackheads and blemishes.

Even nice people are lazy—

It's no disgrace. In fact, it's usually only human nature.

Particularly, we're lazy when it comes to the little things of life.

Maybe a broken shoe-string that we neglect to replace for days and simply tie together. Or a button that should have been sewed on weeks ago. Or even that visit to the dentist's which is so much more important than most folks realize.

Many of these little personal neglects may be forgivable but not so when they touch some small important thing.

Take tooth brushing for example—this most important job is often neglected bv many of us.

Realizing the truth of this, we set out deliberately to formulate a dentifrice that would furnish the easiest, quickest way to clean teeth. In fact, a tooth paste suitable even for lazy people—and in tooth brushing, at least, the word lazy, includes practically all of us.

Listerine Tooth Paste is really very easy to use. It works fast. Just a minimum of brushing and your teeth feel clean — and actually are clean.

You have the job done almost before you know it.

This is on account of the way Listerine Tooth Paste is made! It contains a remarkable new cleansing ingredient—entirely harmless to enamel✱—plus the antiseptic essential oils that have made Listerine famous.

How fine your mouth feels after this kind of a brushing! And then besides you know your teeth are really clean—and therefore safe from decay. Lambert Pharmacal Co., Saint Louis, U. S. A

P. S.—By the way, Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents for the large tube.

✱This specially prepared cleansing medium (according to tests based upon the scale of hardness scientists employ in studying mineral substances) is much softer than tooth enamel. Therefore, it cannot scratch or injure the enamel.

At the same time it is harder than the tartar which accumulates and starts pyorrhea and tooth decay.

Mild and mellow flavor, deep-down enjoyment have made Camel the most celebrated name in the history of smoking.

So this Independence Day, as you watch our country's defenders march by in inspiring parade. As roaring cannon and the glare of rockets flash out another anniversary of freedom—know then the finest, deepest goodness that ever came from a cigarette. Raise the flame of a match and taste the utmost in smoking enjoyment.

Have a Camel!

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know and enjoy Camel quality, is that you may try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.
